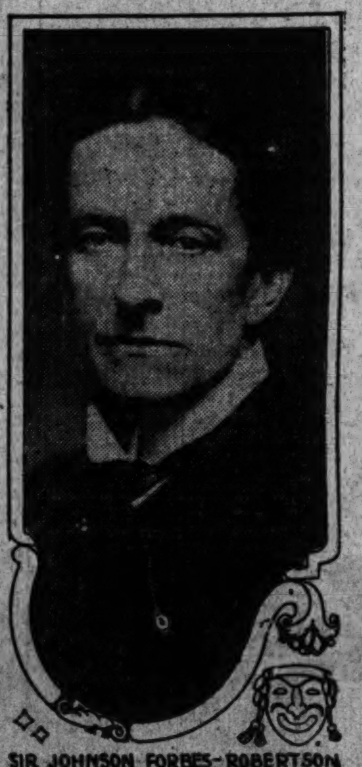
“America the Drama's Greatest Field,” Says Forbes-Robertson, Famous English Actor-Knight

Sir Johnston, Who Is Making a Really Truly Farewell Professional Visit to Us, Believes Our Golden Age Is Yet to Come—Asserts the Theater Is Better Off Today, Both in Its Players and Its Audiences, Than Ever Before.

By ALLEYNE IRELAND,
A Special Correspondent of the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.

IT is the English custom—which the thoughtful will trace to a wise expediency, the thoughtless to foolish snobbery—to bestow a title of honor upon those who reflect credit on their native country by high achievement in the arts or sciences.



SIR JOHNSON FORBES-ROBERTSON

Where such titles have been conferred during the past 20 years upon English actors the choice made by the British Cabinet Ministers who advise the crown in such mattrs, has never failed to receive the unofficial approval of American theater audiences. To a generation which has enjoyed the plays of Sir James Barrie and Sir Arthur Pinero and the operas of Sir Arthur Sullivan and Sir William Gilbert, which has been delighted by the acting of Sir Henry Irving, Sir Charles Wyndham, Sir John Hare and Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, the recent knighting of Johnston Forbes-Robertson will appear as a fiting recognition of the great talents of an old friend.

It is unnecessary to dwell here upon the admirable qualities of Sir Johnston. The general verdict, as well in Europe, where his career as an actor began 40 years ago, as in the United States, where he has been known for a quarter of a century, is that to nature's generous endowment of a grace o[illegible] and distinguished appearance, of a beautiful [illegible] and a rare intelligence, he has added all that can be obtained by study, observation, training, hard work, a steadfast devotion to the highest ideals of his calling.

Unlike some of our European visitors, whose interest in things American does not extend beyond the homely but more or less honest face of the Yankee dollar, Sir Johnson feels, and takes every proper occasion to express, a liking for the country, and admiration for its people, and a sincere gratitude to his American audiences for that practical appreciation for his work, to use his own phrase, which has enabled him to retire from the stage while his powers are still unimpaired and when he may reasonably hope to spend some happy years renewing acquaintance with his first love among the arts—painting.

Optimistic View of Stage.

IN the course of a recent conversation with Forbes-Robertson—the Knight will forgive me, I am sure, if I drop the title in favor of the name by which he will always be known and honored amongst us—I drew attention to the prevailing pessimism in regard to the stage in America and asked him how the theatrical situation looked from the viewpoint of a man who first faced an American audience as a member of Mary Anderson's company, back in the eighties.

“I have no doubt whatever,” he replied, without a moment's hesitation, “that the theatrical situation in America is incomparably better from every point of view than it was in the old days.

“Anyone who can look back to the old-style theaters, the old-style scenery, the old-style actors, leaving on one side a few brilliant exceptions like Edwin Booth, Clara Morris and Joseph Jefferson, and compare them with what he sees today must be astonished at the progress that has been made.

“Indeed, it is in the very nature of things that there should have been great improvement. This country is the land of hope, of energy of courage, of persistence, of enthusiasm, of success. As the country has grown the people have grown more prosperous, and with prosperity have come education and culture and a general lifting of the standards of taste in every direction. Theatrical performances which would have passed muster or even have received high praire 20 years ago in New York would not be tolerated today.”

“You do not agree, then,” I asked, “with the view which is so commonly expressed that there has been a serious decline in the public taste during the past few decades?”

“By no means,” replied Sir Johnston. “It is [illegible]e that there are in New York, as there are in great cities all over the world, some places of [illegible] amusement where the entertainment is coarse, [illegible]pid or vicious; but this is due to other causes [illegible]n a decline in public taste.

[illegible]he Development of Taste.

IT seem[illegible]o me that what has taken place is th[illegible] There has been a great increase in th[illegible] support given to good productions [illegible]erious drama and high comedy and a con[illegible]rable portion of this increase has come through [illegible] development of better tastes amongst those form[illegible] content to see indifferent performances of indifferent plays. In just the same way the theater habit has grown up amongst a large number of people who formerly never thought of going to a play of comic opera, but who were content to spend their evenings in barrooms or at the street corners.

“These new recruits cannot be expected to begin at the top in the matter of discriminating tastes, but they are slowly moving up, so that there is really a constant progress, first from the streets to poor shows, then from poor to indifferent shows to good shows, then from good shows to excellent shows.

“One of the marked advantages of this gradual upward movement is that so far as the producers and the actors are concerned the keenest rivalry and competition is at the top, which means that in a general way the best work will receive the highest reward.

“Speaking of good work, I may say that nothing strikes an English actor with so much astonishment as the fact that here in America some of your universities have courses of instruction in dramatic literature which not only includes the writing of plays apart from the study of plays already written, but also practical training for an actor's career. Such a thing is absolutely unknown in England.”

“Would you say something,” I suggested, “about America as a field for the dramatic writer?”

Sir Johnston rose from his seat and stood facing me for a moment with his arms folded over his breast, and then, with a wave of his hands sweeping the continent from San Francisco to Bangor, and with a smile, humorous, reminiscent, prophetic, he said:

“Where has anyone ever had a greater field? You have here all the motives from which drama has sprung, all the world-old motives of love, hate, ambition, rivalry, heroism, degradation, and upon a wider stage and in more complex action that ever filled the imagination of the older dramatists. If you have not yet given the world a supreme genius as an expression of your country's vigor and romance, you may watch the coming years with confident hope. There was a time when England had had no Shakspeare, when France had had no Moliere, when Germany had had no Goethe.

England and America Compared.

“BOTH for the actor and for the dramatist America is full of opportunity. I would be the most ungrateful of men if I said anything which could be construed as a reflection upon England. It was there that I received my training. It was there that I enjoyed my first success. It was there that during many years I played to audiences whose appreciation and loyalty afforded me some of the happiest moments of my life. These things I can never forget; but I should be false to my conviction about America if I did not say that over here the road of ambition which the playwright and the actor tread together is cleared of many of the difficulties with which it is beset in England.

“There is over here an enthusiasm and helpfulness in regard to the good in any direction which cannot be found in the same degree in the narrower field and in the more rigid conditions of English life. If I may employ a figure of speech, I would say that the struggle for success in each country may be represented by a pyramid; that in England one too often reaches the top only by treading down those underneath, whilst in America you are thrust upward by quick, generous recognition and are welcomed by those who are already on the higher steps.”

“What would you consider to be the most striking change which has taken place in the world of dramatic art,” I inquired, “during the 40 years of your career as an actor?”

“Oh, without doubt, the greatest change is that which has occurred in the character of the plays which win popularity. When I first went on the stage none of the modern plays had any success unless they centered almost entirely around love or adventure. What the public wanted was action; and this demand proved the entertainment alone was the accepted province of the theater.

A Real Farewell to Stage.

“YOU need only to visit a half a dozen theaters at random in London or in New York to be satisfied that today the mission of serious drama is regarded in a very different light. The fact is not only that the gen-

By ROY L. McCARDELL.
A Post-Dispatch writer who has just returned from a trip to Panama.

TODAY, this present pleasant October Sunday morning, there is water, muddy water, rising against the barrier of rotten stone and crumbling dirt that is the heart-breaking Cucuracha slide.

When President Wilson, in the White House executive offices, touched a telegraph key last Friday and transmitted an electric spark 4000 miles to blow up the Gamboa dike, the rising of the waters began.

The great Culebra cut was finished and Goethals had said, “It is well,” and then the earth trembled and 47 acres of dirt slipped off the mountain and into the cut. This was the last, the worst and greatest of all the slides.

“Let her stay!” said Goethals, “we'll turn in the water and dredge her out!”

On Sept. 17, last, all dry digging in the bed of the canal had ceased. Nine days later at the Gatun locks, 12 miles from the Atlantic, they let the gate valves open and wedded the waters. Last Friday they blew up Gatun dike and let in the water wholesale. Today, now, this minute, the waters of the dammed Chagres River has reached this one barrier, the Cucuracha slide—across the man-hewn valley between the hills, and the waters will seep through and the dredges will bite in, and in a few weeks the water will go on to the Pacific.

Two weeks ago I sat with Col. Goethals at his house, the house on the edge of the chasm he had cut near by the peaks of Darien, where, in an older day. Balboa had beheld the great Pacific. Col. Goethals had just come in from the morning inspection of the work and we looked down in the great, dry valley, with the barrier of the Cucuracha slide flung loosely across it at the center. Col. Goethals, chief engineer of the Panama Canal, sighed. It wasn't for the Cucuracha slide that he sighed. “I'll sluff that out of there in short order,” he said—but he missed the tracks. the trains that filled and backed and bore away burdens of the steam shovels that for all these weary, scorching years have eaten at the mountains of Culebra.

His Head Is Apple-Shaped.

HOW does Col. Goethals look? Well, he is a tall, energetic, ruddy-faced man of 55 active years. Before his close cropped hair was gray it was yellow, and his stubby mustache is partly yellow yet. His head is apple shaped, as the mathematical man's head generally is. Years of listening to the complaints of the peevish and the excuses of the inefficient and being interviewed by fly-by-night visiting writers has given him a sense of humor, pleasing and pliable. He looked at the slide across the cut and sighed because, as he said, the steam shovels were gone and the tracks were out. But it may be he sighed because I asked him those questions everybody else asked him:

1. Why wasn't a sea level canal dug?
2. Was it because the tide rose 10 feet higher on the Pacific side than on the Atlantic?
3. Would a ship the size of the Imperator go through the canal locks?

His answers, for the thousandth time, were:

1. It would have cost too much in time and money.
2. No, the canal is 50 miles long. Ten feet makes 120 inches. A hundred and twenty inches of water stretched across 50 miles means a fall or rise of two and two-fifths inches to the mile. This wouldn't make a current.
3. Yes, the Imperator would float through the canal and all its locks. The locks are 1200 feet long, the Imperator isn't 1000 feet long.

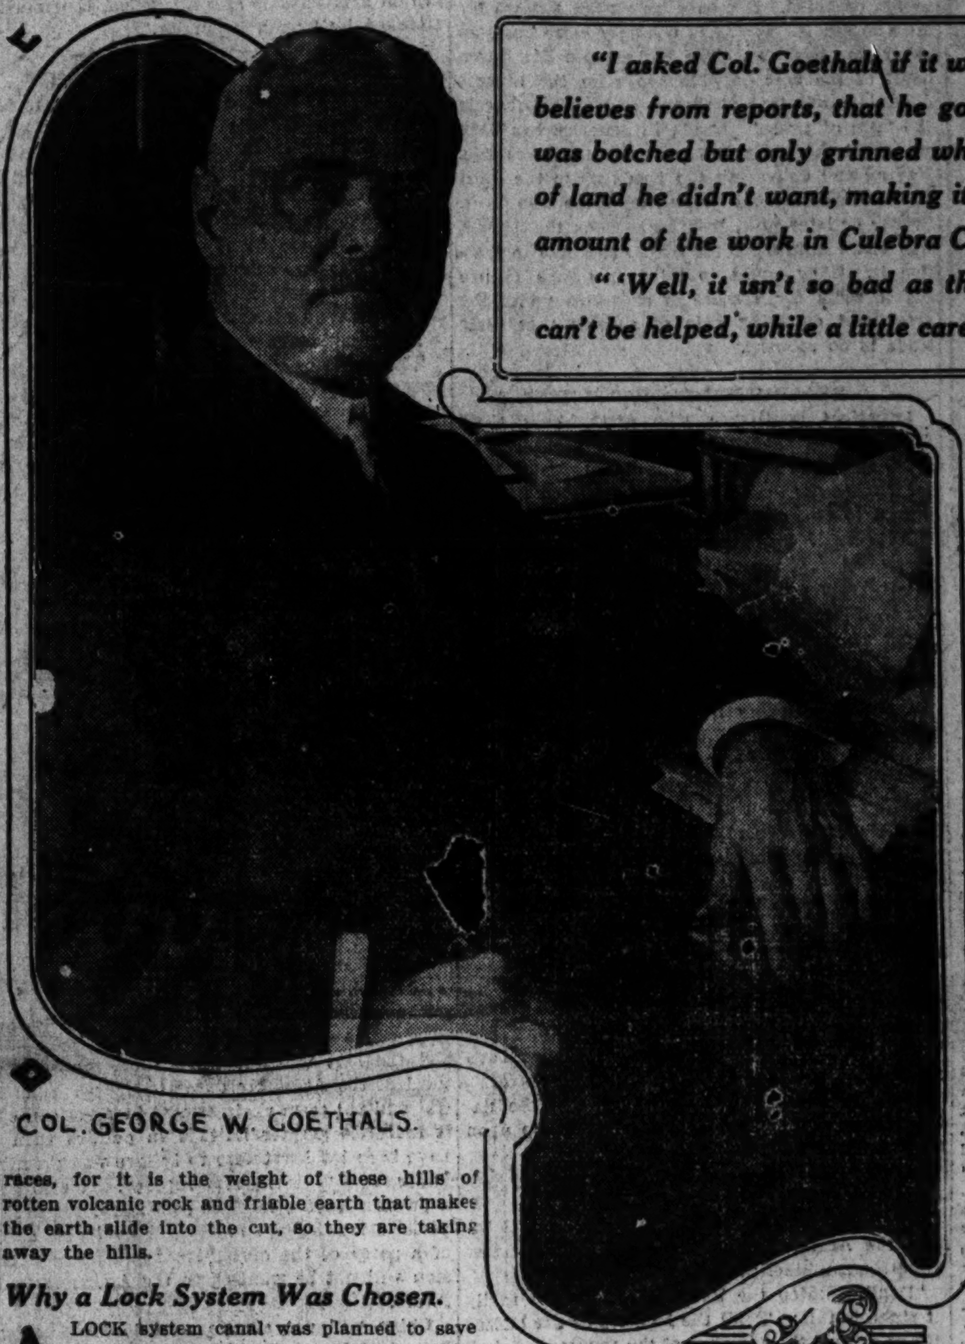
And then Col. Goethals sighed again, because, he said, the steam shovels and the tracks and the dirt trains were out of the cut.

Upon the hills steam shovels were working and hydraulic mining was going on. They were washing and chewing away the hill tops in terraces, for it is the weight of these hills of rotten volcanic rock and friable earth that makes the earth slide into the cut, so they are taking away the hills.



COL. GEORGE W. GOETHALS.

Why a Lock System Was Chosen.

A LOCK system canal was planned to save digging the canal 80 feet deeper than at present through some nine miles or more of its length. It was figured a lock system canal would cost somewhere over $300,000,000 and a sea level canal twice as much.

They didn't know the earth would slide, as the sand slides back in the crease you furrow through an ant hill when they talked sea level canal. They know how it can't be done, could never have been done.

The rotten hills would have laughed at any effort to crease them deeper. It is nip and tuck to have and to hold the cutting of Culebra for a lock system—and 80 feet deeper—

Now, here on the canal, about built and finished, Col. George Washington Goethals sits and sighs for more Culebra cuts to conquer. This is the day of the Democratic despot:

He is up at 6 in the morning and has a bath and breakfast.

By 8 he is “on the job” in every sense, in his automobile locomotive.

He is the cutter of continents in twain. He is the arbiter of destinies. He is boss!

But here comes a dirt train and he sidetracks his inspection car till it has passed.

He has never held up a spoonful of dirt a second.

“Get it up, get it out, get it off!” says Goethals.

At noon he is back from seeing the job from one end to the other and he has a shower—for the tropic sun boils a man in his perspiration—has his luncheon, and receives visitors who ask questions, wise and otherwise, and meets his engineers and listens to complaints and exercises high and low jurisdiction, promulgates edicts and banishes offenders or shirkers until 5 p. m. All these functions being exercised at the big administration building a hundred yards from his home, overlooking the great red wound he has cut across the backbone of the isthmus.

After his dinner, his day's work is done, and Col. George Washington hasn't a thing to do until tomorrow—except to go to his office and work till midnight, until morning light sometimes, doing, planning, unmolested, undisturbed, except by the engineers he sends for and the men who MUST SEE HIM ABOUT THE JOB.

Anybody Can See the “Colonel.”

BE this man the humblest, he can see the “Colonel” at any time if his word is of importance and concerns the job.

This is every night. The canal, the Panama Canal, with its flights of locks, its lake that man made from the chasm across the Culebra, was all dug at night by the apple-headed man who inspired the faith that moved mountains.

Sunday is Col. George Washington Goethal's day of rest. He has not a thing to do except to listen to the complaints of the ladies, take a run out over the job, look over some blue prints and mayhap try to finish where he left off at midnight.

Yes, Col. Geothals listens to the complaints of the women folk of the zone. A Major's wife wants to know why it is Mrs. So-and-So has one of the houses at Ancon, while she has to stay at Culebra, where positively there is no social relaxation? A dredger engineer's wife waits, anxious to tell the Colonel that “Tom will never drink another drop on the job, so help him God! if the Colonel will give him another chance. She has been to Col. Siebert and she has been to Secretary Bishop, but they say that this is the third time Tom got drunk and rioted against the little Spiggoty police in Panama—and God knows, Colonel, a better tempered man than Tom, when the drink ain't in him, and a better dredger—Tom was with you at Mussel Shoals on the Tennessee, Colonel”——

And Tom gets another chance and the next woman comes with plea or plaint.

They have a song on the isthmus:

If you do not like your snack,
Tell the Colonel!
If you want to be sent back,
Tell the Colonel!

If the heat it doesn't please,
If you don't like the cheese,
If your dog has got the fleas,
Tell the Colonel!

And the Colonel has time to listen in the afternoons of week days and on Sunday mornings, but the Colonel works every night when the man with the grouch and the woman with a grievance are sound asleep. He listened to all I said, and answered all I asked with that patience that passeth understanding. But they told me on the job that he has a temper and loses it at any manifestation of shirking, shuffling, inefficiency and lack of interest.

“Losing the Earth's Picked Men.”

THE tracks were all out of the cut, all dry digging in the prism of the canal had ceased, the locks were well toward completion, the water was coming in—the big job was coming to an end and the Colonel sighed.

“I'm losing the picked men of the earth,” he said quietly.

“That is the hard part. We'll have dredges in, and I'll put a vacuum siphon into the cut, when the water fills it and slush away the hill tops—the hydraulic lines I have up there haven't power enough, haven't pressure, haven't enough

head—but I'll put in a wa

SUCCESS AND "NEW FREEDOM."

Business under the new tariff and the natural system to which it belongs assures increasing success for itself through the simple rule of decreasing shelf-room and increasing movement.

This is not a theory. It is a condensation from history. Since the first "trust" tariff bill of the McKinley administration, business has been forced more and more to seek success through "holding back on the market," seeking larger returns in money from a controlled output and a warehoused, shelved or exported surplus. Where the money movement has been increased by increased currency supply and increased activity in dealing in it, it has not been accompanied by an equal movement in goods—in the necessaries and comforts of life. Those whose business it is to distribute goods of all kinds have been forced by political restrictions imposed on the general market to study carefully the need of restriction and to learn in self-defense how to "hold back" on the market.

The new rule of self-defense is to push the market, to move the goods, to give the largest possible worth in goods for the largest possible profits on them. It means increasing success for all who use it. It means not only more business but better business. The highest possible movement of the best possible goods for the highest possible profit to both buyer and seller—that is the "life of trade." Trade in America has been given all the room it now needs for more life. Moving and delivering the goods up to the limit of the market means success for those who do it. Sooner or later now, holding back on the market will mean failure for those who continue to practice it. They ought to fail. One such failure makes room for a score of successes under the great and enduring rule of success that "fair trade is no robbery."

PEACE WITH PREPAREDNESS.

Impatient gentlemen who grieve over their fears that President Wilson is for peace at any price may find consolation in his reported plan for a three-battleship program, soon to be submitted to Congress.

It is evident the President, while willing to go great lengths to preserve international amity, entertains no illusions concerning the state of the world at large.

ALABAMA'S OPPORTUNITY.

Congressmen Hobson, Clayton and Underwood are rival candidates for election to the United States Senate from Alabama.

Hobson specializes in race prejudice (hating the Japanese, our neighbors and friends across the Pacific, is his chief occupation), and hunts the Demon Rum in all that monster's manifestations, as a political side line. He is one of the ornaments of the chautauqua circuit, but has made a very small dent in Congress.

Clayton has served long and respectably in the House, but has never greatly impressed the country with his ability.

Underwood has, in the making of the new tariff law, exhibited masterly ability and fine loyalty to his party's pledges and the nation's needs.

Alabama has an opportunity to win the nation's praise by conferring the senatorship upon her wisest statesman.

BANKERS UNDULY EXCITED.

Defending the administration currency bill before the American Bankers' Association, former Congressman MacRae said:

"Don't sidestep the issue. The question really at stake is this: 'Shall the bankers of the United States control the currency of the country, or shall the Government control it?' "

From hundreds of voices (so runs the dispatch), there came a reply: "We should! We should!"

On that issue the bankers are foredoomed to defeat.

Just as the railroad owners were before them, when they, too, revolted in spirit against Government control of the public service they supplied for profit.

The bankers are unduly excited. The world is not yet at an end. Let them cool down a bit and see what happens. And let them bear in mind that the whole is still greater than any one of its parts.

THE PAN-AMERICAN PARIS.

New Orleans makes known to sister cities an ambition to become the "capital of the Pan-American world." In a late banquet speech John Barrett, director of the Pan-American Union, gave the representatives of its commercial and other interests great encouragement in seeking this status. New Orleans holds that its aspiration is justified by its founding under Latin-American auspices, its proportion of residents speaking Latin-American tongues—"greater than that of any city in the New Union except New York"—and especially its geographical location. It pictures to itself the New Orleans of the future as the gay Paris of the two continents and asserts that if the leaders of its thought and action form a definite conception of the kind of city that would be adequate to the honor and then devote all effort to making New Orleans just that sort of a city, the distinction will be easily attained.

The ambition is laudable. Whether realized or not it shows appreciation of the Mississippi Valley of coming years joined to Latin-America by Col. Goethals' great work. The valley is the place for the Paris of Pan-America. Wherever located there, it cannot monopolize all the beneficent activities of the closer-linked continents.

A CONTINENT VS. ONE MAN.

"All South America believes we stole Panama," says Prof. G. H. Blakeslee of Worcester, Mass., historian and traveler. The present trip of an eminent American is accordingly most opportune and may have other results than an addition to the stuffed specimens of the Smithsonian Institution. If all South America really holds this opinion, it may not be possible for the eminent American to refute it in the short space of three months. On the other hand, in a contest between a continent and one man, it is just possible that the continent might make such impress on the man as to enable him to see a foolish and vainglorious boast as others see it.

After contact with a continental belief, that the doctrine enunciated by Monroe has been discredited by Roosevelt, bragging about how "I took it" might seem as tiresome and as much in poor taste as it seems to the rest of us.

THE BURNING OF THE VOLTURNO.

Lessons teaching how greater safety at sea may be provided will result from the Volturno's loss, as from the Titanic's loss. Indeed, precautions enjoined by the earlier catastrophe proved of marked efficacy in preserving many lives in the later one. Storage batteries enabled the Volturno's wireless heroes to keep at work after power from the engines had stopped. No reluctant California lingered unresponsive within easy distance of the imperiled ship. At the call a mighty fleet assembled from many pathways in the storm to assist in the rescue.

The experience of the survivors of the 1913 disaster included every element of horror in the 1912 disaster, with fire added. The greater proportion of passengers and crew saved is a note of cheer. The problem of launching boats from vessels in rough weather is, however, shown to be still unsolved. Surer methods of preventing fire on shipboard is also a problem that must be attacked by human ingenuity.

WIRE VS. ROPE FOR MURDERERS.

Nebraska and Tennessee are the latest to abolish the gallows and substitute execution by the electric current. In all, 14 states now inflict death on criminals by the wire instead of the rope. The change, of course, is not a concession satisfactory in any respect to those who oppose capital punishment on principle. It does mark, however, a step in the reaction from the barbarity of the old executions. We have progressed some since the days of slow strangling in a noose as a public spectacle.

The territory in which the death penalty is formally abolished by law has not increased much in recent years. The frequency of its infliction, however, has been largely decreased by a greater and greater reluctance on the part of juries to return verdicts carrying the capital penalty and by new laws lessening the number of crimes for which it is the inevitable penalty.

The full argument against capital punishment has never been better stated than by the Marquis of Beccania, the Italian whose writings had such a profound influence on the criminal jurisprudence of all civilized countries. "To me," he said, in one utterance 150 years ago, "it seems an absurdity that laws which are the expression of the public will, which abhor and which punish homicide should themselves commit one; that to deter citizens from private assassination they should themselves order public manslaughter."

The bicentennial of Beccania's birth comes in 1935. The area in which the barbarity is abolished in explicit terms of law, instead of being virtually abolished by administration of the law, as in most of Missouri, should be largely augmented by that time.

CHINA'S START AS REAL REPUBLIC.

The orderly conduct of the first election of a President under China's republican constitution and the fact that for two ballots more than a third of the Assembly dared to oppose Yuan Shi Kai will not seem unsignificant in American eyes. It indicates greater latitude in politics than we have been led heretofore to believe was permitted under Yuan's strong-arm regency. It also gives a promise that a resolute contingent prepared to perform for the new republic the valuable service of a party of the opposition in resisting aggression will not be wanting in the Assembly in the future.

China will not always need in its presidency a man of Yuan's ambitious, crafty, willful type. But pending the time when the loss, if any, incurred by the republican idea in the utter collapse of Dr. Sun Yat Sen's uprising in the south is more fully explained to us, it must be conceded that Yuan seems to be the sort of man it needs now. The unprogressive, unintelligent, inert millions of the country have many lessons to learn. It may be shown in coming days that many of them have not even learned that primary lesson of absolute acquiescence in the decision of majorities, the vital principle of republics. Only a strong man could succeed against the enormous difficulties of the transition period between autocracy and democracy.

The test of Yuan's devotion to popular sovereignty will be watched interestedly by the sisterhood of republics into which, after tedious preliminaries, the oldest nation and newest republic is at last adopted.

THE "COXEY'S ARMY" OF ULSTER.

London's scare over Carson's army of 11,000 drilled men and his Ulster general staff is attacked with ridicule by John Redmond. The army is a gigantic absurdity, he tells his audiences, a humbug that makes the sea serpent pale into insignificance.

Washington, too, had a scare over an "army" once. It rendezvoused at different points in the West, and its several divisions were merged into a single mighty column as it proceeded east over mountain highways and railroad rights of way.

Washington had a veritable case of nerves as reports trickled in as to rapid increase in the number of the invaders and the sinister purpose of their leaders. Old residents recalled the anxious days of Antietam and Gettysburg. The garrison at Fort Meyer was strengthened and additional marines were sent to the navy yard. Armed guards were stationed at the Treasury and at other departments. The police force with hundreds of special men sworn in kept awake all night on April 30. Then on the morning of May 1, 300 emaciated, ragged, unshaven, hungry inefficients marched in through the hills onto Washington's paved streets. Their only depredation was to walk on the grass of the Capitol lawn, contrary to the ordinance in such case made and provided, for which divers suffered due arrest.

Probably an anti-climax equally ludicrous will succeed the alarm over Carson's army.

PREVENTING SCARLET FEVER.

From the New York Times.

Every mother and father of young children will hear with something more than interest the statement made by Dr. J. B. Murphy of Chicago that he brings back from Europe the news that scarlet fever can be freed of contagiousness. So high is Dr. Murphy's rank among physicians that his announcement will be accepted throughout the medical profession as one made after sufficient investigation to warrant confidence little less than certainty that he is not mistaken.

The spreading of the disease is what Dr. Murphy says can be stopped, and by the very simplest expedient of daily inunctions with oil of eucalyptus. This is a well know germicide of the milder sort, and would hardly be expected to be efficient for the purpose, but the question is one of fact, not of expectation. If it meets the pragmatic test—if it work, that is—scarlet fever ought soon to be conquered, not by cure, but by prevention, which is vastly better.

CANADA AS A DEBTOR NATION.

From the Philadelphia Record.

It is curious to note that in an advertisement offering for sale $1,000,000 Province of Ontario 4 per cent bonds at 93.5 emphasis is laid upon the fact that this, "owing to market conditions," is "the lowest price they have ever been offered" at. Until recently these securities sold above par, but so excessive have been Canada's borrowings in England, and so limited is the home demand for bonds, that they are now seeking a market in this country. It is doubtful if in the history of the world any country with so small a population as Canada's ever borrowed so much money. It literally runs into the billions. At last a check is being placed upon the golden streams from England. The effect is embarrassing to development in the Dominion, but it is a healthy sign. Canada has been growing altogether too rapidly, and a rest of a year or two will be a good thing for her in the end.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

ANDREW JACKSON'S PIRATE.

W. G. H.—Lafitte was the founder of Galveston, Tex., and when the Government captured that place in 1820 he sailed away with a well-loaded treasure ship and no one ever heard of him thereafter. Lafitte was a Frenchman, and was well known in the extreme South for a dozen years during the first part of the last century. He first attracted attention when he and his brother Pierre opened a blacksmith shop in New Orleans. This was more or less of a blind, for neither of them looked the part of the blacksmith. They prospered, however, for they got several negroes to do the hard work of the business, while they lolled about and connived bigger enterprises. It was not long, however, until Jean's real occupation became known. He was a pirate who would frequently sally forth under cover into the Gulf of Mexico, and return in no ways empty handed. The authorities began to look upon him with suspicion, but fortunately for him the war with England broke out and he turned his good resources to valuable account with advantage to the United States. History is slightly contradictory regarding the two brothers, for some say that it was Pierre Lafitte who sailed into the unknown, and that Jean ended his days in luxury in Yucatan, but most of them are sure that it was Jean who disappeared so mysteriously. At any rate, historians agree that the brothers made their vast wealth by slave smuggling; or to be more explicit, by a slave trade between Africa and America. During the first 10 years of the last century Louisiana was a vast territory of rich, unsettled land, to which the pioneer hastened to find his Eldorado. Thousands of slaves were needed to work these plantations, and the Lafitte brothers were just clever enough to know how to get them and make a vast profit. It was possible to purchase a negro in Africa for $90, and he could easily be disposed of to the Louisiana planter for $1000 on the New Orleans market. By the time the United States became fully cognizant of the illegal practice and made laws to prevent it, Jean and Pierre Lafitte had accumulated a vast fortune for those days. But the Lafittes were not to be thwarted by any laws, so realizing that it would be unsafe for them to export slaves, they hit upon a new idea. It would be economy for them to seize the Spanish slaveships off the Cuban coast and take the slaves, thereby getting them without cost. Jean did not go himself after such practical work, for he was a "business man," but instead he gathered about him 1000 men, whom he had in his employ, and with sufficient money to purchase several ships, he stayed home, acting the gentleman, while this small army of employes worked out the seizures he had planned. To successfully carry on the work he had a fortified town and harbor of his own at Barataria, and it was here he made his headquarters. He was a man of a peculiar temperament. He held himself aloof from all his men and rarely spoke to them. The pirates disliked him to the extent that behind his back they called him "the old man," but to his face he was "Bosse," a word which literally meant "prominence," and it was the origin of the English word "boss." The Government finally became cognizant of the business Jean Lafitte was conducting, but here again he was clever, for by bribes he managed for a long time to keep out of the hands of the law. When the British, in 1812, undertook the capture of New Orleans, they offered Jean Lafitte a large sum of money for his assistance and that of his men; but instead of accepting he turned around and informed the United States of the British plan, and offered them his service. Andrew Jackson accepted his offer and the pirate fought bravely for America, and the British, in revenge, destroyed his Barataria plantation and seized his ships. The United States, in appreciation of his assistance, pardoned him for all the crimes he had committed, and when the war was over he went back again to his old pursuits, settling on the land now occupied by the city of Galveston. Finally he became so audacious that the Government was compelled to capture his camp, but Lafitte escaped, and nothing was ever heard of him afterwards, but several of his followers were hanged.

Shape with a biscuit cutter first dipped in flour. Place closely together in buttered steamer, put over kettle of boiling water, cover closely and let steam 14 minutes. If steamer is not at hand, perforate a tin pie plate. Somebody says: The best dumplings ever made have nothing in them but salt, flour and boiling water. Stir the quantity desired with a spoon or knife, adding boiling water until just soft enough to drop off into dumplings. Boil 15 minutes. Digestible pie crust: Physicians have pronounced this crust perfectly digestible: One cup flour, half saltspoon salt, 1 rounding teaspoon baking powder, half tablespoon butter, half tablespoon lard. President Wilson's Great Triumph in the New Tariff

THE enactment of the tariff bill has been hailed by many papers, both here and in Europe, as signalizing a rare personal triumph for President Wilson, in whom they recognize a great new leader and statesman. This personal note occupies almost as much space in editorial comments upon the measure as criticisms of the tariff law itself.

"Marks an Epoch."

London Chronicle: The President has fought for and won a policy of genuine fiscal reform It marks an epoch in the economic and political history of the United States. The nation, boldly asserting its mastery over the unclean interests that were nearly throttling it, has made an irreparable breach in the monstrous tariff wall which they had reared. For President Wilson the passage of the new tariff is a great personal triumph. No more remarkable man has reigned in the White House since Abraham Lincoln.

"Has Their Complete Trust."

London Daily Mail: The highest honors for this achievement must be awarded, as we have said, to Mr. Wilson. In the past five months he has proved himself a President who really leads. He has kept in the closest touch with Congress and the daily business of legislation, consulting freely, advising freely, and employing in all his negotiations with the leaders in the two houses a directness and initiative more common in a British Prime Minister than an Amercan President. At the same time he has established a remarkable hold over the imagination and affections of the people at large. He has their complete trust, and he has justified it by writing on the statute book a better tariff act than they ever expected to see passed.

"Extraordinary Personal Triumph."

Daily Graphic, London: The most striking fact about the new American tariff is the extraordinary personal triumph it constitutes for President Wilson. Not an experienced politician—he was a university professor, unfamiliar with the wiles of Washington—yet he succeeded where was his own single-mindedness of pur- Roosevelt and Taft failed. The secret of his suc- pose.

"Highly Successful."

Boston Herald: President Wilson has thus far shown himself highly successful in guiding his team of horses, and they are none too easy to manage. He has driven them just about where he has wanted them to go. The responsibility is his own. It now remains for the country to decide how well it likes the direction in which he has turned our revenue legislation.

The "Iowa Idea."

New York Globe: President Wilson's extraordinary power of expression was revealed again in his remarks at the White House after the signing of the tariff bill. Disregarding all the usual justifications he gave in a few words the best defense of the new measure—namely, it seeks to take out of the tariff laws provisions that tended toward the creation of domestic monopolies. What 10 years ago was called the "Iowa idea" and was pushed by the progressive Republicans thus becomes the declared policy of the nation.

"A Practical Artist."

New York Evening Post: President Wilson stands to profit by whatever political prestige is to be won from the enactment of the new tariff, just as he will have to shoulder the chief responsibility if it proves unsuccessful in operation or unpopular with the country. This follows not alone because he is at the head, of the administration, but because he has made this tariff act peculiarly his own. Its two bold features—free sugar and free wool—were written into the bill on his demand. That he was able to induce the majority in both houses to assent to his views, is striking testimony to his skill as a political manager. He emerges from the long struggle with his repute and authority unquestionably heightened before the whole country. And the significant thing is the quietness of his methods. He has resorted to no threats or bluster. The work which he set himself he went about with none of the noisy displays that would have been the mark of a raw imitator, but with the poise and sureness of a practical artist.

"A Memorable Monument."

Boston Traveller: A theory has given way to a condition which stands, first of all, as a memorable monument to Woodrow Wilson's leadership as a politician. In driving Democrats into line he has not hesitated to use patronage in the manner of the very practical politician, and he has added to the reputation, achieved by him as Governor, of knowing how to play the political game when he has to play it. There have been months of preparations for the change. Everybody knew that it was coming in some form not unlike that which is represented by the Wilson bill. Now the President may turn his attention to other methods of demonstrating that he is a remarkable political boss and constructive leader. His best and nearest opportunity is found in the currency reform measure.

Kept Its Promise.

Detroit Times: More than for any other reason, the people of the United States, we believe, are to be congratulated upon the fact that the new tariff bill amounts to a party's campaign promise kept. Whether it be as good a bill as its makers claim for it, or as bad a bill and as hopeless a measure as our "Uncle Joe" Cannon and its other enemies claim it is, the fact remains that it is exactly the bill the Democratic party pledged itself to give the people in presenting Woodrow Wilson for the presidency. The bill is therefore, rich in assurance of at least one thing and that one thing, that the power of the people in this day is supreme and the will of the people at last the Government force.

"Wholesome Reduction."

London Times: The Underwood act is not in intention or effect a step toward free trade. What its framers aimed at and what they accomplished is a wide and wholesome reduction of that insensate protectionism which led Chamberlain to describe the American tariff as a monstrosity he would never think of urging Great Britain to accept.

"A Great Triumph."

New York World: Whatever anybody may think about downward revision of the tariff, no man can deny that the Underwood-Simmons act embodies the promises that the Democratic party made to the country in the campaign of 1912. This is no tariff by log-rolling, by manipulation, by intrigue, by lobbying, by bribery. It was bought by no campaign contributions. It was dictated by no conspiracy between corrupt business and corrupt politics. It is a tariff made in the open by men who took the country into their confidence and did their work in the sight of everybody. It is a tariff that is exactly what it pretends to be and it is the tariff that was promised at the polls. It is a great triumph for Mr. Wilson, for Mr. Clark, for Mr. Underwood, for Mr. Simmons and the other Democratic leaders. It is a great triumph for the Democratic party. But chiefly it is a great triumph for the principles of responsible representative government The American people should never forget that their institutions as they exist will always serve the full need of the Nation if they will but employ those institutions. There is never reason to despair.

What the People Demanded.

Detroit News: Tariff revision has been demanded so long, the people are so thoroughly convinced that it will clear the way for other economic advances, that opposition would be worse than futile. And by that same token, the people are taking the actual revision very quietly. They demanded that it be made; the Democrat party pledged itself to make it; the administration has redeemed that pledge; and, as Secretary Bryan says, "The country has adjusted itself to the tariff before the bill is even passed."

Sarcastic.

Philadelphia Inquirer: Let us get ready for the grand hurrah. We are all going to be very happy hereafter, you know. Cheap living is upon us. If it is to be believed, all our troubles concerning the high price of food are over. So let us go to market with lightness of heart and buy eggs at half the usual cost, butter so cheap that no one hereafter will ever think of turning to oleomargarine, prime cuts of beef at prices within the reach of everyone, while chickens will become the customary diet of the poor. Wonderful, wonderful bill! For with the prices of food going down hill with the most of living in every direction reduced everybody is going to get more wages. Why the employes of manufacturing industries will never lack for employment. Such splendid prosperity is upon us that the mills will not be able to keep up with their orders. That is what is going to happen to the country. Or—is it just a Woodrow Wilson dream?

"Bigger Market Basket."

Milwaukee Daily News: Things look bright for that bigger market basket in which everyone is interested. At least the administration has let it take precedence over the other features of the measure. The way is paved for a reduced cost of living. The buyer and seller will have to say the final words.

A Republican View.

Philadelphia Evening Star: There is a somewhat general feeling that the people made a mistake last November. This is shown by the greatly increased Republican vote wherever elections have been held recently, and by the almost total eclipse of the Progressive party. That general feeling will, in all probability, soon be confirmed in a most disagreeable fashion. When the new law goes into effect, when the income tax feature becomes operative and the people of the United States, for the first time in its history outside of war times, are found to be divided into classes; when the earning capacity of the workers is reduced and the cost of living remains stationary; when there is less work to do because foreign-made goods are brought over here to be sold in the place of the output of our own factories—there will be time to reflect upon the promises made by the Democrats which led the people to forsake their former judgment which brought them the highest measure of prosperity, in order to run after false gods.

"In the Same Position."

Washington Post: With the tariff bill passed, we are in the same position that we were before, with the exception that a considerable portion of the profits of manufacturing will be transferred to Europe, with a consequent curtailment of production, and hence a curtailment of employment and wages in the United States.

In Doubt.

New Orleans Picayune: Usually the enactment of a new tariff law has been speedily fatal to its framers, whether Republicans or Democrats, but we will have to wait for the next congressional election, in November, 1914, to determine whether the framers, aiders and abettors of the Underwood law, are to meet the common fate or to prove more fortunate than their predecessors. The measure, as a whole, provide for a lowering of tariff taxes on practically the full list of dutiable articles and the free list receives some notable additions, such as wool and sugar. The reductions have in no sense been uniform, however, and the law will have to be in operation for some time before its benefits and its damages to the industries of the country can be accurately gauged.

"A Big Half Year's Work."

Milwaukee Journal: For the first time in 50 years the interests of the people have triumphed in the enactment of a tariff measure. Party pledges have been observed, the tariff has been removed or substantially lowered on many articles of common necessity, most of all a beginning has been made of showing the falsity of the claim that high tariffs have been protecting American labor. The fundamental of the tariff question has probably been settled for all time. It is a big half year's work.

"Dignity, Sincerity and Unity."

Courier-Journal: The manner in which the work was done should be a matter of pride not only to every Democrat, but also to every good citizen of the United States. Dignity, sincerity and unity of purpose and action distinguished the Democrats in their effort to solve the leading American problem. While there is reason to give the highest credit to Oscar Underwood and to President Wilson, both of them tireless workers, able tacticians, sincere citizens laboring for the common good, it must be borne in mind that the Congress which passed the bill disappointed the hopes of the Republican partisans who confidently predicted "wild horses" as the obstacle to any plans that the leaders might make. The fiction that the Democrats were merely a party of protest made up of men seeking office and seeking to make capital of discontent is forever dissipated by the spectacle of the manner in which the law has been made.

"The President's Leadership."

Atlanta Constitution: The passage of tariff legislation was admittedly the first acid test of the Wilson administration and of the constructive ability of Democratic statesmanship. Both have measured up admirably. The schisms and the desertions so confidently predicted by the Republicans have failed to materialize. The apostasy anticipated by the nonpartisan pessimists has been conspicuous by its absence. The force and the coherence of the President's leadership have been adequately proven. The Democratic party has survived the first drastic test in a manner that gives promise of its ability to negotiate whatever hazards lie in the future.

"Wisdom of the People."

Buffalo Times: It is a triumphal epoch in American history, a magnificent victory of Democratic principles and of the popular rights which are identical with them, and a grand confirmation of the wisdom of the people when they elected Woodrow Wilson President and placed the monumental task of tariff legislation in the hands of a Democratic Congress.

"Nothing to Complain Of."

Philadelphia Telegraph: The Democrats have had nothing whatever to complain of in the attitude of the country toward their work. They have proceeded on their own theories, rejecting the advice of those who have had long practical experience. No Democratic tariff bill was ever passed with less apprehension on the part of the people. Though there has been abundant warning of the probable effects of the new policy upon the industrial interests of the country, there has been no suggestion of a panic.

The Coming of Mrs. Pankhurst

THE humorists as well as the more serious editorial writers of the American press have seized upon the coming arrival of Mrs. Pankhurst in this country to utter jest and warning. The newspaper comments emphasize the marked difference between the methods which have won some success for suffrage in America and those that made Mrs. Pankhurst notorious in England.

"Not In Sympathy"

Evening Wisconsin: The Pennsylvania organization of women in favor of equal suffrage took thoroughly representative action in voting to ignore Mrs. Pankhurst when she visits that state. The women of America are not in sympathy with Mrs. Pankhurst's anarchistic utterances and methods, believing them to be wrong and also injurious to the cause. Why should they take any formal measure that would seem to countenance one who has done much to retard the coming of votes for women?

"Highest Chautauqua Percentage."

New York World: If at the great Madison Square Garden meeting, as a beginning, Mrs. Pankhurst's terms are a guarantee of $1500, with 10 per cent of the receipts up to $10,000 and 60 per cent above that sum, yet the laborer will be worthy of her hire, her speech will be informing and elevating, she may need the money, and shall her cause in any case be found wanting in th practical business training which will be needed to guide the affairs of nations in the hour of its victory? Certain brave men of England are boldly declaring that they will never submit to petticoat government. But they are in a minority and may have to submit. And when that time comes, shall England be caught without a woman qualified by concrete example and the highest Chautauqua percentage standards to assume the position of Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs?

"She's Coming."

Denver Times: Put the matches on the to shelf! Emmeline will be here soon!

"Like Structural Iron Workers."

Detroit Free Press: Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst has at least made a clean breast of it and confessed her real object in coming to America. At first it was to assist suffrage in this country, later it was to fight the white slave evil, but now—and finally, we are confident—it is to get money. "The women's movement is an international one," says Daughter Christobel, the official press agent. "Consequently anything contributed by Americans to help win the women suffrage campaign in England will help the cause throughout the world." And Christobel is right. Only unfortunately Mrs. Emmeline doesn't represent the cause of suffrage in Great Britain or in any other place. She misrepresents it. As the suffragists in Pennsylvania and elsewhere seem to understand very well, by contributing to the Pankhurst funds the women of America will be contributing to a fund for the commission of crime. Morally, the support of the suffragette propaganda as it stands today is on a par with support of the dynamiting schemes of the structural iron workers.

"Not Necessary."

Washington Times: Conceding everything that may be said in defense of suffrage militancy in Great Britain, it is not apparent how Mrs. Pankhurst's incursion into this country is going to help the American suffrage cause. Militancy in some form of other—riots, demonstrations, violence of language and act—has very generally marked the progress of campaigns for extension of the suffrage in England; campaigns for its extension to men in the past, as well as to women in the present. That may be construed by some as a justification of present English suffrage methods. But in the United States there has been concession to the demand for universal suffrage among men without such demonstrations. No one of the thirteen colonies granted universal manhood suffrage in the beginnings. The progress by which that ideal was generally realiz was not marked by the violent methods emp in Britain by men in the past and by some wom in the present. If it was necessary for Britis men to smash windows and burn houses and k livestock in order to get the ballot, perhaps is necessary for British women to do the sa things. But it has not been necessary for Am can men to do these things in order to get ballot. The testimony of 10 states lined up the enfranchisement of women tells us that it not necessary for American women to do th things.

Great Success of Parcel Post

THE first official report on the par post shows the great success of new system, which may make Postoffice a money-maker for the Gove ment. Within the first six months of current year the receipts from fourth-cl matter approximated $14,000,000, wh was an advance of nearly $1,500,000 the receipts from the same source du the corresponding period of 1912.

"Seems Premature."

Pittsburg Dispatch: A New York man is r ported to have hanged himself because the parc post had depreciated the value of his expre company stock. It seems premature, to say th least.

"May Be a Surplus."

Washington Herald: While the Postmaster-General is not prepared to predict a surplus for his department at the conclusion of the fisc year, some of the officials believe that a surp will result, pinning their faith upon what is be accomplished by the parcel post. It seems t the general opinion of the department that feature will more than pay its way. Of course all this is more ore less guesswork, and we must await the official reports before we can felicitate ourselves upon the results, but it is gratifying to learn that what was more or less an experiment is giving so good an account of itself. It was feared that it would cause small merchants to suffer for the benefit of the big ones, but the former also are finding it a very convenient means of delivery, and it is rapidly becoming one of the most popular public utility institutions.

"May Well Be Pleased."

Philadelphia Inquirer: It is better that there should be a small surplus, and the financial conditions which the Postmaster-General has disclosed are certainly gratifying, but the true policy is to apply the departmental profits to t improvement of the service, and such, it may assumed, is the course that will be pursued. the meanwhile those who struggled against opposition and amid much discouragement t the parcel post started may well be pleased with the situation and the prospect. Th sisted that the public needed and would the projected service. They argued that safely and advantageously be provided. T fication of these contentions is complete.

"Business Nervous System."

Detroit News: Every innovation for provement of the postoffice as a publ has been bitterly opposed. Sir Rowland father of postal reform, was denounced tiferous crank when he began his campai penny postage in Great Britain in 1837 and su stituted a flat rate of a penny or 2 cents for hal ounce letters delivered anywhere in the Unite Kingdom. Postal officials proved by figures that the rate would be ruinous because the higher rates, charged in proportion to the distance, were proving a losing business. Sir Rowland Hill also introduced the adhesive stamp. He forced his proposal to a trial in 1840, and since that time reform after reform has been forced and utility after utility added until the postoffice has b come one of the most important departmen every government and the nervous sys which the business world receives its impu and transmits its intelligence to the utt ends of the earth.

!TALY'S BUDDING KING GIVES TUTOR THE SLIP

Nine-Year-Old Prince Humbert Drops His Books at Close of Day, Steals to the Seashore, Takes a Boat and Has a Grand Time Rowing, Unmindful of His Teacher's Fright.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

ROME, Oct. 11.—Little Prince Humbert, heir to the Italian throne and better known by his official title as Prince of Piedmont, completed his ninth year Sept. 16. Rome as well as other cities were profusely beflagged and the usual telegrams of congratulation were showered on the royal household. In common life Prince Humbert would be called "a lad of promise." If his character develops on present lines he certainly will be one of the most striking personalities among European sovereigns.

The little Prince has a tremendous idea of the duties of kingship, yet he inherits all his father's democratic qualities. He is the despair of his tutor, who is often embarrassed or alarmed through the lad's boyish pranks.

A few days before his birthday the royal family was staying at the palace of San Rossore on the Mediterranean close to Pisa. One day the Prince was missing. The average boy kicks off the trammels of supervision as soon as school is over, the boy born to sit on a throne has every moment of his time parcelled out with rigid precision, and that the little Prince resents.

The day's lessons over, he slipped away to a point on the seashore where rowboats were at the disposal of visitors who want to admire the beauties of the coast from a little distance. The day was perfect, the sensation of freedom was delicious and the boatman, an old salt accustomed to take lads out for a pull, got his fare in advance and headed out to sea.

Meanwhile the tutor was in a pitiable plight. The lad was missing and should the tutor be summoned to the King's cabinet on business connected with his charge his position in the royal household would be in jeopardy. He strolled oward the shore, and after two hours' anxious suspense he noticed a boat approaching. The little lad pulling in the boat was Italy's future King. Perspiration streaming from his face, the ad was in the full enjoyment of the healthy xercise.

"See here, Cecchie" (his tutor's name in short), id the Prince, "I've had a grand time, and you hall not suffer if there is any fuss."

Handing the boatman an extra coin, he jumped hore and was inside the palace gates in time his evening meal.

He Intercedes for the Tutor.

The boy was as good as his word, and Signor Ceccani remains as tutor in ordinary to the Prince.

Prince Humbert received not long ago a letter from a Florentine child who claimed to be of the same age, but an orphan and starving and was promptly rewarded with a bank note for $10. he story getting out, a multitude of children rote to the Prince stating their various sad ses with many a juvenile wail. Immensely eased at having become so important a personge, the Prince sent off notes with reckless disgard for his own purse, which was soon empty. hen his parents had to loosen their purse strings. he begging letters continued to pour in until ey had to be kept from the little Prince, who uld not understand why such "rich people" as King and Queen should refuse to help the or.

Sixty-seven members of the stag family, mainly amois, were accounted for by King Emmanual's un at the first day of his annual deer stalking xhibition in the mountains near Cuneo in northrn Italy. It was grand sport—or slaughter—and all the members of the party, chiefly the King, were in the best of spirits at the close of the day. From 1 a. m. that morning the army of beaters, 300 strong, had been scouring the mountain fastnesses known to be full of game. Monte Colombo, overhanging the royal hunting box at San Giacomo, where the King was staying, is the highest point for miles around and though part of the ascent was made by automobile, the stiffest part of the journey had to be accomplished with the aid of donkeys.

Members of the King's Hunting Party.

Astride a sturdy little mule specially trained for mountain work, the King kept in the fore front, followed by the little Princesses and Prince Humbert, who was allowed to handle a gun for the first time and who gave a good account of himself by bringing down two chamois during the day.

Other members of the party included Princess Natalie of Montenegro, Count and Countess Della Trinita, the Duke and the Duchess (Nita Allen) of Lante, Gen. Brusati, Grand Master of Ceremonies and Dr. Quirico, who always attends these expeditions in case of accident.

Perabroc, the center of the operations, was reached at 6 a. m., and after an open-air breakfast, the game, driven by the beaters, began to make its appearance here and there a timid chamois, appearing for a moment, leaped out of sight, but, as the beaters closed in, the game became so abundant that soon the whole area within gunshot was dotted with fallen chamois.

There was one person in the party to whom the spectacle seemed to give little satisfaction, Princess Mafalda, the King's second daughter, who will be 11 years old next month, is an enthusiastic lover of animals, and looks upon every member of the brute creation, from donkey to kangaroo, as a pet. To tame a wild animal and bring it into subjection through kindness appeals to her more than any other form of amusement. Unlike her elder sister, Princess Yolanda, she is rather backward for her age and is still "in the nursery," but her tenderness for the animal world is as well developed as any adult.

Princess Mafalda struggled constantly with her emotions over the dead game though she could not explain the instinct which led her to condemn any form of sport that takes pleasure in killing.

Prince Humbert on the other hand was delighted with his prowess and declared that deer stalking "is the finest sport going."

As a result of the day's hunt, venison was the staple food for some days in many poor homes around the King's hunting box and charity benefited by the extra supply of chamois skin, which finds ready sale.

OUS SPANISH DANCER IS COMING TO ENTERTAIN US

MADRID, Oct. 11.—La Argentina, "Queen of Castanets," as she is called, one of the most famous Spanish dancers of the day, if not the most celebrated, will soon electrify New York as she recently electrified St. Petersburg and Moscow.

Although not strictly beautiful, she embodies in her person all the grace and abandon which characterises Spanish women, dances marvelously and was the rage in Madrid last winter. She does not twist herself about in strange attitudes like a serpent, nor does she attempt to portray Grieg's dances or others of a like nature—no tango nor bunny hugs nor Apache dances. ntina confines herself to the purely nish dances, which are seldom seen [illegible] Store.

CZAR GLAD TO LET MOTHER LIVE IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—The Dowager Czarina of Russia, Queen Alexandra's sister, has already announced her intention of setting up a permanent establishment of her own in England, and for that purpose extensive alterations will be made at Sandringham and a new wing added to give the two widowed sisters plenty of room to dwell together under one roof and yet maintain separate households.

The Czar is said to view with complacency his mother's plans to stay away from Russia, as she is always interfering in affairs of state and dictating to her son and daughter-in-law about their domestic arrangements. But the Dowager Czarina's nephew, King George, does not view his aunt's continued presence in England with the same complacency because she generally makes trouble between King George and Queen Mary with Queen Alexandra, persuading Alexandra that she must assert herself and demand more influence at her son's court.

King George has seen to it that the Dowager Czarina shall be kept some distance from London in fixing upon her English home.

One excellent quality in the Dowager is her devotion to her grandchildren. The Czar's two sons by his unofficial union with a famous beauty of the St. Petersburg ballet, born before his marriage to Princess Alice of Hesse, were adopted by the Dowager Czarina and have been carefully educated under her direct supervision. They have taken a course at the military preparatory school in St. Petersburg and will soon be given commands in the army.

It is due to the wishes of the Dowager Czarina that her second son, Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, has taken an English residence for his morganatic wife and children. The Czar has never issued a decree banishing h brother on account of Michael's marriage [illegible] wife of Capt. Scheremetiefsky, which was contracted in 1910. But Michael naturally finds it more comfortable away from St. Petersburg. He prefers the Riviera to England, but deferred to his mother's wishes. He has a baby son in whom the grandmother is much interested and she wants to be near her son on the baby's account.

Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch is King George's cousin, but there is little probability that he will be seen at Buckingham Palace or Windsor Castle to any great extent. He is the most democratic young man among any of the royalties and he loathes the fuss and ceremony court life, even when [illegible] on such a [illegible] scale as in England. He is devoted to his wife and baby and wants to live quietly in the country and enjoy his home. He is not robust and has to take great care of his health, going in for all kinds of gymnastic exercises. He had several American teachers of athletics in St. Petersburg.

AMERICAN WOMAN IS ENVIED BY ALL LONDON

Former Leonie Jerome of New York Gets All Tickets She Wants to Prince Arthur's Wedding Next Wednesday.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Mrs. Jack Leslie, a daughter of Leonard Jerome of New York and a sister of Lady Randolph Churchill, is the most envied woman in London today. She has just been entertaining the Duke of Connaught at her husband's Irish seat, Glass Lough, County Monaghan, and the Duke has made a point of sending to Mrs. Leslie's friends invitations to the wedding next Wednesday of Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife in the Chapel Royal, St. James.

The Duchesses and Marchionesses are vainly pleading for an extra ticket or two for members of their exalted families and American millionaire "climbers" are offering fabulous sums through confidential channels to court officials to be included in that select gathering of 250, but without success.

Mrs. Leslie has all the tickets she wants. The Duke of Connaught, in explanation, says that Col. Leslie is his most intimate friend.

The chapel royal at St. James Palace is too small for even the most restricted gathering of official and diplomatic London for the royal wedding, and so the Connaughts and the Princess Royal are being allowed by the King and Queen to make the wedding gathering largely of personal friends. All the officers of the bridegroom's regiments, the Seventh Hussars and the Scots Grays, have been invited—quite a little gathering alone.

Mrs. Leslie will take her new American daughter-in-law, Mrs. Shane Leslie, formerly Miss Ide of New York. She was presented to the Duke of Connaught in Ireland and was greatly admired by him.

Mrs. Leslie was for some years lady-in-waiting to the Duchess of Connaught and Col. Leslie on the Duke's staff. Col. Leslie's father will be 91 years old in December, and his mother, still alive, is almost as old.

CZAR'S LITTLE SON TAKES ANTI-TUBERCULAR BATHS

Heir to Russian Throne Is Reported as Greatly Benefitted by Salt Baths, but General Belief Is That He Will Never Recover.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 11.—Grand Duke Alexis, the Czar's only son, is reported to have been greatly benefited by salt baths. Nobody outside the imperial family circle knows even yet what ails the nine-year-old heir to all the Russias, but it is observed that he is taking a course of treatment such as is prescribed for persons afflicted with tuberculosis.

That Grand Duchess Olga, the Czar's eldest daughter, is betrothed to Prince Charles, Roumania's future King, has been officially announced in Roumania. But the Grand Duchess' opposition prevents its announcement in Russia. She has sworn to marry nobody but her cousin, Dmitri Pavlovitch, son of the Grand Duke Paul, to whom she was secretly betrothed more than a year ago.

The Roumanian match is favored because it would help to restore Russian prestige in the Balkans. The Czar is said to be torn between political reasons and his daughter's happiness.

Prince Charles' mother, beautiful Princess Ferdinand, the Czar's own cousin, labored hard to persuade him during her recent visit in Russia, but nobody at court believes that the marriage will take place unless Grand Duchess Olga changes her mind of her own free will.

Dmitri Pavlovitch is only a "poor relation" and a life guardsman, but he may share the Romanoff's throne with Olga. There is a large party in favor of making them heirs apparent, since the Czarevitch's health is so bad and his uncle, Grand Duke Michael, refuses to be bothered with a crown. The Roumanian match would, of course, knock this plot to pieces, but it is one of the reasons that makes Czar Nicholas hesitate about choosing Prince Charles as son-in-law.

KING ALFONSO GETS READY FOR EXPECTED REVOLUTION

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Pub. Co. (New York World.)

LONDON, Oct. 11.—King Alfonso will come to England soon, and it is understood among his friends here that he is coming to look after some investments. Political affairs in his own country have not been reassuring, so far as the royal family is concerned, for many years and the recent arbitrary of Count Romanes in closing Parliament for the greater part of the year practically amounts to abolishing the constitutional system and setting up a dictatorship.

Alfonso does not intend to lose his personal fortune if he should lose his crown and he has been quietly putting his money in English, Canadian and French securities.

The Spanish monarchy is hemmed in by the two republics of France and Portugal and is powerless to control the activities of the Spanish Socialists from Paris and Lisbon. Among English people, who are in a position to know, the affairs of diplomacy before they are published to the world at large, there is a concensus of opinion that something is going to happen in the Spanish peninsula before long and that, when it comes, King Alfonso will not be caught napping so far as his personal interests are concerned.

Return of the Long Season Crowded With Numerous Big Affairs Is Assured by Large Number of Debutantes, Making Impossible Clique Entertaining of Recent Years.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

THERE are so many rumors of gayety that the "season," which has been getting shorter and shorter in St. Louis, each year, promises to begin early and keep up a whirl of dinner dances, teas and even balls without interruption from the last of this month until Lent.

Heretofore there has been the Veiled Prophet's ball and then a lull during October, in which hardly anything of any importance happened. Then along toward the middle of November the debutante teas would begin, but not until late in December would the dances be given and the real social season commence.

From that time until Lent—when everybody was off for lands of sunshine and blue skies — things were crowded into such a short space of time that the pace was breathless.

But recently, when it was announced that such a great number of girls would "come out" this winter, there arose much discussion and wondering as to whether there would be a change from the tiresome routine into which the leaders of St. Louis society have fallen during the past few years of dividing themselves into little cliques and giving small entertainments, or would society blossom once more into affairs large enough to be called balls and receptions.

Of course, there have been dinner dances galore for the last three years, all patterned alike with about 150 or 200 guests, including the men, dowagers and some of the members of the younger married set.

This winter there are so many debutantes of representative families to be invited everywhere that it will be difficult for the hostesses to draw the line, for, with a list of about 40 "buds," the belles of last season and many from the season before to be asked, it will be interesting to know just how the number of guests can possibly be kept down to 200. Therefore, it is probable that once more dances and balls will come into fashion.

That the young women and men who make up fashionable society like balls was proven last winter when, at Miss Marie Busch's coming out ball at Sunset Inn Country Club—the only real ball during the entire winter—they danced till broad daylight. And also the season before, when Mr. and Mrs. Goltra presented Mrs. Goltra's sister, Miss Margaret Brown, now Mrs. G. Herbert Hostetter Jr. of Pittsburg, at the St. Louis Club, the guests danced till dawn.

So with all the "buds," and all the belles of the last two or three seasons, who have not deserted the ranks of society for social work or real work, it is predicted that the coming season will be the gayest for many years and that the exclusiveness that has hung over every kind of social function like a pall will take itself back to the limbo of things unwanted and unregretted.

Already the dates of several large affairs have been announced which, added to the Lennox dances, the first of which will be Oct. 24, the monthly dinner dances at the St. Louis Club, the Racquet Club dinner dances, the two Imperials the first and third Fridays in January, the charity ball at Dreamland Nov. 11, for the benefit of the anti-tuberculosis night and day camp, the Louise Homer concert Oct. 23 at the Odeon, the Melba-Kubelik concert Nov. 18 at the Coliseum for the benefit of Kingdon House will make for a gay season.

Lewis D. Dozier will give a ball at the St. Louis Club Wednesday evening, Nov. 26, to present his daughter, Miss Eleanor Dozier, and the following evening Mrs. L. D. Morrison will give a large dinner-dance at the Woman's Club to introduce her granddaughter, Miss Virginia Morrison Carr.

Now comes news of a brilliant affair to be given at Sunset Inn Country Club on Halloween, which will be a dance, with some kind of a surprise for the guests. Almost two hundred reservations have been made and it will be one of the interesting events of the fall.

While the mild weather lasts the Wednesday and Saturday dinner-dances at the inn, which have been such successes all summer, will continue, and all winter there will be dinner-dances twice a month—the first and third Wednesdays.

Thanksgiving there will be a dinner-dance at the inn and New Year's eve there will be a special entertainment.

So much gayety is assured.

Miss Meagher has returned from New York with a showing of fall millinery.

The Veiled Prophet's ball is done, but echoes from that vast assemblage are heard on all sides. The Queen and how she deported herself, the shade of her lovely pink hair, the distinguished guests in the boxes, the decorations and a thousand other topics are under discussion.

Here are some of the things the echoes say:

Of course everybody "in the know" has known since last year that if Miss Adaline Capen made her bow this winter she would be queen. And everyone supposed that she would bring her gown from Europe. But she didn't It was made right here and was as "chic" as any French creation could have been and suited Miss Capen to a "T," for she is the type the modern artists try to put on the magazine covers; that the most admired stars of stageland affect, and that authors of the "best sellers" seek to portray as their heroines.

Was there ever anything more lovely than the queen with her pinkish-red hair, her huge bouquet of orchids of that queer pinkish lavender color and the touch of old rose under gold lace in her royal robe, which was carried by two pages dressed in pale blue satin?

Then, later, when she took her place on the great purple rug, spread for the Prophet and his court to dance on, she made a picture that the most daring impressionist artist would envy and if seen on canvas would not be believed to be true in detail.

Separately every color clashed with the other and with the yellow in the decorations and the brilliant red draperies of the throne platform, but together they made a memorable scene.

One of the most noticeable costumes was Miss Alice Maloy's, whose sister, Miss Helen, was one of the special maids. She wore a frock of palest pink charmeuse, with a clinging skirt, slashed in front, which had a "minaret" of cherry-colored gauze, shading from dark to light. The bodice had the deepest shade of the color faced on it in sort of scollops. Pink silk stockings and cherry-colored slippers completed her toilet.

Mrs. Wallace Capen, the Queen's aunt, wore an exquisite gown of brocaded cloth of gold over a foundation of light blue chiffon, which she had made herself.

Miss Gladys Cupples Scudder, who was in one of the boxes with her mother, Mrs. William H. Scudder, was in white with a tulle scarf of sea green that brought out the gold in her hair and the fairness of her skin until she suggested Undine or some other lovely person.

Mrs. Edwin Gould, who was in the box with Mrs. Harrison Steedman, wore a dress of royal blue chiffon—but her string of diamonds! It was made of square diamonds, each one large enough for an engagement ring, set as close together as possible and it went around her throat and down to her waist. Mrs. Dave H. Morris, whose mother was Miss Margaret Vanderbilt, who was in St. Louis with the Gould party was not at the ball because she is in mourning.

Conspicuous among the maids of honor was Miss Beatrix Eimer, who made her formal bow that evening. Her gown was the very height of the latest styles and even her jewelry was made for the occasion. She wore a gown of white brocaded silk threaded with gold. There was a tunic or rather "minaret" of tulle edged with martin fur. The bodice was of chiffon with broad bands of the fur edging the top, but the most striking part of it all was a Cleopatra girdle of gold mesh, studded with jewels. Her headdress matched the girdle and to make the costume complete Miss Elmer's father, E. J. Eimer, had made for her bracelet, ring, shoe buckles, anklet and corsage ornament of gold set with topazes, amethysts, baroque pears and a few rubies for color, like those in the girdle.

Miss Eimer was graduated from the Urseline convent two years ago and since has spent much time in travel. She was abroad last winter and devoted herself to the study of French and German and to drawing.

Another attractive gown was worn by Miss Clemence Garneau, the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. of blue chiffon—neither light nor dark—embroidered around the shoulder drapery, which formed angel sleeves and the tunic, with a narrow band of flowers in dull old rose shades.

The Prophet's gifts this year were gold shoe buckles for the maids and desk lamps for the matrons.

Miss Jane Taylor, the retiring Queen, was given a bar pin of diamonds set in filigree of platinum. Miss Taylor, who presided until the Prophet lead her from the throne, wore a gown of rose brocade with a bodice of cream-colored lace, edged with martin. Her flowers, also a gift of the Prophet, were Killarney roses and lilies of the valley.

Besides all the lovely sights were a number of funny impressions given by the scantiness of the skirts, almost all of which were slashed, making quite a frank display of feet and ankles.

On the platform where the maids sat in the glare of stage footlights there were numbers of pretty feet that grew tired with the waiting and arranged themselves unconsciously into all kinds of funny attitudes.

Then, when the dancing began, the floor seemed full of feet—you never saw as many in your life, and transparent gowns were much in evidence on wearers blissfully unconscious of their transparency.

Several engagements of importance were announced last week. One was that of Miss Nan Woodward and Harry E. Papin. The wedding will be one of the notable nuptial events of the early winter. The bride-elect is the young sister of Mrs. Harry Scullin, with whom she lives. She and Mrs. Scullin's daughters, Misses Eugenia and May Scullin, are about the same age and made their debut two seasons ago. Mr. Papin is the son of the late Dr. Papin and is representative of the old pioneer French families.

Quite interesting is the announcement of Miss Dorothea Scudder's engagement to Edward Hyatt, which was made Monday. Miss Scudder is the daughter of the late Rogers V. Scudder and the grand-daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Lucas. She is stopping with her uncle, Robert J. Lucas Jr., and Mrs. Lucas. The wedding will take place Tuesday, Nov. 18, at the home of the bride's aunts, Misses Mary and Katherine Scudder, 3534 Washington avenue, and will be very quiet, with just the nearest members of the two families present.

The engagement of Miss Ruth Holliday, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Omar Holliday of 5879 Cabanne avenue, and Horton Watkins was announced, Thursday, at a small tea given by the bride-elect. The wedding will be in September. Miss Holliday was graduated in June from Vassar College with honors and is prominent in the college set.

An example of our low prices is a solid gold penknife at three seventy-five. Heffern-Neuhoff Jewelry Co., 805 Locust.

Mrs. W. E. Walker of 4168 Flad avenue gave a 500 party Wednesday afternoon to announce the engagement of her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Blossom Walker, and Dr. Norman Niedringhaus, son of Charles Niedringhaus. The marriage has been set for December.

The Horse Show, to be held at the Coliseum the week of Oct. 27, promises to be one of the most brilliant socially, as well as from the standpoint of entries in the history of the Society. The patronesses are:

GRANDMOTHER USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER HAIR WHEN FADED OR GRAY

Sage Tea, when Mixed with Sulphur, makes Your Hair Soft, Beautiful and Removes Dandruff at Once.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But the brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, which is usually too sticky, so insist upon getting Wyeth's, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says his customers insist on Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because, they say, it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.—ADV.

Bad Complexions Are Now Easily Discarded

(From the Beauty Seeker.)

Every woman has it in her own ha[illegible] to possess a beautiful and youthful [illegible]plexion. No matter how soiled, fa[illegible] coarse the cuticle, ordinary mercolized wax will actually remove it, and Nature will substitute a skin as soft, clear and lovely as a child's. The action of the wax is not drastic, but gentle and agreeable. Minute particles of scarf skin come off day by day, yet no evidence of the treatment is discernible, other than the gradual complexional improvement. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, suffices for most cases. It is put on at bedtime like cold cream and taken off in the morning with warm water. It is a certain method of discarding freckles, liver spots, moth patches, blackheads and pimples.

Wrinkles can be treated with bene[illegible] by bathing the face in a lotion prepared by dissolving 1 ounce powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel. Instantaneous results are secured.—ADV.

Praises This Remedy for Lung Trouble

Many people are led to believe that Lung Trouble is a disease which cannot be conquered. This is wrong, as many have fully recovered their health. A change of climate has helped some, but many more have been restored to health by breathing the freshest air, eating well-cooked, wholesome food, being temperate in their habits and adding the tonic qualities of Eckman's Alterative, a medicine for Throat and Lung Troubles. Investigate this case:

Bowling Green, Ky., R. No. 4.

"Gentlemen: The spring of 1908 I had a severe cough for six months. I tried all the medicine that my doctors recommended to me, but no results came for the better. I had night sweats, and would cough and spit until I got so weak I could hardly do anything. But, at last, James Deering of Glasgow Junction insisted that I try your medicine. In one week's time there was quite an improvement in my condition, and after I had taken several bottles I felt as well as ever in my life. I firmly believe that Eckman's Alterative will relieve any case of lung trouble if taken before the last stage."

(Affidavit) A. C. BETTERSWORTH.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Sold by Raboteau Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co. and leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and aditional evidence.

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character; the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers should apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Building, College-Ellwood streets, Dayton, O., inclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Mason" writes: "For years I have been taking medicine to cure constipation, liver trouble and the usual diseases that come from that source. Headaches, sallow skin, kidney trouble, dark spots before my eyes, dizzy spells and twinges of rheumatism are getting worse."

Answer: Take three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur). They are packed in sealed tubes with directions and are convenient, effective and highly curative for such ailments as arise from chronic constipation. If you are dyspeptic, also take tablets, triopeptine.

"OMA W." writes: "I have suffered with catarrh of the head for many years. This has become so bad that it has affected my blood, also my stomach and bowels, to a very great extent. I shall appreciate an immediate answer, as I suffer greatly."

Answer: I would advise you to purchase a 2 oz. package of Vilane powder; take one-half teaspoonful of the powder and add to this a pint of warm water, snuff the water from the palm of the hand through the nostrils several times a day. Make a catarrh balm by mixing one teaspoonful of powder with one ounce of vaseline, or lard will do, and apply as far up the nostrils as possible. For the stomach, bowels and blood I would recommend the following tonic: Syrup sarsaparilla comp., 4 ozs., comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz., and 1 oz. fluid ext. buchu. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

"Gloria" writes: "I would like you to prescribe a good hair and scalp treatment. I am bothered with itching scalp and dandruff. My hair is faded and falling and none of the remedies I have tried have done any permanent good."

Answer: Go to your druggist and obtain a 4 oz. jar of plain yellow Minyol. Apply as per directions. This treatment differs from all and I have actually seen the astonishing transformations which result from its use. The dandruff and itching are conquered with two or three applications, while it makes the hair glossy, wavy and full of intense natural color.

"Myrtle" writes: "Owing to my extreme thinness I am frequently embarrassed by slighting remarks of young people. Can you prescribe a safe remedy to increase my weight?"

Answer: I have so many gratifying reports from the users of Hypo-Nuclane tablets, that I have become to regard these valuable little tablets as a specific and prescribe them to all who are anemic, thin, wasting, nervous and debilitated. I recommend that you begin their use at once and continue regularly until your system is able to assimilate the fatty elements of your food; then you will grow plump and have plenty of red blood, with color in your complexion bright and sparkling eyes of health.

"Sick M. G." writes: "I have been affected for some months with rheumatism and have taken much medicine in vain. Please give prescription that will cure."

Answer: The most efficient prescription I have ever given for rheumatism is: Iodide of potassium 2 drams, sodium salicylate, 4 drams; wine of colchicum, one-half ounce; comp. essence of cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; and syrup sarsaparilla comp. 5 ozs. Mix and take a teaspoonful at meal time and at bedtime.

"Farmwife" writes: "You once recommended a homemade cough syrup. I tried it and found it the best cough and cold syrup that I ever heard of. It was so prompt in relieving the severest coughs and colds and a pint bottle made at home lasted so long that I have forgotten the ingredients. Kindly publish again."

Answer: The splendid laxative homemade cough syrup is made by mixing a 2½-oz. bottle of concentrated essence mentho-laxene with a homemade sugar syrup. Directions on the bottle tells how to make and use. It is a fine, cheap remedy.

"Johnson" writes: "I am bothered greatly with indigestion. Things I like to eat nearly always cause a heavy, ill-at-ease feeling in my stomach, and my breath is bad, while I am nervous, irritable and frequently cannot sleep."

Answer: A very excellent treatment which is widely prescribed for its gradual curative action, as well as the instant relief it affords, is tablets triopeptine, packed in sealed cartons. Take a pink tablet after breakfast, white tablet after dinner and blue after supper. Continue and the curative agencies should soon restore natural digestion.

"Mrs. M. C." writes: "I am recovering from a long illness, but am very weak, nervous, sleepless and have little appetite. Can you give me a good tonic restorative treatment?"

Answer: Have the following prescription filled and take a teaspoonful before meals: Syrup of hypophosphites comp. 5 ozs., tincture cadomene comp. 1 oz. (not cardamon). Mix and shake well before using. This is a fine nerve tonic and system tonic for old and young.

John R. Mc. asks: "Don't you think it is wise to take medicine to reduce my weight? I weigh about 55 pounds too much."

Answer: I do think so; and a very convenient and effective flesh-reducer medicine is sold in sealed tubes with full directions for home use. It is called 5-grain arbolone tablets and any well-stocked pharmacy can supply them. They are essentially good.—ADVERTISEMENT.

THIN AND SCRAWNY---"BUST INCREASED 5 INCHES"

Remarkable Experience of Mable Moore—How to Develop a Beautiful Figure.

"I was thin and scrawny," writes Miss Mabel Moore, "Now thanks to Dr. Kelly's Bust Developer, I look like a different woman, and my bust measures five inches more than it did. The Developer certainly has done wonders for me."

"Dr. Kelly's Bust Developer worked miracles in my case," states Mrs. W. T. Stamps. "My bust measure increased six inches. It will surely do all you claim and more, too."

"My bust is filling out since using Dr. Kelly's Bust Developer; it is now three inches larger than it was," declares Rose Traver, and Miss Josie Foncault adds: "Dr. Kelly's Bust Developer is the best remedy for developing the bust. It has developed my bust four inches, and I am feeling better and my complexion is better." Then Mrs. A. Whiting writes: "My bust has changed greatly since using Dr. Kelly's Bust Developer, increasing in both size and firmness."

When scores of women, living in all parts of this continent, voluntarily testify to an increase in bust development, ranging all the way from an inch or two to six inches or more, given them by Dr. Kelly's treatment, you must admit, Mrs. or Miss Thin and Scrawny, that there must be some real merit in this Dr. Kelly method of bust-developing.

Dr. Kelly's method has increased the bust measurement of thousands of women, given firm, full, beautiful bosoms, made the arms round and shapely, and the neck and shoulders plump and symmetrical. You don't have to believe in this treatment in order to develop; doubt its power all you want, but just take it and watch the hollows vanish and your figure round out to pleasing proportions. Measure yourself when you begin and again when you finish, and let the tape tell the story.

This treatment is only for women who are under-developed above the waist, building up and filling out the shrunken flabby bosom, and rounding out the arms and shoulders. It should NOT be used to incease the hips, as it is only intended to stimulate and build up the bust.

50c Package Free

To enable any thin, undeveloped woman, whose bust is three or more inches less than it should be, to make a test of Dr. Kelly's Bust Developer, we will, through the parcels post, mail a 50c package absolutely free. Either the treatment will increase your measurements or it won't, and the only way is to try it. Send for this Free Test package today, enclosing 10c in silver or stamps to help pay postage, packing, etc., and a full-size 50c package will be sent by return mail free of charge. Write at once to Dr. Kelly Co., Dept. 159-KF, Buffalo, N. Y.

25 CENT "DANDERINE" FOR FALLING HAIR AND DANDRUFF—ACTS AT ONCE

Don't pay 50 cents for inferior hair tonics—Use old, reliable, harmless "Danderine"—Delightful dressing, too.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which, if not remedied, causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast.

A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application you will say it was the best investment you ever made. Your hair will immediately take on that life, luster and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.—ADV.

TAX EXEMPTION URGED ON ALL UNIMPROVED LANDS

Development Association Advocates Nonassessment for Five Years to Encourage Cultivation.

The Executive Committee of the Southeast Missouri Development Association yesterday started a movement in favor of legislation for a five-year tax exemption on all unimproved lands in the State, which are brought into a state of cultivation.

A resolution, adopted by the committee, recites that there are 14,000,000 acres of unimproved land in the State, three-quarters of it tributary to St. Louis, which would increase St. Louis business 25 per cent if brought into cultivation and add millions to the taxable wealth of the State. The resolution states that the State could well afford to forego the taxes for five years for the increased valuation for taxation purposes after the land has been put into cultivation.

The Business Men's League and other commercial bodies will be asked to aid in procuring the passage of the bill. The Southwest Ozark Association is expected to co-operate.

KING AND SISTER DISAGREE OVER ROYAL WEDDING

Princess Royal Insists on Her Peculiar Ideas About Marriage of Her Daughter and Prince Arthur.

DIFFERS WITH MOTHER

Princess Patricia, Arthur's Sister, Disgusted, Finally Refuses to Be a Bridemaid.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—No royal wedding ever aroused less human interest than the marriage of Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife next Wednesday in the Chapel of St. James Palace.

Bitter disagreement over the arrangements still continue between King George and his sister, the Princess royal, mother of the bride-elect. As the Princess Royal has inherited all the obstinacy, exclusiveness and disregard of public opinion of her grandmother, Queen Victoria, King George is having a hard time trying to make her realize she should not give free play to her personal prejudices in connection with the royal wedding. From day to day the arrangements are being altered.

Disgusted at the Princess Royal's impracticable conduct and her archaic ideas about bridemaids' dresses, Princess Patricia of Connaught, sister of Prince Arthur, has refused to act as one of the bridemaids, who are now limited to five little Princesses with no will of their own.

In defiance of precedent, the Princess Royal insists on acting with the King as "supporter" of the bride. The Prince of Wales and the Grand Duke of Saxe-Coburg, who were to have been "supporters" of the bridegroom, have withdrawn. The Duke of Connaught and the Crown Prince of Sweden were chosen instead, but the latter, owing to the illness of the King of Sweden, cannot come to London, so the Prince of Wales will have to take the place, after all.

Refuses to Show Wedding Presents.

The Princess Royal has had her way about forbidding snap-shotting of the bridal procession (although this may easily be done when it is passing through the courts of St. James Palace) and about preventing a public view of the wedding presents. The last time royal wedding presents were exhibited $5000 was collected for charity by charging a small fee of admission. But the Princess Royal will not sanction anything so vulgar.

The keeping secret of the place where the honeymoon is to be spent is another concession to the bride-elect's mother, who had a bitter quarrel with her own mother, Queen Alexandra, over this point.

The Connaughts have not been consulted about anything. Prince Arthur is far from being a happy bridegroom in expectancy, while the bride is a lay figure in the hands of her mother.

The bride's costume of white charmeuse, cut in the fashion of 1883, is simplicity itself.

The bridemaids will wear pink charmeuse with pale blue belts, unless a change is made on account of a statement in the press that these are favorite colors of Queen Mary and were adopted out of compliment to her, whereas they were the personal choice of the Princess Royal.

Bride and bridegroom-to-be have at last been photographed together, evidently by order, judging from their pose and expression. Prince Arthur looks positively ghastly, preoccupied and prematurely aged.

It had been remarked as strange that they had not been photographed together.

Wedding Present Insurance Amuses London.

Royalties usually like to set an example in such matters to common folk and they are presented in attitudes denoting affection, either arm in arm or sitting together on a couch or looking into each other's eyes. But Prince Arthur and Duchess of Fife have not been even seen together until now, much less photographed together. Presumably they were too busy arranging for the wedding.

The Prince lost no time in taking out a $500,000 policy of insurance from Lloyd's, covering the risk of loss of his or her wedding presents for six months. There is some amusement in royal circles because the actual value of those received is less than half that sum.

Prince Arthur is a business-like fellow and will very carefully look after his wife's handsome fortune. In this respect he presents a striking contrast to the Queen's brothers, the Tecks, whose wives have to do the managing.

Five Queens, three Kings and a whole lot of Princes, Princesses, Dukes and Duchesses will give a distinctly royal air to the wedding.

This pride has an income, after her wedding settlement on the bridegroom, of $750,000 a year, and at her mother's death she will inherit real estate that brings an additional income of $900,000 annually.

Solid Gold Altar Service.

The chapel altar will be equipped with the handsome solid gold service that has been accumulating to the English throne since the days of Charles II and the tapestries that have been treasured since they were selected by Queen Anne will be used in the decorations. The limited space does not permit the usual floral decorations and only white blooms will be used. There will be no banks nor screens of blooms.

It will be strictly a home wedding. No foreign governments have been notified of the event and official representative of rulers are not expected. Ambassadors and other officials in London will be present as guests, but not officially.

There will be four processions into the chapel and after the first of these starts from St. James Palace no person will be admitted to the chapel. The first will consist of the royalties present. In it will be King George and Queen Mary, the King and Queen of Norway, deposed King Manuel of Portugal and his bride, if she is able to come to England; Dowager Queen Amelie of Portugal, the Dowager Czarina of Russia, Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia, Prince Waldemar of Denmark and Prince and Princess Ernest of Brunswick-Luneberg

Prince of Wales as Groomsman.

Next will come the bridegroom's party. Accompanying him will be the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught. Neither will be known as "best man," for that functionary is not recognized at royal weddings. The Duke of Connaught will support the bridegroom.

Next will come the bride's party and at her side probably will walk the Dowager Queen Alexandra. She will have five royal bridemaids who have been officially named as follows: Princess Mary, Princess Maud of Fife, Princess Victoria and Helena, daughters of the Duke of Teck, and Princess May, daughter of Prince Alexander of Teck.

Next will come the clergy, including the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, and Dr. Edgar Sheppard, subdeacon of the Chapel Royal and domestic chaplain of Their Majesties.

The royal order is that all men guests at the wedding shall wear uniforms. The bridegroom will be married in the full dress uniform as a Captain of the Royal Scots Greys. The King and Duke of Connaught will be in full dress uniform of Field Marshals and the Prince of Wales in naval uniform. The Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, who will support the bridegroom, will be a prominent figure as Colonel-in-Chief of the Seaforth Highlanders. The men without uniforms will wear court attire. Women will wear full evening dress without trains or feathers.

Wedding Reception Before Marriage.

Because the royal couple have prepared to start on their honeymoon at once, the wedding receptions and wedding breakfast will be given on Monday and Tuesday, when the presents will be displayed.

The bride is a daughter of the late King Edward's elder daughter and, therefore, is a niece of King George. The bridegroom is a son of the King's paternal uncle and, therefore, is his first cousin.

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.00.

This plan makes a pint of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually conquers an ordinary cough in 24 hours. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup and bronchial asthma.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly.

Pine is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

The prompt results from this mixture have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—ADV.

The Home Beauty Parlor

by Betty Dean

Janet: Stop that falling hair right away, for it irritates the scalp. The constant scratching you speak of may be dangerous. Finger nails often poison the skin. Conquer the dandruff at once with this simple tonic—made by dissolving one ounce of quinzoin in one-half pint of alcohol and adding one-half pint cold water. This is a refreshing treatment—excellent for preventing that irritated scalp. It will not change the natural color, but will heighten it and add life and freshness.

Valase: I do not approve radical measures for beautifying the eyes. Here is a homemade remedy which has done wonders for weak, inflamed or watery eyes. Dissolve an ounce of crystos in a pint of water; put two or three drops in each eye two or three times a day. This will enable you to put off the evil hour of wearing glasses and besides being soothing and restful to the vision, will emphasize the expression and give sparkle and charm to the eyes.

Maggie O.: I never recommend talcum powder for the face—nor, indeed, is there any ordinary face powder which will answer all the demands. The only thing I can heartily recommend is spurmax, which I have used on the recommendation of Parisian beauty authorities. It is a liquid beautifier which is, also, a good tonic for the skin, protecting it, while at the same time it makes you look fair, clear and radiant. Get 4 ounces spurmax from the druggist, mix in one-half pint hot water and add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine. This will give you enough to last a long time, and is the best way to keep the complexion youthful and natural with a soft, velvety bloom. One application is plenty for several hours' time.

Sue L.: I don't blame you for not being enthusiastic about dieting to reduce your flesh. Many doctors say it is dangerous, besides being a martyrdom. It may reduce your vitality and the "remedy be worse than the disease." Instead of this radical method try the simple parnotis. This is easily taken, and is sure to bring down your weight without bad effects of any kind. Dissolve 4 ounces parnotis in 1½ pint water. Take a tablespoonful before meals. Don't be afraid of flabby effects on the skin.

Mary L.: I shouldn't call a pimpled skin and red nose "dreadful disfigurements," especially when they are so easily remedied. Try this greaseless cream jelly briskly massaged into the skin: Get one ounce of almozoin at your druggist's and stir it into a half-pint of cold water, adding two teaspoonfuls of glycerine. I will be glad to hear how this helps you. Others are constantly writing me in praise of this wonderful remedy, almozoin, which is fine to prevent wrinkles, flabbiness, sallowness and all skin troubles.

Blonde: I cannot advise any bleaching process for the hair. The best way to retain the color of your "golden crown" is to keep the scalp healthy and free from dandruff and dirt. Shampoo often, using only canthrox for the lather. A teaspoonful in a cup of hot water is plenty. There is plenty in a package for fifteen shampoos, and it will leave your hair magnificently clean, fluffy and altogether lovely. Try it. Use no soap. If the scalp trouble continues use quinzoin, for which see answer to Janet.

Miss L. Smith: If looking in your mirror discourages you lately, it does not prove that you are permanently losing your good looks. The probabilities are that you are only temporarily run down and I would urge you to try this simple homemade tonic: Dissolve an ounce of kardene in half a pint of alcohol, add one-half cup of sugar and enough hot water to make a full quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal. It will restore your beauty, and with the new blood and strength it will give you, I prophesy a speedy return to your good looks and fine spirits. For the newest complexion lotion see answer to Maggie O.

ST. LOUIS LEAGUE FORMED TO GIVE SUPPORT TO DRAMA

First Bulletin From "Censors" Will Urge Attendance at "Damaged Goods."

PLAY SUPPRESSED ABROAD

Will Be Produced Oct. 20 Under Auspices of Hygiene Society.

The St. Louis Center of the Drama League of America, silent censor of immoral and dull plays, will issue its first bulletin this week advising lovers of drama to attend the forthcoming production of "Damaged Goods," a remarkable stage thesis on a phase of the social evil, from the French of Brieux.

Quiet preparations have been under way for several months to establish a St. Louis branch of the Drama League, which has become an important factor in the development of the American stage since its creation in Chicago three years ago.

Percival Chubb, president of the St. Louis Ethical Society, is president of the St. Louis Center and a director of the Drama League of America, D. Arthur Bowman is treasurer, and Gustavus Tuckerman, civic inspector of the City Club, is secretary of the local center. On the Board of Directors are: Arthur E. Bostwick, Ph. D.' city librarian; Mrs. Philip N. Moore, Mrs. W. K. McKittrick, Miss Virginia Stevenson, Frank P. Crunden, Prof. Otto Heller and Prof. John L. Lowes.

Suppressed by European Censors.

"Damaged Goods," the first recommendation of the local center, was suppressed by European censors at its first production and only restored to the stage after a clergyman in Switzerland read the play to his congregation. Despite this criticism at its birth, the play has lived to win appreciation in both hemispheres, and will be pronounced entirely proper by the local Drama League center.

The play will be produced the week of Oct. 20 at the Olympic Theater under the auspices of the St. Louis Society of Social Hygiene. Its sponsors say the French playwright, Brieux, has made a lasting contribution to dramatic literature and the stage by his handling of a theme that has its genesis in a physician's office.

It is the scheme of the Drama League, according to its officers, not only to keep its members informed as to the worthy plays that are to be produced, but to "put St. Louis on the dramatic map" by pledging an organized attendance to plays that are worth while.

Theater-Goers Disappointed.

"Lovers of the drama have suffered disappointment many times in the last few seasons," explained Secretary Tuckerman to a reporter, "because theatrical managers could not see their way to producing worthy plays in St. Louis. The city was not visited by the Irish players, the Robertson players, the Manchester players, and had no opportunity to see such important plays as 'What the Public Wants' and 'Hindle Wakes.'

"If the St. Louis center of the Drama League can give a thousand pledges of patronage for such performances, it will be possible to have them visit St. Louis for a week. Our membership fee is a nominal sum—$1 a year or $5 for a sustaining membership. We purpose to issue bulletins describing the merits of good plays in advance of their appearance, for the information of members, but it will not be our policy to criticise productions that are considered unworthy for any cause."

MUNICIPAL TELEPHONE SYSTEM FOR OTTAWA, KAN.

Negotiations to Be Begun With View of Merging Bell and Independent Exchanges.

OTTAWA, Kan., Oct. 11.—This city, having made a success of its municipally owned water plant and electric lighting system, purposes to own its own telephone system. The franchise of the Missouri and Kansas (Bell) Telephone Co. has expired and the local independent company's franchise will expire in six years. The plan is to consolidate the exchanges under city ownership and give the Bell the long-distance business.

A mass meeting has been called to consider the proposition, and if sentiment is favorable, city officials will begin negotiations with the companies. The local company, it is said, would sell its plant to the city and the Public Utilities Commission has promised its aid in the deal.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS TO OBSERVE COLUMBUS DAY

Will Attend Solemn Liturgical Vespers at St. Anthony's Church Tonight.

Knights of Columbus will observe Columbus day by attending solemn liturgical vespers at St. Anthony's (Monks) Church, Michigan avenue and Meramec street, this evening.

St. Anthony's Choirsters, the first in the archdiocese to follow the commands of Pope Pius X in regard to music in the Catholic church, will give a musical program under the direction of Prof. Al. Rhode. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. P. Odo Richardt, O. F. M., rector of St. Anthony's church.

Pageant Program Canceled.

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 11.—Officers of the Woman's Day Organization have announced that the Mississippi State Fair Association directors have decided to cancel the historical pageant of Mississippi that was to have been given as part of the woman's day program Oct. 30. Preparations for the pageant had been in progress for almost six months. The chief reason is lack of sufficient time in which to organize the pageant.

How to be Beautiful

Secrets of Health and Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

The beautiful and talented Miss Ainsworth has consented to engage herself in helping women, and men, too, to possess health and beauty. Questions answered in these columns are general in character and are applicable to any and all cases of a similar nature. Those wishing further information or advice may address, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, Miss Ainsworth, 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, Ohio. Full name and address must be given by all who write to her. She never prints names, but uses initials or fictitious names. Note: The formulas and preparations mentioned in these columns are on sale by all wholesale firms, and by all large, well-stocked drug and toilet counters. If not in his stock, your dealer can obtain from the wholesaler for you. Whatever you do, don't take substitute articles of doubtful value, which may do you more harm than good.

Maudie asks: "How can a woman secure and preserve a beautiful complexion?"

Answer: A beautiful skin and complexion makes any woman or girl pretty, even though the features are irregular. A pretty figure added to a pretty skin and complexion will attract and preserve the homage of both men and women. I cannot in my words of advice tell anyone how to change the features given by nature, but I do hope to give such advice as will promote a clean, clear skin, a beautiful pink and white or olive-pink complexion; a perfect moulding and rounding of the lines of the face and figure.

Anyone can have a beautiful complexion. Anyone may attain a pretty figure. But it requires industry, patience and, above all, the correct and proper combination of remedies; also attention to eating, sleeping, exercise and digestion. If the health is good and the blood pure, no medicines are required.

The complexion may be sallow, red, pale, dark, leathery, and the skin may be harsh with large pores, chapped, spotted or lifeless and colorless in appearance, and though one or more of these conditions are present, the process of treatment which I will recommend cannot and will not fail to produce a lovely skin and a beautifully tinted complexion. I have attained such results myself. I know scores who have done likewise, so there is no reason to doubt.

The several preparations which I recommend are made for a scientific treatment, and are guaranteed harmless and pure:

The first is gloriol glowene, a "water massage," which takes the place of soap, and which is absolutely essential to cleanse the deepest skin pores of waste matter, grime and perspiration.

The second is gloriol emollient, to be applied after the "water-massage," and which is a skin food nutrient, which tends to develop and invigorate the nerve cells and blood supply to the flesh underlying the skin, thus causing a beautiful tint of color to manifest itself through the transparent skin membrane. It is to be rubbed into the skin nightly before retiring and is thus utilized and absorbed.

The third is gloriol balm, a greaseless cream or balm, which invigorates, whitens and protects the skin from wind, sun and dirt. It is applied in the morning instead of soap and water. The eyes only to be bathed with water. A good face powder may be used afterward if desired.

The above treatment is reliable, inexpensive and produces and preserves a beautiful complexion. The three articles are obtainable at large drug stores and toilet counters.

Myrtle G. asks: "I want to know if it is possible for a young woman to develop her bust? I am perfectly flat-chested. If you know what to do, please tell me."

Answer: I do know of a reliable treatment and hope you will try it, for I am sure you will be happier after doing so. Obtain of any well-stocked druggist or toilet counter a tube of medicated venosol and use as per directions which accompany it. Also begin taking 3-grain Hypo-nuclane tablets and continue this treatment until the desired results are obtained. Increase of bust measurement begins in from three to four weeks, and as much as 6 to 8 inches are added ultimately.

Eloise asks: "My face is covered with pimples and blackheads and my skin is greasy and dirty-looking, no matter how much I wash it. Can I overcome this condition?"

Answer: Indeed you can, and surprisingly quick, too, if you follow my advice. First, you should improve your blood by taking as per directions accompanying, one-grain tablets quinoxide, sold in sealed tubes. These will improve the quality of the blood, and whiten the skin, but to obtain a beautiful complexion and preserve it, you should follow my advice to "Maudie," given above.

Marie S. asks: "What can I do to overcome the straight, stringy appearance of my hair? I would like to have waving hair."

Answer: Some women have naturally waving hair and they are fortunate, for nothing adds so much to beauty. You, or anyone, can cultivate beautiful waving hair by a persistent use of gloriol wavolene. Directions accompanying each bottle, obtainable at well-stocked drug and toilet counters. It is the only preparation that I know of which immediately waves the hair, defies detection; and after a time it is said to produce a permanent, natural wave. It is very beneficial to the hair of women.

Marion asks: "Can you tell me of a cheap but reliable hair tonic; I have tried so many but my hair is falling out and my scalp itches terribly. My hair is dull and lifeless."

Answer: I don't believe in alcoholic hair tonics or quinine either. The most thorough and reliable hair and scalp tonic is one which I make and use myself. It preserves the tresses and beautifies the hair, giving it luster and new life. Purchase one-half ounce of powdered hairwand. Empty it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with soft water, shake well and let stand an hour. Then apply twice daily, rubbing it into the scalp well. This is both cheap and harmless, and produces luxurious tresses of intense, natural color.

Fat Anna asks: "Can you tell me what to use to reduce excessive fat, safely? I weigh about 30 pounds too much.

Answer: Physicians of my acquaintance say there is only one reliable flesh reducer of a harmless character and I advise you to obtain and use same. Ask a well-stocked pharmacy for five-grain phy-thyrin tablets. Three weeks' treatment in each sealed tube soon enables one to reduce to normal. No evil effects have ever been traced to the use of this dependable treatment. Both men and women use it.

Mrs. A. D. asks: "For years I have been more or less troubled and embarrassed by superfluous hair growth on face and arms. Is there anything except the painful electric needle to remove them?"

Answer: I have never been bothered. But several of my friends and correspondents tell me that the application of plain fluvol powder will completely destroy the hair, and not harm the skin. It is sold in sealed vials. I have seen its quick and splendid results in a number of cases, and know it is harmless and painless.

Mr. J. C. asks: "Can you recommend a good application for a man's face after shaving to prevent pimples, blotches and tenderness?"

Answer: I have frequently stated that a man who shaves often destroys the natural secretions of the skin, and then usually applies some smarting, burning astringent lotion. Never do so. Instead, apply lightly the preparation, gloriol emollient; rub in and then wipe off with a soft cloth and powder lightly to remove any shiny appearance. Most men would have beautiful skin and complexion if they would use this fine emollient or skin food instead of pastes and strong astringent lotions.

"Freckles" asks: "What do you think is the best thing to remove freckles?"

Answer: There is nothing absolutely reliable, but the best remedy, used amongst my friends, is Madam Leslie's Freckle Balm.

Mayme asks: "Please tell me what is use to cure dandruff? Is it a disease?"

Answer: Yes, it is a disease and should be cured promptly. Obtain a jar of plain yellow minyol and apply as per directions about two or three times a month until cured. As a dandruff remedy and beautifier of the hair there is nothing better.—ADVERTISEMENT.

CHAUNCEY OLCOTT IN 'SHAMEEN DHU' NOW AT OLYMPIC

Walker Whiteside in "The Typhoon" at Shubert; "Life's Shop Window," American.

MELODRAMA AT LA SALLE

Vaudeville, Burlesque and Moving Pictures Current Offerings at Other Houses.

CHAUNCEY OLCOTT in "Shameen Dhu," Olympic. New romantic drama of Irish life. Gives star a dashing and magnetic role. Production scenically picturesque and colorful. Offers such excellent opportunity for the introduction of popular musical numbers that Mr. Olcott has composed several new songs now to be heard in St. Louis for the first time, and also will sing a number of Irish ballads revealing his tenor voice at its sweetest. Another pleasing musical feature will be the incorporation of ancient Gaelic melodies in the incidental orchestral score.

Next, Richard Bennett in Brieux's "Damaged Goods."

WALKER WHITESIDE in "The Typhoon," Shubert. Return engagement of powerful drama which had its premiere production in St. Louis two seasons ago and later scored big successes in New York and other Eastern cities. Star has role of Tokeramo, a young Japanese aristocrat in Berlin on a secret mission for the Mikado and who becomes infatuated with Ilona, a European adventuress, his love overcoming his sense of duty to his country. Realizing that she has made him a weak puppet in her hands, Ilona taunts Tokeramo until, suddenly mad with rage, he kills her by strangling, this whirlwind of passion giving the play its title. Miss Florence Fisher, a St. Louis favorite, plays the role of this adventuress.

Next, "Little Miss Brown."

"LIFE'S SHOP WINDOW." American. Return engagement of dramatized version of novel by Victoria Cross. Tells story of a young wife left alone by a husband unduly devoted to the making of money, and of the perilous temptations to which she is subjected. Play ends happily with the saving of the wife from sin and shame. Scenes laid in Derby, England, and in the American West. Company includes Wesley Todd, Harvey D. Hayes, Fred Eckhardt, Harry Wells, Gretchen Sherman, Mary Tyson, Carrie Le Moyne, Blanche Dix and others.

Next, "The Confession."

"THE COUNTY SHERIFF." La Salle. Thrilling melodrama, with good comedy, a pretty romance, exciting adventure and strong situations. Company includes Edward Keane, Dora Young, J. F. Malloy, Mabelle Leverson, Janet Horton and others.

VAUDEVILLE. Columbia. Bill headed by four-act travesty on genuine melodrama entitled "More Sinned Against Than Usual," divertingly presented by clever company. Other features are Sophye Barnard, in song successes; Bert Fitzgibbon, droll comedian; Bobby Barry and Amy Mortimer, in "After the Race;" La Valera, Spanish danseuse, and Melvin Stokes, American tenor, in "A Dash of Spanish;" Lou Anger, in a monologue on the trials and tribulations of war; Ben Beyer and brother, in a comedy novelty; the Leo Zarrell Trio of novelty acrobats, and the first-run Pathe Weekly motion pictures of current events.

Kalich to Be Starred in "Rachel," New Play Soon to Open in New York

Vivid Real-Life Story of Famous French Tragedienne to Be Told Across the Footlights—Interesting Happenings in London Theatrical World.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

TO my thinking, the most important theatrical announcement from New York during the past week is that in which F. C. Whitney states that Mme. Bertha Kalich soon will be presented at a metropolitan playhouse, under his management, in a romantic drama entitled "Rachel," written by Carina Jordan, telling the vivid real-life story of the great French tragedienne of an earlier generation whose name the new play bears.

My personal interest in this impending premiere is due to my individual belief that Mme. Kalich, in a stage work worthy of her powers, is the foremost tragic actress now before the American playgoing public. This conviction is based upon her noble achievement in Maurice Maeterlinck's "Monna Vanna" and in Angel Guimera's "Marta of the Lowlands," each of these plays giving her a triumph, the validity of which was undeniable. These triumphs were not accidental. In the title role of both plays the genius of Kalich shone with the most convincing luminance. Her art was austere and profoundly moving. The chaste dignity and sacrificial piteousness of her Monna Vanna and the dreadful poignancy of her Marta could not have been attained by any mere chance of fortuitous happening or solely through the strength of the plays themselves. She was supremely in control of her material at all moments and the impression which she left upon one's mind is indelible.

The future career of Kalich hangs now upon two issues. The first is the worthiness of the plays in which she shall appear. The second is as to her own fortitude and devotion in art. I shall hope that these have been sufficiently tough in fiber to have saved her from becoming utterly dismayed, broken and disheartened by certain luckless experiences with plays that lacked the true dramatic fire and that denied her genius the full employment necessary to its complete revelation.

Of late years Mme. Kalich, to a singular degree, has been one of those ill-starred artists whom "unmerciful disaster followed fast and followed faster" until the hopeless cry of "Nevermore!" seemed indeed the only utterance possible to her soul's voicing.

"Sappho and Phaon," "The Witch," "Cora"—these are the three plays that stand out most prominently as having forbidden that advance of Kalich in the fame and good fortune to which her Monna Vanna and her Marta made her title clear. The first-named work, a modern poetic drama by Percy Mackaye, was classically beautiful, but too cold and conventional along ancient lines to contain any considerable appeal to present-day playhouse audiences. The second of the three dramas named, telling a story of the grim superstition and intolerance of our early Puritan times, was insupportably somber and repellant. The third, a tawdry and superficial play of theatrical life, written by Fred de Gresac, otherwise Mme. Victor Maurel, was so cheap, false and trivial as to make Kalich a pathetic figure in its playing. Not one of these plays could have been made to live. It was Kalich's unmerited misfortune that she went down to failure with them, inevitably, because of their weakness.

And it is from their calamitous effect upon her artistic reputation that she must rise to her rightful station in art, the necessary opportunity and courage being given her. I hope "Rachel" is worthy of her best and pluckiest endeavor. She is entitled to a fairer test of her powers than has been accorded her during the past five or six years.

According to Manager Whitney's announcement in advance of her appearance in this new play there is some encouragement to believe that the long lane of Kalich's ill luck soon may reach its turning.

We are told that "Rachel" was recommended to Mme. Kalich by the late Clyde Fitch with the significant indorsement that he regarded it as the best historical drama thus far written by an American playwright. Its story deals with the life of the famous French tragedienne from her childhood days as a street singer in Lyons to her ultimate triumph as a member of the distinguished company of the Comedie Francaise in Paris. During the progress of the play's action a number of world-famous personages, contemporary with Rachel, are introduced, the list including, among others, Alfred de Musset, Chopin, George Sand and the Duchesse d'Orleans. It is declared that the play will give Kalich a wider artistic scope than she has ever had before, both in comedy and tragedy, and that new sidelights on the life of Rachel and others figuring in the story are developed during the course of the plot's complete shaping.

I shall be glad to see this gifted woman make at least one more cast of the die against Fate, which has been none too kind to her thus far. The American stage will be the gainer in the event of her achieving the triumph of which she is capable with good dramatic material at her command.

MISS MARGERY MAUDE

MME LYDIA YAVORSKA

MISS ETHEL WARWICK

One of the pleasingly typical facts of theatrical life in London is the spirit of stanch comradeship that exists between competing managers, the great body of players, the playwrights themselves, and as a sort of understructure for the entire fabric of mutual good-will, the loyally sustained favor which the play-going public extends to those fortunate persons of the theater who have chanced to win its sincere liking.

Very much of this commendable spirit was in evidence at the farewell luncheon recently given to Cyril Maude on the eve of his departure for this country where, supported by a London company of which his daughter, Miss Margery Maude, is leading woman, his American engagement begins at Wallack's Theater on Monday evening, Nov. 3, under the Liebler management. Mr. Maude happens to be president of the Theatrical Managers' Association of London, as well as a player of great personal popularity in the British capital, and his world plainly found delight in doing him honor.

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree was chairman at the luncheon, proposing the toast of "Our Guest" with a relish that testified convincingly to the esteem in which Cyril Maude is held by him personally. He even recalled, with laughing frankness, several instances where Mr. Maude had accepted for London production certain plays which he himself had rejected, the big success of which proved beyond all denial the soundness of the Maude judgment as to their merits. And of Maude as an actor he said: "If Forbes-Robertson and Frank Benson are to uphold the standard of the English classical drama through the American continent, Cyril Maude may be trusted to carry the banner of comedy no less high. He belongs to that much-abused little band of actor-managers who, in spite of the bludgeonings and buffetings of Fate, have upheld the traditions of the English stage."

Thus, by Tree and other fellow-players, is Cyril Maude commended to the American stage, which has not seen him since those far days of his professional apprenticeship, now 29 years agone, when he appeared as a very minor member indeed of Daniel Bandmann's company, now forgotten by all save playgoing veterans of long service. Among those assembled in his honor at the farewell luncheon were Sir John Hare, Sir Squire Bancroft, Arthur Bourchier, Austin Brereton, F. W. Wyndham, Wentworth Croke and many others of distinction in the London theatrical world.

Mme. Lydia Yavorska, an actress in England and a Princess in Russia, seems not to have been very happy in her choice of "I Love You," an Anglicized version of an Italian comedy by Roberto Bracco, for the opening of her engagement at the Ambassadors Theater in London.

It is apparently the sense of the London reviewers that whatever wit or humor may have existed in the original version has been lost in the play's translation. The story told is that of a certain Mrs. Van Doorman, who had been the Marchesa di Fontanarosa, but, marrying a rich American, became so resentful of his greater devotion to Wall street that she fled from him, seeking a real man and real love. Her quest brings within the sphere of its investigation an infatuated vegetarian-spiritualist, a bluff and brutal doctor, and a dandy-exquisite who poses as the apostle of good form. She cares for none of them and, therefore, is in despair. At this juncture her husband finds her and is introduced by her as his own best friend. Parading before him her three experimental guests, she arouses his jealousy, but then relents to the extent of granting him permission to pass the night on three chairs at her bedroom door. Softly opening the door and calling to him in dishabille she is vastly chagrined to find him soundly sleeping. His indifference now piques her—and the next development is that she falls deeply in love with him, sends her three "lovers" about their business and, as they pass her window, they behold her in her husband's arms.

Rather a flimsy dramatic structure, it seems to me, but it may be, as London also is saying, that the piece had some merit in its original Italian version. "If so," says one reviewer, "it has suffered a sea change in crossing to England."

"People Like Ourselves," the new play by Robert Vansittart, with which Ethel Warwick will resume her career as an actress-manager at the Globe Theater in London, is expected to duplicate last season's success of this same playwright's "Cap and Bells."

The new Vansittart play is a comedy embodying a study of London's social and political life. Three of its principal characters belong to a new-rich family. These are the father, played by Frederick Kerr; the mother, played by Lottie Venne, and the son, played by Kenneth Douglas. The mother and father have centered on their son their hopes of social advancement. They have spared neither money nor pains in having him trained for the life role of a gentleman. He receives his education at Eton and becomes an officer in a crack regiment. And then, to their horror, he promptly proceeds to fall in love with and become engaged to an actress, the part played by Miss Warwick herself. The play's action reaches its finish when this same actress, scorned by her fiance's purse-proud and parvenu-timid parents, turns out nevertheless to be the good genius of the story and the savior of the family credit.

ASKS FOR THREE WARSHIPS

Kinkaid Urges House to Appropriate for Immediate Construction.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Representative Kinkaid of New Jersey today asked the House to appropriate for the immediate construction of three dreadnaughts, one to be built at the New York Navy Yard.

President Wilson will discuss the naval policy with his Cabinet Tuesday.

BURTON HOLMES WILL SHOW "NEW MANILA"

The opening travelogue in Burton Holmes' series, beginning Tuesday afternoon and evening at the Odeon, relates his experiences in Manila during the past spring and summer, under the title "The New Manila."

During the insurrection, 14 years ago, Mr. Holmes was in the Philippines, so that the travelogue which he is to present to his audience this season institutes a striking comparison between the old Manila, fresh from Spanish rule, and "The New Manila," a splendid example of what Uncle Sam can accomplish as a regenerator in transforming a city of decay and filth into the model city of the Far East.

Many motion pictures and truthfully colored lantern slides will give all the principal phases of family life and activity in and about the city; Negrito dances, cockpit scenes and glimpses into the markets and by-ways of the old city will be compared with sight-seeing trips through the busy business sections, along the magnificent boulevards and up and down the Pasig River.

Other motion pictures will depict such interesting scenes as the drill of 3000 prisoners in Bilibid, the model prison of the world, while the travelogue will end with a "crazy" picture showing motor cars ascending the zigzags of the famous Benguet road—a superb piece of Uncle Sam's engineering—on the way to Baguio.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 11.—It costs the average Wisconsin student $381 a year to get his university education. The total expenditures made in Madison by 5000 regular session students makes a total of $1,909,000. Wisconsin is the largest popular university in the country. If the summer session students were added in this computation the total figure would pass $2,046,000. This is for a period of 38 weeks for regular students and six weeks for summer session attendants.

Boarding house and rooming house proprietors unquestionably carry off the greatest revenue. These two items alone call for the expenditure of $1,235,000 each college year. The average cost per room is $2.25. Some students pay as high as $4.50 to $6.25 per week for a room, but the average is $2.25.

Board varies from $4 to $5.50 per week, but the average is $4.25. In most boarding houses in the "Latin Quarter" the price is $4.50, with a 25-cent reduction for payment in advance.

Entertainment for the 5000 young men and women annually costs them more than $90,000. The figure of $92,000 is a conservative estimate made at a meeting of representative students and men closest to student life in all its phases. This same body set the amount of money spent for liquors at $20,000, which is an average of $5.26 for the 3800 men students. This does not imply that all or the majority of students drink or that they are heavy drinkers. Most of the students do not indulge in any intoxicants of any nature and few are regarded as heavy drinkers.

Cigars, tobacco, pipes, cigarettes and smoking equipment annually takes $12,000 or more from the student pocket. This calls for the annual expenditure of $4.20 a student. Cigarettes and pipes are the most common form of smoke enjoyed by the average student.

Books are by far a minor item in college life. Although such as law, medical and chemistry students often pay as high as $25 or more for books, the average student does not expend more than $10 for all the books, tablets, stationery, pens and pencils which he uses during the entire year.

When so large a body of young people get together the rivalry for excellency in appearance affects no mean proportion of the entire group, and it can be safely said that the annual average of $50 per student for clothes could be materially reduced if a "common sense" attitude were assumed by the majority which aims always to be "correctly dressed."

When one figures that it costs more than $160,000 a month to pay the faculty of the university, the receipts of $225,000 in tuition appears like a minor item. The average resident fee is $12, with $1 or $2 additional in the first few years for gym, laboratory and other fees. Nonresidents average $35 and some in special courses nearly $60.

Actor Knight Says America Is Drama's Hope

eral habit of the mind is much more introspective than it used to be, but that there is a much wider interest in the practical problems of social and political life.

"I can remember the time when you never heard current affairs discussed from the pulpit; but at the present day you can hear a sermon any Sunday on any one of a dozen subjects which people talk about at the dinner table. So it is with the theater; the public demands that the subjects with which it is familiar in daily life shall be dealt with in the plays of modern dramatists.

"It is the quality of bringing to bear upon the theories and foibles of the day extraordinary powers of observation and a trenchent wit that has made the wide popularity of Mr. Bernard Shaw's plays."

"So many actors have said so many farewells to the stage that I feel justified in asking you if this is really to be regarded as your last appearance," I ventured.

The great actor paused before replying. One hand, thin, nervous, full of character, reposed motionless upon the arm of his chair, the other he raised slowly to his forehead, allowing it to rest for an instant before his eyes. There was something tragic in the gesture, a spirit of renunciation, an air of finality. But if a sigh, scarcely audible, was his farewell to the past, his greeting to the future was a smile—gentle, friendly, full of hopeful assurance.

"Yes, this is really good-by," he concluded. "I look forward now to enjoying those pleasures of family which an actor must renounce during his career on the stage. I am content to make way for others while there still remain to me the energy and the ambition which makes life

GIRL WINS SUIT; RETAINS LAND DEEDED BY FATHER

Judge Decides That Man Who Sold Property to Daughter Cannot Recover.

The suit of William H. Hoover against his daughter, Miss Frances A. Hoover, a public stenographer, to set aside a conveyance of realty, was decided in favor of the defendant by Judge Grimm Friday. The property, located at 2616 Hodiamont avenue, was conveyed to Miss Hoover by her father Sept. 28, 1907. In the suit he alleged fraud and set forth that his daughter represented he was indebted to her about $2000. The property had been bequeathed to him by his deceased wife.

Miss Hoover denied her father's charge and declared the property had been purchased with money earned by her and put in the mother's name. After the latter's death, Miss Hoover said, members of the family agreed she should have title to the realty and they signed deeds vesting their interest with their father, who subsequently by warranty deed conveyed the property to Frances, subject to a life interest for himself. He occupies the premises as his home.

In deciding the case Judge Grimm upheld the defense interposed that the statute of limitations operated as a bar to recovery in this case, even had fraud been proved, because the suit was not started until more than five years after the discovery of the alleged fraud, the Court held. Upon hearing the Court's ruling the lawyer for the plaintiff asked leave to take a nonsuit in the case, and this was granted.

QUIT MEAT IF YOUR BACK HURTS, SURELY FLUSH YOUR KIDNEYS WITH SALTS

Eating too much meat forms uric acid, which clogs the Kidneys, irritates the Bladder and causes Rheumatism.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acid so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder trouble.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.—ADV.

STOPPED HIS DRINKING

This Wife and Mother Saved Her Husband Over Ten Years Ago

She Will Gladly Tell You How

FREE

Write to Her Today. Send No Money. She Has Nothing to Sell

For over 20 years Jas. Anderson of Hillburn, N. Y., was a confirmed drunkard. His case was about as bad as it could be, but a little over ten years ago his devoted wife, after years of trying, finally succeeded in stopping his drinking entirely.

Write to this woman if you have a relative or friend who drinks

Not only did she save Mr. Anderson, but she stopped the drinking of her brother and several of her neighbors as well. All this she accomplished with a simple home remedy which any one can get and use. And she now desires to tell every man and woman who has a relative or friend who drinks, just what it is.

It can be given secretly if desired, and every reader of this notice who is interested in curing a dear one of drinking should write to Mrs. Anderson at once. Her reply will come by return mail in a sealed envelope. She does this gladly, in hopes that others will be benefited as she was. One thing she asks, however, and that is that you do not send money, for she has nothing to sell. Her complete address is 49 Hill Av., Hillburn, N. Y.

NOTE—This offer should be accepted at once by all who have dear ones who drink. In fact, every one who has to contend in any way with drunkenness should know about it. Therefore, if you do not write Mrs. Anderson yourself, CUT THIS NOTICE OUT and mail it to a friend who could use her advice. And even though you do answer it, MAIL IT TO SOMEONE ELSE who you think would like to know what Mrs. Anderson used. In other words, let this notice reach as many as possible, for Mrs. Anderson will reply to every letter, no matter how many she receives.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE KANSAS' WEAPON AGAINST DIVORCE

Course Is Installed in Rural Schools to Prepare Country Girls as Homemake[illegible]

ECONOMY IS THE KE[illegible]

Statistics of Brides Traine[illegible] Higher Schools Show N[illegible] Separations.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 11.—Domestic science is a cure for the divorce courts, in Kansas at least, and this State is extending its domestic science work as rapidly as possible and even into the country district schools.

Kansas was rather slow, taking up domestic science as a regular part of of its school work and it is only within the last year or two that really effective work has been done. And it is only recently that Kansas has found that wives' knowing how to cook good meals and get them cheaply in times of high prices and knowing how to sew a little and keep a house in good shape had any effect on the divorces.

But the big Kansas schools have the figures to prove the assertion that domestic science is a divorce cure and Kansas is after the divorces.

There have been almost four thousand girls who have completed the work in domestic science at the Kansas Agricultural College, and according to the best available records about 2600 of these girls have married. At the State university about 2000 girls have taken the domestic science work and 1200 are married. At the normal school and its various branches 2000 girls have taken the work and about 600 are married.

Not One of These Divorced.

Not a single girl who took the complete domestic science course at any of the State schools has ever sought a divorce and as far as the information can be secured not a single one has separated from her husband.

For three years domestic science has been made a part of the work in the high schools of the State. The State itself believes so much in the value of this study that it pays each high school $200 a year as an inducement for the School Board to establish domestic science. This money goes toward the payment of the salary of the domestic science teacher. Now the State proposes to aid the rural schools, which will teach domestic science to the country boys and girls by requiring every country school teacher to take a six months' course in that work before she is eligible to teach and the State will furnish the necessary supplies to each school district for carrying on the study in the country schools.

All High Schools Have Course.

There is not a high school in Kansas which does not have at least a full year of domestic science work, for the girls who expect to go into the home. The country girl often does not go to school beyond the district work, and the State feels that she is being neglected in not having the same opportunity as her city cousin.

There are about 50 school districts where the teachers and the districts have purchased an oil stove and a few pots and pans and domestic science is being taught on a small but just as complete a scale as in the cities where the schools have a thousand dollars invested in equipment. Kansas now authorizes the schools to purchase this equipment and the next Legislature will be asked for funds to enable the State to furnish it to the country schools free.

The girls in the country schools, and the boys, too, where domestic science is taught, bring their noon lunches uncooked and under the supervision of the teacher the lunch for all the children is cooked each school day in the school room. The girls are divided into sections. One section cooks the meats, another prepares the vegetables another looks after the bread, often biscuits or warm corn bread, and another section washes the dishes. Each child furnishes his own plate, knife, fork and spoon and a cup which may be used for soups or coffee.

INDIAN, 80, NEVER LIVED IN A HOUSE

Chippewa Tribeman at East Bay, Mich., Forced to Move Tent by Frost.

EAST BAY, Mich., Oct. 11.—The touch of frost that has sent the Southern tourists flying homeward has caused John Pe-Quon-Ga, the Chippewa Indian, to move his tent back toward the home of his people.

"Old John" has never learned to live in a house while the sun shines. He is as strongly in favor of the out-of-door life as were his ancestory, and each spring he leaves the Indian home down Grand Traverse Bay and creeps slowly to Traverse City, visiting white and redskin friends on the way and moving his tent once a week. The fish he catches are his principal food, supplemented by gifts of potatoes and bread. He usually reaches Traverse City in time for the fall circuses and reunions, which are a magnet to him. He is thought to be almost 80 years old.

"Old John is full of Indian legends and he has an unshakable belief in all of them. The common hop toad he believes to be his greatest enemy, while the wild rabbit he looks upon as a relative. Like many of his people who never have been separated from their legends and tradition[illegible]

Again—That Remarkable Offering

As hundreds of our patrons will remember, we presented a similar offering just about one year ago—the success of that sale was so phenomenal that we immediately made our plans to secure another lot of these handsome Bed-Davenports so that the offering could be repeated at the opening of this Fall season.

Our Order Called for Carloads

All through the Summer season—while you probably were away on your vacation, we have kept one of the biggest furniture factories busy on these Bed-Davenports—our order was for a tremendous quantity for all our various stores—and we secured them at a price that permits us to offer these Bed-Davenports at the same great saving as in the previous season.

Exactly Like Cut—Our Most Popular Design

The illustration shows this handsome Bed-Davenport exactly as it is—but to appreciate its size, construction and beauty of finish you must come and see it for yourself. It is big, broad and comfortable—the frames are of solid oak and finished in a manner that would do credit to the finest class of furniture.

The Upholstering Is Superb

In placing our contract for these Bed-Davenports — we particularly specified a high grade of Royal Leather—a fabric that looks for all the world like genuine leather—and will give even better service than real leather often does, as it will never peel, rub or crack. The back and seat are richly tufted over rows of spiral oil-tempered springs and the interior construction throughout is the very best.

A Bed in Four Seconds' Time

Here you have a handsome Parlor Davenport by day—and can be instantly converted into a big, broad, comfortable double bed at night—it is almost automatic in action, works so easy that a child can open it—and has a roomy compartment underneath in which to store the bed clothes when not in use.

Note the Price and Terms

We are not exaggerating a particle when we tell you that equal value cannot be seen elsewhere in this city under $25.00—our special price in this sale is only $14.75—and the terms of payment are equally pleasing—all you pay is $1.00 cash and this beautiful Bed-Davenport will be delivered to your home and you can pay the balance $1.00 a month. BACK FROM THE FARM

The Beauties of Nature, Solitude and Winter Are All Right for Poetic Contemplation but a City Man Soon Loses His Enthusiasm Over Them, After a Period of Harsh Practical Experience, and Longs to Be Back in Town.

And, When You Enter the Office in the Morning, Mud-Bespattered and Weary From Your Journey From the Suburbs and Your Business Associates Say, 'Hello, Si!' You Decide at Once to Give Up That Bungalow and Return to the Steam-Heated Flat.

BY W. H. JAMES.

GREGARIOUS—Habitually moving in flocks or herds; tending to flock or herd together; not habitually solitary or living alone—Webster's Dictionary.

THE definition cited is accompanied by the usual dictionary quotation exemplifying the use of the word. Here is Mr. Webster's selection:

"No birds of prey are gregarious.—Ray."

I never met this man Ray, but unless he is a member of the rather numerous Sting Ray family I am sure I could convince him that he didn't know the first principles of the true gregarious instinct which caused me to move back to the city after suffering for nearly two years with an acute case of bungalowitis. This is a disease for which, thus far, no scientist has devised an antitoxin. It is seldom fatal. The patient usually recovers and lives—somewhere else.

Man is a gregarious animal. He likes to move in flocks or herds and he does not like to be habitually solitary or alone.

That is the principal reason why I came back to the city. But I have a serious quarrel to pick with this man Ray who asserts that birds of prey are never gregarious. It is plain to be seen that Ray was a nature faker.

Probably there is a time in every man's life when he dreams of owning, leasing, renting or squatting on a suburban or country estate. He isn't happy till he gets there. And then he falls into the clutches of the gregarious birds of prey.

First among these is a gaudy creature known as BEAUTIES OF NATURE.

I admit that there are few passing pleasures which compare with the average city man's first view of the bungalow which for a shorter or longer period is going to be his substitute for a home. It appeals to him as an island of content surrounded by the BEAUTIES OF NATURE.

Everything Looks Lordly and Gorgeous at First

HOW lordly are the hills which rise behind the bungalow. How gorgeous the trees clad in the fresh green of their spring foliage.

The city man suddenly transported to these surroundings is raised to the seventh heaven of happiness in prospect. At last he has found the surroundings which will inspire him to do his best work. After all that is the ultimate mainspring of human action.

For the first six months he contemplates the BEAUTIES OF NATURE and, when he has exhausted all of those which are in sight, he goes far afield over hill and dale in search of more, the result that in addition to healthful exercise he acquires a habit of physical fatigue which makes it impossible to ward off the attacks of the second gregarious bird of prey, whose name is SOLITUDE.

When the city man goes to the country he finds something awesomely inspiring in the sudden falling of the night. He sits on the front porch of his bungalow and says unto himself: "Isn't the SOLITUDE delightful?" Which is quite true. Solitude as an appetizer or a dessert in the feast of life is a very fine thing, but as a steady diet it isn't filling. The man who falls under the spell of solitude might in time become a poet or a painter, but he would never be anything useful—and above all the city man must be useful or give up his place to another.

Turning Point Comes When You Want to See Picture Shows

THE first mistrust of solitude comes when little Willie sighs and wistfully says: "Gee, I wish we could go to a picture show." The country never seems the same after that. It marks the turning point. Six miles from a picture show. Ten cents car fare to get to it. Ten cents to come back. A nickel each way for the kid. Four Stygian blocks to walk to the car. One hour of entertainment. Two hours on the cars with one or more transfers. A long dark walk back to the bungalow with [illegible] Willie in one hand and a bag of peanuts in the other. That breaks the spell of SOLITUDE forever.

Another of the country's gregarious birds of prey is WEATHER. There is much more weather in the country than in the city. It is like the little old man of the sea—always sitting on your neck. If the sun shines it burns up your garden. If it rains you come to the startling realization that WEATHER is an evil genius bent on transforming the BEAUTIES OF NATURE into an oozy compound of yellow clay and ditch water. Somehow that lordly hill behind the bungalow never looks the same again. And when the city man arrives at the office with his shoes covered and his clothing spattered with the BEAUTIES OF NATURE some spick and span clerk on a high stool sarcastically says: "Hello, Si. When did you get in?"

No city man should continue to live in the country after his urban acquaintances begin to call him "Si."

And the Limit Is Reached When Winter Season Comes

UNTIL he has lived in the country the city man has not even a passing acquaintance with that gregarious bird of prey called WINTER. This is a long, dreary period of snowdrifts, gas or electric light bills compounded, devised and concocted by a privately-owned public service corporation not in business for its health, high-priced feed for winter-laying hens that don't lay, water served through a conscienceless meter and, beefsteak and pork chops at radium prices.

Sir Francis Bacon wrote that it was false economy for one to live in a suburban home too near a great city. All of the good things, he said, would pass you by on their way to the city and you would have to buy them back at an increased price.

Cured of my bungalowitis I am back in town. A friend of mine who lives in the suburbs has laying hens and I am buying eggs from him. He has a beautiful place. I wish I owned it. I would rent it to some city man with a hankering to associate with those gregarious birds of prey BEAUTIES OF NATURE, SOLITUDE and WINTER.

As Pope said, the proper study of mankind is man. I am now studying man gregariously and not vicariously. He is much more interesting than the BEAU[illegible] OF NATURE.

Illinois' Contrasting Senators.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.

IT has come to pass in this decadent era that it is possible to mistake a Democrat for a Republican, with nothing but clothes and general get-up to go by. To look at Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman of Illinois, nobody would suppose that he was a Republican. Everything about him, his loosely hanging clothes, the old-fashioned spectacles clinging precariously to the lower length of his nose, his nineteenth century collar and tie, his rusty gaiters with pull straps and wrinkled white cotton socks, loudly acclaim him a fearless tribune and tireless [illegible] of the common pee-pul. But he isn't. He is only a Republican.

And then there is Senator J[illegible] Hamilton Lewis, who also comes from Illinois. Everything about him, his perfumed pink whiskers, the faultlessly-fitting waistcoat, the boiled shirt, the nifty cravat, the rose in his button hole, the patent leather shoes and the, yes, the spats, proclaim him a Republican of the Republicans. But he isn't. He is a Democrat.

And the worst thing about it is that no change can be hoped for. Jim Ham and his pink whiskers would never do in Sherman's outfit and is impossible to dream of Sherman coming in Jim Ham's scenery. Only one explan[illegible] has been offered that commands credence. [illegible] is that they must somehow have [illegible] when they were [illegible]

BRIDGE ARBITRARY HEARINGS MAY BE HELD IN ST. LOUIS

Commerce Commission Will Adjourn From Chicago if Move is Deemed Advisable.

TERMINAL TOLLS INVOLVED

Most of the Evidence Will Be Taken in Chicago Beginning Oct. 27.

Harlan Will Arrange for Further Hearings

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.

Editor Post-Dispatch, St. Louis.

CAREFUL examination of pleadings in Illinois coal cases makes it clear that record cannot be closed in fairness to St. Louis interests without having a further hearing there. This will be arranged and I thank you for calling my attention to the matter. HARLAN, Commissioner.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Part of the testimony in the "bridge arbitrary case," involving the tolls exacted by the St. Louis Terminal Railroad Association, will be taken in St. Louis. The hearings under the direction of Commissioner James S. Harlan of the Interstate Commerce Commission will begin Oct. 27 in Chicago. Most of the evidence will be heard in Chicago, but after the case is formally opened, if it apears to Harlan that it would be more convenient to local witnesses if sessions are held in St. Louis, he will adjourn to that city.

It has been arranged for months, Commisisoner Harlan declared today, to hold the hearings in Chicago. It is evident, he explained, that the five cases involve practically one issue and that they should be heard together to avoid repetition in the taking of testimony.

The rates involved, Harlan said, are from points of origin in Illinois. The cases involve an effort to regroup the coal mines of Illinois.

The commission must proceed with dispatch, because a decision has been asked for by April 1, because of certain existing contracts between operators and employers.

Harlan said he had suggested to P. Taylor Bryan of St. Louis that the people in St. Louis who are interested in the case be represented at Chicago the first day or two and after that time if it seems advisable he may adjourn to St. Louis to close the testimony.

The Post-Dispatch suggested editorially that the hearing on the bride arbitrary case should be held in St. Louis, because the testimony of a great many St. Louis business men would be required and it would be a hardship to [illegible] as [illegible] to go to Chicago to testify much [illegible] that is purely local to St. [illegible]. The Post-Dispatch retained Attorney E. C. Crow to aid in the presentation of the bridge arbitrary case and he was special prosecutor for the Government before the United States Supreme Court.

TWO STRIKERS CONFESS TO MURDER OF DEPUTY

Prisoners Say Officer Was Held While One of Band Shot Him Dead.

CALUMET, Mich., Oct. 11.—According to the confessions of Lukka Plese and George Briski, copper strikers, made today to Prosecuting Attorney Lucas, Deputy Sheriff James Pollock, Jr., who was killed at the Isle Royale Mine, Wednesday morning, was shot by Joseph Manerich. Manerich was shot by Pollock, and died Thursday night. The nine men implicated in the affair were last night arraigned on the charge of murder and their examination was adjourned for two weeks. Six, including Plese and Briski, have confessed.

Briski declared in his confession that the party of strikers started out with the intention of attacking Pollock. Plese stated that when they met Pollock the deputy shot Manerich and that he then held Pollock's arms while Manerich took Pollock's revolver away and shot Pollock with it. Briski corroborated this part of the story.

The discrepancy in the confessions is that the bullet taken from Pollock's head was of different caliber from that of Pollock's gun.

The strikers were orderly this morning, contenting themselves with peaceable parades.

ONE DEAD, MANY HURT IN WISCONSIN STORM

Train Blown Off Track, Stock Killed and Property Damage Runs Into Thousands.

LA CROSSE, Wis., Oct. 11.—One dead, many injured, many thousand dollars worth of damage to buildings, much livestock killed, wires down, trains running far behind schedule and one train blown off the track, are the results of a storm in Western Wisconsin.

Walter Spangler, aged 27, was struck by lightning near New Amsterdam, Wis., and killed. Many around Sparta, Tomah and Viroqua sustained broken arms and other injuries.

A freight train was blown off the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul track between New Lisbon and Mauston and the cars were piled in a heap, delaying traffic for hours. Factory buildings at Tomah, La Crosse and Onalaska were unroofed. Miles of tobacco sheds, with their contents, southeast of Viroqua, were destroyed.

RMEN SAY COMPLAINT EEN IGNORED

of Exchange Wants ommission to Take Acon Interstate Tariff.

ULE NOT IN FORCE

san Points Out Law Vioas Complained Of and Proper Consideration.

umbermen's Exchange, which h the Public Service Commis- Jefferson City a complaint the Frisco, Iron Mountian tton Belt railroads, charging iey were violating the State exacting unreasonable rates rstate shipments of lumber, ed yesterday through its sec- George McBlair, astonish- t the indifference with which ommission treated the comnswer to the complaint, Secre- T. M. Bradbury sent the ex- e merely a copy of the com- on's ruling on the point in- l, and stated that he under- that the railroads were going ntest it. The answer of Secre- Bradbury was so vague and in- ite, that McBlair sent him a let- tating that it was highly unsat- tory.

Refers to Commission's Rule.

ule No. 8 of the commission, to ch Bradbury referred the ex- nge, states that where two or re railroads handle a shipment, the ough rate from point of origin to tination must apply, and that re shall be no ra rate charged. is rule was made a month ago, and e railroads were directed to comply ith it in five days.

The exchange in its letter to the ommission stated that the commission should know what the railroads were going to do relative to complying with the ruling.

Forced to Pay Illegal Rate.

"We beg to direct your attention to the fact that the lumbermen and tiemen of this State are being forced to pay what your commission confirms us in stating is an illegal rate," McBlair said in his second letter to the commission. "This being the case, we respectfully direct your attention to questions 1, 2 and 3 in our letter of the 6th, which questions were for the purpose of learning whether our interests are to be protected from these violations of the law by the Cotton Belt, Frisco, Iron Mountain, etc., through the action of your commission or through the office of the Attorney-General.

"We have always understood that the Public Service Commission was created not only to bring about equitable rates in Missouri, but to protect the interests of shippers and receivers of freight as well. It, therefore, comes to us as a natural conclusion that inasmuch as the law has been violated for the last three or four months by these roads and these roads have paid no attention to your conference ruling No. 8, that proceedings by your honorable commission against these roads would be taken. We cannot understand why, under the circumstances, we should be advised of your 'understanding that the railroads will contest this matter.'

"If your commission desires instances of the violation of this law we shall gladly furnish you with same."

Entitled to Consideration.

"It seems to us that our complaint, involving the validity of freight charges amounting to a tax of millions of dollars a year on the lumber industry of the State, was entitled to the serious attention of the commission," McBlair said in an interview with a Post-Dispatch reporter. "The secretary of the commission either answered the complaint without comprehending its significance or the commission failed to give it proper consideration.

"We expect to press the matter further in an effort to get relief from the rates that are extremely detrimental to the lumber industry of St. Louis."

WIRELESS STATION AT C. B. C. GETS U. S. RECOGNITION

It Is First Plant in Missouri Officially Known by Government.

ONLY 19 IN COUNTRY

Operators at Arlington Are in Daily Touch With St. Louis.

The wireless station at Christian Brothers' College has been officially recognized by the United States Government, and is the only station in Missouri which has been given such recognition. It is one of only 19 such official stations in the United States. Announcement of this recognition was made at the college yesterday, after the equipment had been made to conform in every detail with the requirements of the Government's radio laws.

The wireless fraternity of St. Louis was in daily touch with Arlington, the Government's powerful station near Washington, for nearly six months before any other station in St. Louis.

The radio laws classify stations as Government, commercial, technical, experimental or amateur. Call letters are assigned to each station and registered in a list published by the Government. The call, 9YC, C. B. C.'s call, indicates not only its location but that it is both a technical and experimental station.

Brother Berchmans gives an interesting account of the work.

"The sending range of a station depends on the number of kilowatts used, and, to some extent, on its wave length and sharpness of tuning," he said. "The radio laws allow amateurs to use power of not more than one kilowatt, and they must be able to tune their sets so that they will not interfere with any boat or station working under the international radio-telegraphic regulations. Special stations are allowed to use 10 kilowatts and a wave length not to exceed 600 meters.

Can Send 1000 Miles.

"C. B. C. permit allows the use of 10 kilowatts of power and a 600-meter wave length. Ten kilowatts will light 400 tungsten electric lights such as are used in the ordinary lighting of houses. This power gives the station sufficient electrical energy to send messages 1000 miles easily.

"Wireless waves may be thought of as going out from a central point as waves go out from a central point when a stone is thrown into a calm body of water, with this exception that radio waves, like the light waves from a candle, go in all directions with a special attraction for the earth. If we could measure the distance from the crest of one of these waves to the crest of the following wave we would have the wave length of that station.

"By saying that a station has a wave length of 600 meters is meant that from the time that one pulsation leaves the aerial until the next leaves it the first has traveled 600 meters, or about three-eighths of a mile. Although these waves travel at the rate of over 180,000 miles per second, yet they can be measured with precision.

"To receive these waves the receiving station must be in tune and must have a detector and some sort of phone. A phone is used because each station emits a sound more or less musical and not a series of clicks as are heard in the ordinary telegraph station. A detector is usually a crystal of some ore or a similar contrivance which rectifies the incoming impulses so that they will act on the magnets of the phones and make the dots and dashes audible.

Stations Must Be Duplicates.

"That one station may be able to receive another the two must theoretically be duplicates of each other. In practice the receiving station may be made a duplicate of any other station by means of small transformers, with many taps on both primary and secondary. Condensers may be attached to these tuning coils as they are called, thereby greatly increasing the efficiency of the station.

"Most beginners make their own tuning coils. Such apparatus is often better than the manufactured article because made for local conditions. By tuning with these attachments all stations not having a given wave length are eliminated.

On Oct. 4 C. B. C. started its first long distance work when it called up C. B. C. of Memphis, Tenn., to announce the result of the Christian U.-C. B. C. game. Memphis is completing its station and will be in communication with St. Louis this week.

Instruction in wireless has been in progress nearly a year at C. B. C. Virgil Simpson of 1250 Union avenue is an amateur authority on "tuning up" sets. Besides building his entire station, from erecting his house to designing and winding his own two kilowatt 40,000 volt-transformer, he has made many delicate measuring instruments with the result that his station is next in loudness to that of C. B. C.

Among the students of C. B. C. there are five who have erected and equipped their own stations and listen in nightly to Arlington, Key West, Guantanamo, Colon, Cape Cod, and other high-power long-distance stations. The time signals sent out every night by the station at Arlington, Radio, Va., and often repeated by Key West, Fla., are received by nearly all amateur stations in St. Louis at 9 and 10 p. m.

ALWAYS good, and good always, are "BUCK'S" Stoves and Ranges.

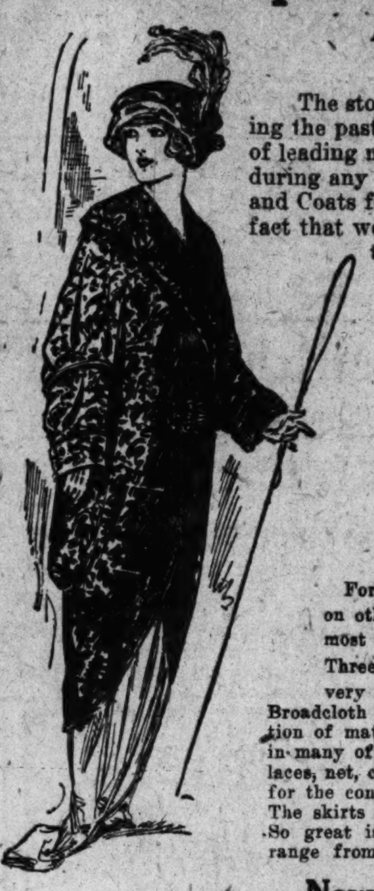
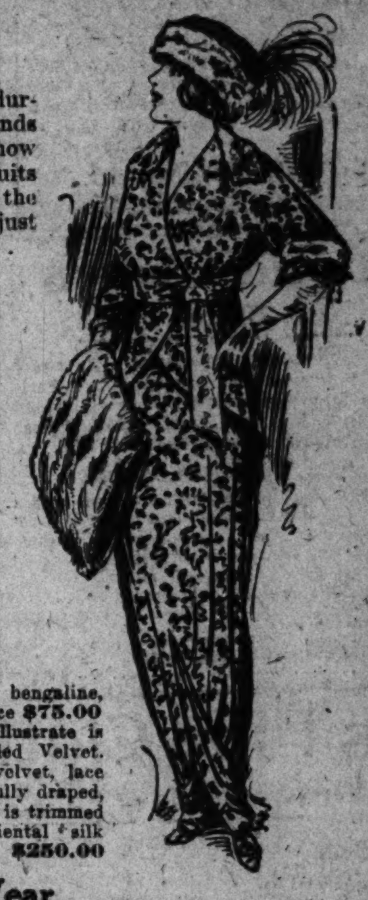
An Incomparable Selection of New Suits and Coats
Awaits You at the Vandervoort Store —Some Suited for the Horse Show





The stock in our Coat and Suit Section has been greatly augmented during the past week by the addition of many new models fresh from the hands of leading manufacturers. Those who contemplate attending the Horse Show during any of the afternoons will find it to their advantage to select their Suits and Coats for this occasion early. We wish to emphasize most strongly the fact that we are prepared to supply anyone—whatever their means—with just the garment suited to their taste and requirements.

Broadcloth Suits at $27.50 to $85.00

A very handsome line of broadcloth Suits is being shown in a wide diversity of colors and styles, including those with the nobby short coats or with the popular cutaway or fancy Russian blouse. Some of these suits are made on semi-tailored lines, while others are trimmed with fur, velvet, plush and embroidery. The skirts show the new tier effects as well as the popular peg-top, draped and slashed models. Prices on these range from $27.50 to $85.00

Handsome Two and Three-piece Suits

For wear at the Horse Show and on other occasions we are making a most elaborate display of Two and Three-piece Suits, made from the very finest Silk, Plush, Chiffon, Broadcloth and Silk Faille. A combination of materials is most effectively used in many of these new models. Fine filmy laces, net, chiffon and fur are used mostly for the construction of bodices and coats. The skirts show the peg-top caped styles. So great is the variety that our prices range from $52.50 to $475.00

Two of Our Most Beautiful Suits

One very stunning Combination Suit is a two-piece model. It has a box-plaited Russian blouse coat of bengaline silk, richly trimmed with Marten, while the skirt is of very handsome brocaded silk-and-wool bengaline, made on peg-top lines and draped. Price $75.00

The very beautiful suit that we illustrate is a three-piece model of rich Brocaded Velvet. The bodice of this garment is of velvet, lace and Oriental Silk; the skirt is gracefully draped, while the coat has cutaway lines and is trimmed with Fitch fur and a girdle of Oriental silk tapestry in pastel shades. Price $250.00

New Autumn Coats for Utility and Afternoon Wear

A most comprehensive display of Fall Coats is being made in both three-quarter and seven-eighth lengths. These are of Velour and Plain and Crushed Plushes, in all of the prevailing shades for Fall. Some are trimmed with panne velvet, heavy silk braid and in rich Persian effects, while others are in styles suitable for semi-dress wear. All of these coats are lined with plain or fancy pompadour silk. Prices $27.50 to $60.00

The Coat shown in the illustration is a copy of a Bernard model and is made from a rich Brocaded Plush. It is of three-quarter length and draped and has kimono sleeve which makes it decidedly comfortable when worn over evening or afternoon costumes. Price $37.50

Many new Coats for Fall are being shown of black broadcloth, in three-quarter, seven-eighth and full lengths. Choice can be had of either plain, semi-fitting or loose fancy draped styles and they are lined with silk of contrasting color. Many are trimmed with velvet, embroidery and heavy silk braid. Prices $27.50 to $50.00

For automobile wear we recommend a special line of Wool Plush, Velour de Laine, Chinchilla, Boucle Cloth and Novelty Cloth Coats that we are showing in seven-eighth and full lengths. These are made on loose box lines with set-in and kimono sleeves; inexpensively priced at $17.50 to $35.00

THE PIANO SALE

All St. Louis Has Been Awaiting
Will Begin Monday Morning at 8:30

At the Trustee's Bankruptcy Auction Sale

of the

Bollman Bros. Piano Co.

1120 Olive Street

Every instrument, with the exception of a few that went to private individuals, was purchased by the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., and we are going to sell them at the lowest prices that have ever been quoted to the public.

That the public fully appreciates what an unusual opportunity this is is evidenced by the fact that we have had any number of inquiries as to when this sale will begin.

Bollman Bros. Piano Co. was one of the oldest and most reputable establishments in the West—they handled instruments of international reputation, and when you realize that these high-grade pianos and player-pianos are to be sacrificed, the occasion is one to arouse widespread interest among everyone who is contemplating buying an instrument.

The values to be obtained at this sale are as unusual as the opportunity is rare. Only the discontinuance of St. Louis' leading piano establishment and the sacrifice of their stock could bring to you such wonderful buying chances. It will pay out-of-town folks to travel hundreds of miles in order to attend this sale. The amount they will save on a high-grade instrument will more than pay them for the time, trouble and expenditure.

This stock consists of—

Steinway Grand Pianos
Sohmer Grand Pianos
R. S. Howard Grand Pianos
Lindeman Grand Pianos
Huntington Pianos
Sterling Pianos
Packard Pianos
Knabe Angelus Players
Angelus Piano Players
Lindeman Player-Pianos
R. S. Howard Player-Pianos
Huntington Player-Pianos
Sterling Player-Pianos

We want to emphasize the fact that the lowest prices ever named for instruments of this quality will be in effect, and coupled with this unusual concession will be our EASY PAYMENT PLAN.

The time for you to buy a piano is now. It is a chance that comes but seldom and you do not want to miss it. The sale will continue until every instrument from the Bollman Bros.' stock is disposed of, but early selection is surely advisable.

Sale will take place in Piano Section—Fourth Floor.

Also in Fourth Floor Annex, near Model Home.

Also on Sixth Floor.

THE PIANO SALE

All St. Louis Has Been Awaiting
Will Begin Monday Morning at 8:30

At the Trustee's Bankruptcy Auction Sale
of the

Bollman Bros. Piano Co.

1120 Olive Street

Every instrument, with the exception of a few that went to private individuals, was purchased by the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., and we are going to sell them at the lowest prices that have ever been quoted to the public.

That the public fully appreciates what an unusual opportunity this is is evidenced by the fact that we have had any number of inquiries as to when this sale will begin.

Bollman Bros. Piano Co. was one of the oldest and most reputable establishments in the West—they handled instruments of international reputation, and when you realize that these high-grade pianos and player-pianos are to be sacrificed, the occasion is one to arouse widespread interest among everyone who is contemplating buying an instrument.

The values to be obtained at this sale are as unusual as the opportunity is rare. Only the discontinuance of St. Louis' leading piano establishment and the sacrifice of their stock could bring to you such wonderful buying chances. It will pay out-of-town folks to travel hundreds of miles in order to attend this sale. The amount they will save on a high-grade instrument will more than pay them for the time, trouble and expenditure.

- Steinway Grand Pianos
- Sohmer Grand Pianos
- R. S. Howard Grand Pianos
- Lindeman Grand Pianos
- Huntington Pianos
- Sterling Pianos
- Packard Pianos
- Knabe Angelus Players
- Angelus Piano Players
- Lindeman Player-Pianos
- R. S. Howard Player-Pianos
- Huntington Player-Pianos
- Sterling Player-Pianos

We want to emphasize the fact that the lowest prices ever named for instruments of this quality will be in effect, and coupled with this unusual concession will be our EASY PAYMENT PLAN.

The time for you to buy a piano is now. It is a chance that comes but seldom and you do not want to miss it. The sale will continue until every instrument from the Bollman Bros.' stock is disposed of, but early selection is surely advisable.

Sale will take place in Piano Section—Fourth Floor.

Also in Fourth Floor Annex, near Model Home.

Also on Sixth Floor.

NO SCHOOLS WHEN MOTHER'S TEACHING PLAN PREVAILS

Educational Accomplishments of Girl of 11 Is Proof of Theory's Success.

READY FOR COLLEGE AT 9

At 11 She Speaks and Writes Eight Languages and Teaches Esperanto to Adults.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 11.—Mistress of eight languages, including the polyglot, Esperanto, conversant on leading educational topics of the day, prepared for college, at the age of 9 years, and at present teaching an Esperanto class of adults, and aged but 11 years!

Such are the wonderful accomplishments of Winifred Sackville Stoner, aged 11 years, who, her mother says, "is a product of a theory of natural education."

While Winifred is a daughter of the first woman in America to speak the Esperanto, she does not rely on her mother's genius or influence to aid her in what she already terms her "chosen field of endeavor." The little girl is far more accomplished, even at her tender age, than are pupils in the high schools of the land; in fact, she has been graduated from the studies that are included in a high school course.

Begins Career as Teacher.

On Saturday, Oct. 4, at 7 p. m., the little girl gave her first lessons in Esperanto to a class of about 200 in the Carnegie Music Hall. To those who watched the child as she stood before the class of young men and women explaining the rudiments of Esperanto, the performance was little short of wonderful. Here is how the little lady sums up the universal language:

"Esperanto is my religion. It has done me much good and I am anxious that others learn it. My mother taught me what I know as well as schooled me at an early age in things that are taught most children only after they have reached an age bordering on maturity.

"The spreading of Esperanto on my mother's part is purely missionary. Only recently she began teaching an Esperanto class in the Carnegie Music Hall, where I, too, am giving lessons. Her lessons are free to all. My mother does this because she wants all the people to learn the universal language."

In three months, the young prodigy says, anyone may speak Eesperanto fluently, as it takes no longer than that to learn it.

University Considers Course.

"The idea of teaching Esperanto is now being discussed at the University of Pittsburg," little Miss Stoner continued, "and the deans have voted in favor of including the language as a regular course. I sincerely trust the school will see fit to take decisive action at once in order that all the Pitt students may be given an early opportunity to learn the new language. If Esperanto is adopted there before the first of the year, every student at the school will speak it before school ends in the spring.

"Esperanto is a simple language. You learn 16 rules and you have the entire thing. All that remains to be memorized is the vocabulary. Of that you may learn as little or as much as you like."

Besides being able to speak seven different languages, the little girl writes them equally as well as she writes English. She attributes her accomplishment to the fact that she was taught everything she knows in "play form" by her mother. Knowledge is absorbed unconsciously by this method, she says, and children who are unable otherwise to learn things may be made into bright pupils by this manner of teaching.

Do Away With Schools.

Mrs. Stoner has prepared a book, "Natural Education," that is being printed. The little girl says the methods of teaching advocated by her mother are explained in this book and that she hopes in time to see her theory of mothers teaching their young adopted everywhere. This, she predicts, will do away with schools, but will result in an infinitely wiser race of human beings. The mother proudly asserts that this theory is proved by her daughter's ability and accomplishments.

Chancellor S. B. McCormick of the University of Pittsburgh, says he favors Esperanto as a part of the course at the university and has put it up to the deans.

"Personally, I think Esperanto is a great thing," said Dr. McCormick today. "I have approved it as a part of our curriculum, and of course, it now is in the hands of the deans to say whether it is to be adopted regularly. This action will be taken at a meeting soon but what the decision will be I cannot definitely forecast. However, I almost am positive that it will be included among our courses before the college term is much further advanced."

Mrs. Stoner has offered her services to the school without emolument. She says she is zealous to see the language more generally adopted and, for this reason, is willing to sacrifice her time to teach it to those who wish to learn.

Little Miss Stoner fluently speaks French, German, Italian, Spanish, Welsh, Latin and English.

How to Stop the Liquor and Tobacco Habits Secretly

By a Specialist.

That both the liquor and tobacco habits can be treated secretly at home at very little expense is the claim of a well-known specialist who has treated more than 40,000 cases. In a recent interview, he made the following statement: "The cost of the drugs used to treat the liquor and tobacco habits in the high-priced sanitariums amounts to very little. It is the sanitarium's large profit and the charge for board and room that makes it expensive. Another strange thing is that many of the drugs used in the treatment of both habits are the same, and can be given secretly. Here is a simple inexpensive prescription that can be mixed at home or by any druggist for either the liquor or the tobacco habit in any form. To 3 oz. of water add 20 grains of muriate of ammonia, a small box of Varlex Compound and 10 grains of pepsin. Take a teaspoonful three times a day at meal time. It can be taken by the patient of his own accord, or it can be given secretly in coffee, tea, milk or in the food, as it has practically no taste, color or smell. This prescription is perfectly harmless and will be found very effective, as it contains many of the drugs used in the sanitariums in the treatment of these habits.—ADVERTISEMENT.

News Stories of Anglers and Hunters

By JOCK BELLAIRS

The blow has fallen and local sportsmen now know just where they are. The amended Federal regulations for the protection of migratory birds, made official by the signature of President Woodrow Wilson and announced in his proclamation, practically inhibit water fowl shooting for the St. Louis sportsman, in fact the Missouri sportsman, except during 60 days in the year. This may be explained more fully when it is stated that the Mississippi River from Memphis to Minneapolis is absolutely withdrawn from the duck hunter every day in the year. The bulletin given out by the Department of Agriculture, as stated in this column last Sunday, gave the nimrods some boon in the nature of permission to hunt over the bosom of the Father of Waters during November and December, which would mean about 30 days shooting, for December would hardly be utilized as a duck hunting month in this clime. This bulletin as amended prohibits the shooting of any water fowl on the Mississippi. By some strange kindness or error the Missouri River, as I understand it, is open to the duck hunter during the open season, from its mouth to Nebraska City.

Why this should be only those responsible for the amended regulations will be able to explain. The duck take both waterways in their flight and if it is proper to bar hunting on the Mississippi River, then why not on the Missouri? Or vice versa.

Some of the Regulations.

As the Post-Dispatch stated last Monday, the duck season set down by the Government makes shooting permissible from Sept. 15 to Jan. 1, though the latter date is not inclusive. That means we shall have duck hunting from Sept. 15 to Nov. 15. Only the most hardy would venture out into a blind, there to sit and wait hour after hour, in the inclement weather of late November and December. This season pertains to duck, geese and kindred birds and extends to rail, coot and gallinules. These latter are not listed in the Missouri game laws. The Federal regulations protect woodcock in Missouri and Illinois for five years. Missouri protects the woodcock at all times. The amended regulations protect wood duck in Illinois, but not in Missouri. Jack snipe, golden and black ringed plover and some of the yellow legs may be shot, under Government, from Sept. 1 to Dec. 15. Sand pipers, flickers, pelicans, some of the yellow legs and the worthless pokes are protected.

Outside of the wood duck protection, the Government interfered with Illinois much the same as with Missouri. Illinois beat the Federal regulators on woodcock, the broad-head long bill being protected to 1920. The State laws prohibit sneak boats in duck and water fowl shooting. So do the Federal regulations.

In Missouri there is no embargo as to rabbits, which may be shot and shipped provided you have a license to hunt. The same applies in Illinois. Here quails are in season during December, the day's bag being 10 birds and the bag limit 15 birds. In Illinois the day's bag is 12 birds. We protect prairie chickens altogether. Illinois gives one 15-days' sport at this bird, the season being Nov. 10 to 25.

The only thing that sportsmen are debating is whether they are to submit tamely to being deprived of the spring shooting or will test the law. One lawyer, holding a position of responsibility in Missouri, ventured the assertion that the regulations would not hold in court. Many sporting clubs are touched by the regulations, and these may combine to try the matter in court. This applies particularly to those clubs which have holdings in the sunken lands, to those shooting along the Mississippi River, and in fact to sportsmen in Missouri and Illinois. But independently of these, remember you cannot shoot on the Mississippi or along these shores, but you can hunt on the Missouri.

Great Sport Up North.

Anglers returning from the Northern lakes are repeating stories of wondrous catches made by St. Louisans. Chief among them is the catch of a 42-pound muskie by H. A. Steinwender Jr. of this city. The big fish was landed in Columbus Lake with an ordinary bamboo rod and No. 4 line. It took Steinwender 1 hour and 55 minutes to land the fish and every minute of that period was a thriller. The fish is being mounted.

Steinwender and his party were in camp at Butternut Lake. To get to Columbus Lake meant a tramp of 14 miles. This was done and remembrance of the catch makes the distance but a cheerful jog. As St. Louisans tell the story, Mr. Steinwender did not get his fish until after much patient angling. He used a Dowagiac and when the hit came the barbs held true and the line proved strong.

Another lucky St. Louis pair were Loomis Johnson and Mrs. Johnson. They had rare sport. This couple fished in Battle Lake. A six-pound bass was landed by Mrs. Johnson. Loomis Johnson hitched up with a 12-pound pickerel and landed the pirate after a good hard fight. Johnson used 6-ounce tackle. He tells a fine story of the fishing there. Between upper and lower Lost Lakes the party did the best fishing. The fishing was mainly in rapids, with the current so strong that when a strike occurred the angler had to fight water and fish, and the current, says Johnson, was often stronger than the fish. Other St. Louisans who fared well were John W. Drabelle, who landed 25 small-mouth bass at one afternoon session, three of them weighing five and a half pounds.

Plenty of Good Fishing.

Good fishing is the rule from all quarters. Murdock Lake reports good sport and some fine catches have been reported from Creve Coeur. Stream fishermen have had rare luck. The party of which Joe Mount and S. G. Jones were members, back from the Current River float, report splendid sport.

Spanish Lake suddenly loomed up as a fishing Mecca during the past two weeks. It began with occasional reports and wound up the past week in a series of remarkable catches. Robert Kreutzer and Joseph Miller, after an hour's work, landed 36 striped bass. C. A. Willy and Joseph C. Rengle had a creel of 101 nice ones for a day's work. H. Schmidt had a mixture, one being a two-pound bass which he lost by careless stringing. Emil Wurst and son and Frank F. Schafler and son brought in 137 sunfish and striped bass for a day's fishing there.

Louis Nolte went to several places, mostly near Robertsville. He spent two weeks at the game and his best work for the day was a catch of 21 bass. Some fair hunting has been reported. Duck are down in the sunken lands.

Many large enterprises had their beginning when a good man was found through a Post-Dispatch want ad—Partner Wanted.

Husband Wanted for Polar Heiress.

ROME, Oct. 11.—A matrimonial agency advertises in a Milan journal for a young man willing to marry a beautiful heiress, whose only stipulation is that he should be able to endure a polar climate.

BOYS' JOKE WITH LETTER GETS A YOUTH IN JAIL

They Intercept Letter to Girl, Write an Answer and Arrest Follows His Reply.

EUREKA SPRINGS, Ark., Oct. 11.—When a joke gets a fellow in jail, with prospects for a term in the penitentiary, it ceases to be a joke, according to Samuel Skipworth of Cisco.

Skipworth wrote a letter to a young woman residing near Cisco, in which he spoke of things that were mutually pleasant. Skipworth says that this letter never reached the young woman, but was purloined by a boy relative and another youthful companion from the rural mail box.

The youngsters wrote a letter in answer, the tone of which shocked Skipworth, but not so much so that he did not answer in kind. The boys failed to intercept the second letter, and it went through to its destination. The girl gave the letter to her father and Skipworth was then arrested for sending improper matter through the mails.

Skipworth has been held for further investigation by the Federal grand jury at Harrison and the other boys will probably be given a share of the punishment.

DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS" IS BES IF HEADACHY, CONSTIPATED, BILIOUS

If you're headachy, constipated, bilious or stomach is disordered and you want to enjoy the nicest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced, take a tablespoonful of "California Syrup of Figs" tonight and in the morning all the poison, bile and clogged-up waste will gently move out of the system without griping and you will feel splendid.

Every member of the family should use this fruit laxative as occasion demands. It is just as effective for grandpa as it is for baby. It simply can not injure. Even cross, sick, feverish children just love its pleasant taste and mothers can rest after giving it, because it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing."

For thirty years "California Syrup of Figs" has been recommended by physicians as the ideal stomach, liver and bowel cleanser. Millions of families who are well informed use nothing else, but recently there has come a flood of spurious fig syrups, so we warn the public to ask plainly at drug stores for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," and see that it is prepared by "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no cheaper size. Hand back any "counterfeit" with contempt.—ADV.

In a few cases the estates are being sold to tenants, but in most cases the titled oners have accepted cash offers from speculators and have given their tenants notice to avoid the risk that accompanies the selling by payments.

Few of these great places are being bought by "gentlemen" farmers because of the fear of still higher taxes. They usually are cut up into small farms as extensive farming has not yet made much headway in England.

Women Homesteaders Making Good in Western Kansas

Two Widows Work Their Own Farms

London Census Returns Show 58,000 Women Are Living Alone in London—Items of Peculiar Interest to the Fair Sex.

MRS. MARY CARSON and Mrs. Daisy Shaw, both widows, with families to support, are lonely homesteaders in Seward County, Kan., doing their own work and achieving success.

Mrs. Carson has a farm a few miles from Liberal. She went to Kansas shortly after the death of her husband five years ago, took up a homestead of 160 acres and is making a living for herself and invalid son and becoming prosperous. When she landed in Kansas she only had enough money to pay the entry fees on her land, erect a two-room shack, get a month's provisions and a team of old horses. Now she has a nice cottage, orchards, a large barn and a small herd of cattle. She plows her own fields, sows and plants her own crops and does part of the harvesting. She has raised 11 horses and sold two. She has eight cows and milks four, and has 12 calves and raises more than a hundred chickens each year for market.

The farm is now worth about $3000. All but 30 acres grow wheat and forage crops for her stock, and the 30 acres furnish buffalo grass pasture the year around.

Eight miles away lives Mrs. Shaw. She came six years ago with her husband. He died three months later. Mrs. Shaw "stuck" and next spring will get the patent to land that is now worth about $3000. She has two girls, 11 and 12 years old, and a son, 7 years old. She cultivates 30 acres of forage crops each year for her stock and the rest of her farm is devoted to wheat, handled on shares. She has 13 cows and milks five. She has half a dozen calves and some pigs and four horses. She raises each year enough to keep her stock and chickens through the winter. Her main dependence is upon the butter and eggs and poultry that she sells. The money from what crops has been used in improving the farm.

Tragic Fate of Women of London Who Live Alone

CENSUS returns reveal that there are over 58,000 women in London living alone. One of these, writing to a London newspaper, urges that some social provision should be made for such solitary lives and complains of the limitations that are set to women who are friendless in the metropolis.

"On behalf of the other 58,593 women who are placed as I am," she writes, "may I suggest that the lonely women of London be granted more liberty to live? For nearly 10 years I have lived alone in London and in all that time I have not met one acquaintance whom I could talk to intimately, or whom I could really call 'friend.' Only those who have to endure the terror of living alone know in what narrow circles one has to move when the limits of one's existence are the office or the shop and one's private rooms in a dismal square. In smaller cities it is possible for a woman to go about alone and find the social happiness which every nature seeks. In London it is dangerous for women to be alone. I dare not go to the theater. I dare not dine out. I dare not undertake an occasional trip to the seaside. The experience is maddening, and the life has become to me like that of a bird in a cage, seeking room to fly but denied it. Is there no way out of this cage, whose bars are unseen, but very real?"

Louise Homer's Daughter to Begin Study of Vocal Music.

LOUISE HOMER, famous metropolitan contralto, made her debut singing in a church cantata at Pittsburg when she was 14 years old. She was the daughter of a Pittsburg clergyman. She went to Philadelphia and studied with Miss Abbie Whinnery and then went to Boston, where she studied singing with William Whitney and harmony with Sidney Homer, who fell in love with his attractive pupil and married her. Her oldest daughter, Louise, is to study singing in Philadelphia this winter.

There are four other children.

Started Out to Be an Artist But Humanity Won Her Away.

MRS. CLARA CAHILL PARK of Massachusetts started out in life to be an artist, but she has found something that interests her a great deal more in working to secure the enactment of adequate laws for the benefit of dependent minor children of widowed mothers. A law has been passed and Mrs. Park has been appointed secretary of the commission created by it. Robert Foerster of Harvard University is chairman of the board.

Woman Develops New Idea for Reducing Living Cost.

MRS. HAVILAND H. LUND, formerly in business in Chicago, is one of the moving spirits of the National Land League, which plans to have a garden suburb just outside every great city, hundreds of farming communities grouped about community houses, a free agricultural information office in every city and every back yard made to contribute to the support of the family. It is also hoped to unify in the land league many scattered movements. Miss Lund is traveling through the country in the interest of the league.

In Boston, where the first annual convention of the league was held, the work has already had practical results. The use of five New England farms—comprising a total of 540 acres—has been given to the league for experimental purposes. On each of these farms a colony of boys from the city will be established. Under the direction of experts from the State agricultural college they will both study and practice scientific and intensive farming, fitting themselves to take up farms of their own.

Wealthy Woman, on Honeymoon, Buys Giraffes for Chicago Zoo.

MRS. MOLLIE NETCHER NEWBURGER, proprietor of a Chicago department store, purchased two giraffes while she was on her wedding trip, paying $10,000 for them, and donated them to the Lincoln Park Zoo at Chicago. They are the first giraffes to be seen there. They are to be named Mollie and Newburger in honor of the donor. They were shipped from New York to Chicago on a special car ordinarily used for limousines. Their fare was $250. Mrs. Newburger bought them from Carl Hagenback. They were caught in the Soudan by Walter Erbert. It took him 16 days to walk them to a port.

Sea Serpent Only a Bullock.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Rivermen, lightermen and tugmen who engaged in an exciting hunt on the Humber thought they had discovered a sea serpent in mid-channel off Hull. It turned out to be a bullock, which swam strongly and evaded capture for some time. It was eventually lassoed and towed ashore.

GIRL WHO PROPOSED ASKS $5000 OF MAN WHO WED ANOTHER

Breach of Promise Suit Filed Against Kansas Druggist; He Shows Letters.

HUTCHINSON, Kan., Oct. 11.—If a girl asks a man to marry her, and if he marries another woman instead, can she recover damages for breach of promise? That is the issue in a suit Miss Nannie F. Legg, a Hutchinson stenographer, has brought against R. J. McClay, a druggist of Plainville. She asks $5000, but McClay alleges that it was she who broke the engagement, and his defense will be contained in the letters she wrote to him.

McClay is 54 years old, has two grown sons, and he married a Plainville woman about a year ago. According to his story, Miss Legg was stenographer and bookkeeper at the Plainville mill, and it was she who proposed marriage. He told the story in his testimony.

"It was in September, 1911, that she asked me to marry her," McClay said. "She said she suggested it for my own sake. We came to an understanding that we would marry.

"Miss Legg had a claim in Northeastern Colorado and it was while she was there that she wrote suggesting I get her a diamond ring. She said: 'You can treat it both as an engagement ring and a Christmas present. You know diamonds always are increasing in value, and it will be a good investment anyhow.'

"Following this suggestion, I purchased a diamond ring and gave it to her with the understanding that it was an engagement ring."

Then her love began to cool, McClay said. She came to Hutchinson and obtained a position, and although he urged her to return to Plainville to be married to him, she refused, and finally he gave up and married another woman. He says he was greatly surprised by her suit for breach of promise.

Teach Your Child How to Be Healthy

Regularity of Bowels from Infancy Insures Good Health in Later Years

We cannot all start life with the advantages of money, but every child born is entitled to the heritage of good health. Through unfortunate ignorance or carelessness in the feeding of a baby its tiny stomach may become deranged. The disorder spreads to the bowels and before the r realizes it the two chief or on which the infant's health de are causing it great suffering. e condition is allowed to con grave ailments often result. ere is, however, no occasion for n, and the sensible thing to do—it should be done instantly—is to the baby a small dose of a mild ative-tonic. In the opinion of a at many people, among them such ll-known persons as the parents of ertha Lee Woodward, 3 years old, of Moultrie, Ga., the proper remedy is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Mrs. I. N. Woodward says that little Bertha was troubled with constipation for over a year, and that after trying several different kinds of remedies she found her relief in Syrup Pepsin. It is a mild, pleasant-tasting laxative, which every person likes, does not gripe nor cramp, and contains that most excellent of all digestants, pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is especially intended for infants, children, women, old people, and all others to whom harsh cathartics, salt waters, pills, etc., are distressing. In fact, in the common disorders of life, such as constipation, liver trouble, indigestion, biliousness, headaches, and the various other disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels nothing is more suitable than this mild laxative-tonic, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Three generations of people are using it today, and thousands of families keep it constantly in the house, for every member of the family can use it. It can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a bottle, the latter being the size bought by families who already know its value. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 419 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

Tennyson and a Telescope.

SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE'S "Thoughts and Afterthoughts" (Cassell) are stimulating, suggestive, epigrammatic. The book is decorated by Lovat Fraser, and the frontispiece is from Sargent's portrait of the actor. Delightfully reminiscent, in the first paper on "Our Betters," he tells this tale of Lord Tennyson. The poet was invited to a certain country house, and all the neighboring luminaries of the county had been invited to meet him. After dinner his host asked whether he would like to look at the stars. Tennyson took up the telescope, and, forgetting all else, gazed for 20 minutes at the wonders of the heavens.

"Well, what do you think, Mr. Tennyson?" inquired his host. "I don't think much of our county families," Tennyson replied.

The Jargon of Gentility.

"THERE is nothing so terrible as 'refainement,'" observes Sir Herbert, discussing the vicissitudes of the Cockney accent, and deprecating the latest fashion of squeezing the vowels almost out of recognition, as when "home" becomes "hoerme;" "time" "taime;" "town" "teown;" and "girl" "giarl." And in an "Afterthought" he makes the pertinent suggestion: 'Why should not the gramophone, like the cinematograph, be used for educational purposes? Why should it not be used to perpetuate for future generations a standard pronunciation of the English language? * * * What would we not give today if we could hear on this gramophone the voice of Elizabeth and of Shakspeare!"

"Treasures" at Last.

IN "Columbia" (the tenth volume in the South American Series published by Fisher Unwin), Phanor J. Eder gives us an exhaustive book on the country at the very gates of Panama. From it we gather that Bogota is a Paradise for housewives:

"The domestic problem is reduced to a minimum in Bogota; good domestics are plentiful and cheap—$5 to $10 a month is high pay. In the houses of the well-to-do the servants are well treated and lead happy lives; they have ample quarters of their own, centering round their own patio; and enough of the old patriarchal regime survives to make them really a part of the family."

Edda, the Bogotana.

EDER tells this anecdote of Pombo, the South American poet, who died in 1912. It happened in a New York literary salon presided over by a distinguished Argentine lady. 'Pombo had been presented to her, and she asked him, with much enthusiasm, who was the anonymous poetess, the famous Edda the Bogotana:

"'Do you really find these verses worth reading?' asked Pombo.

"'Worth reading! Verses vibrating with the deepest passions of a woman's soul, so essentially feminine verses, too, exhaling the mysticism, the adoration of a Santa Teresa! Oh! you men! Who among you could write such verses?'

"'Well,' said Pambo, 'Edda is now in New York, and if you want to make her acquaintance'—

"'Speak, man!' cried his hostess, impetuously; 'where does she live?—what's her name? I'll see her tomorrow; I will cover her with kisses!'

"'Then begin, Senora!' said the ugly little Pombo; 'I—I am Edda.'"

"The Twilight Zone."

IN writing of Putumayo, Eder thinks it doubtful whether the perpetrators of the notorious rubber atrocities—the real culprits, the men "higher up"—will ever receive their deserts, in spite of the action of Great Britain and the United States:

"One vital point seems to have been almost ignored in all European and North-American newspaper discussion of the atrocities, and that is, that the region in question lies within the 'twilight zone,' where contending boundaries overlap, and where jurisdiction is claimed by disputing nations, but can be effectively exercised by none without precipitating a war."

"'If, for a single night, guard were not kept in any of the sections I know,' writes the comisario of the Lower Caqueta, in a recent report, 'and the firearms were carelessly left within reach of the natives, in a few hours not a single 'white' would be left in those regions.'"

John Chinaman as "General."

ANOTHER Canadian lady kept a Chinese servant, who proved so satisfactory that she thought he might as well be utilized as footman at one of her receptions. During the morning this hostess gave "John" a special coaching in his duties. She rang at the front door, taught him, when he opened it, to take her card, show her into the drawing-room, and announce her name. After repeating the lesson several times, and knowing the Chinese to be excellent mimics, she had no fear that he would fail. In the afternoon, after making an elaborate toilette, the lady sat in the drawing-room waiting for her guests. Suddenly the bell rang. She listened happily for "John's" announcement; but no "John" appeared. Then the bell rang again—more emphatically. Much annoyed, she had to go to the door herself. And what a surprise awaited her. "John," all smiles, exclaimed: "You foolee me all morning: I foolee you all afternoon!"

A Baboon Hunt.

SCULLY describes, among other things, a baboon hunt. He then goes on to tell of a tame baboon which belonged to a switch tender on the railway line at Uitenhage who had lost his legs in an accident. This baboon used to haul his master down on a trolley every day to the scene of his labors, and there, under his direction, manipulate the switches for him. In the evening the same baboon used to act as waiter at the hotel, carrying trays of liquor to the guests. The only condition the clever animal imposed was that his own particular drink should be on the tray, and that he should consume it before serving the others.

"If anyone attempted to help himself before the 'waiter' was ready to distribute the drinks, a disturbance ensued."

A Bishop Rebuked.

KING CHRISTIAN II of Denmark, who held strong views regarding piracy, managed to put an end to the old "wrecking rights" in his kingdom. The Bishop of Jutland, however, did not see eye to eye with him, and argued, by way of protest, that the Bible said nothing against wrecking.

"Let the Lord Prelate go back," replied the King, "and study the eighth commandment."—Told by Christopher Hare in his interesting monograph, "Maximilian the Dreamer" (Stanley Paul). Although this Christian II held many advanced views as a ruler, he did not shine as a husband to Maximilian's granddaughter, Isabella, who died at Ghent of a broken heart in 1526, at the age of 25.

A Story About Kipling.

DURING an interval in London Scully had rooms in Pimlico with a landlady of snobbish tendencies, who made a cult of "superior persons." He tells this amusing experience:

"I had been for a short visit to Mr. Rudyard Kipling at Rottingdean, and had brought back a bunch of roses from his garden. Seeing that Mrs. Wand was so proud of her celebrities, I thought I would let her know that I, too, knew a celebrity, so when she came to set the breakfast table next morning I pointed to the flowers and said:

"'There, Mrs. Wand, you would never guess where these roses came from; they are from the garden of the great Mr. Kipling.'

"'Mr. Kipling. 'Oo's 'e?'

"'Good gracious!' I exclaimed, 'surely you know who Mr. Kipling is. Why, his autograph is worth a guinea!'

"Mrs. Wand left the room without replying. She returned a few minutes later, with a look of skepticism on her face, and, as she put down the toast rack, remarked:

"'Well, 'e ought to be good-lookin' at that.'"

A Fight With Rinderpest.

IN a second volume—"Further Reminiscences of a South African Pioneer" (Unwin), W. C. Scully embodies his South African recollections from 1876 to 1899. Prominent among many vivid and thrilling experiences was his fight with rinderpest at Nqamakwe in 1897, by means of inoculation with the bile of infected animals—a treatment then in an experimental stage. Scully's work was splendid. He "took risks" with promptitude, established a bile culture camp, and in the teeth of strong native opposition managed, with his helpers, to save over 40,000 head of cattle. At a critical moment he even made use of syringes—of which there was an appalling shortage—destined for another quarter; and we feel that in the circumstances he was perfectly justified. Indeed, we exult with the writer over the fact that "some thrice-blessed duffer in the Cape Town G. P. O. had made the magnificent mistake of putting the parcel in the wrong bag." (The said syringes ought to have gone to the Magistrate of a district nearly 200 mi away!)

OLD FOLKS FIND CROXONE RELIEVES ALL KIDNEY AND BLADDER MISERIES

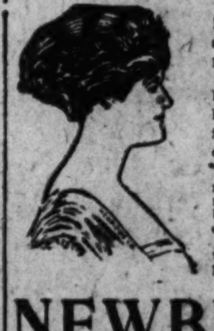
Drives Rheumatic Pains Away, Few Doses Relieve Backache and Bladder Disorders.

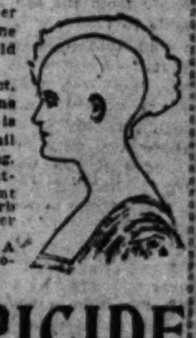
Sleep disturbing bladder weaknesses, backache, rheumatism and the many other kindred ailments which so commonly come with declining years, need no longer be a source of dread and misery to those who are past the middle age of life.

Croxone relieves all such disorders because it reaches the very cause of the trouble. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the little filtering glands and cells, and gives the kidneys new strength to do their work properly. It neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid substances that lodge in the joints and muscles, causing rheumatism; and makes the kidneys filter and sift out the poisonous waste matter from the blood and drive it out of the system.

It matters not how old you are or how long you have suffered, Croxone is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results. There is nothing else like it. It starts to work immediately and more than a few doses are seldom required to relieve even the most chronic, obstinate case.

An original package costs but a trifle and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case.—ADVERTISEMENT.





Is It the Hair or the Face That Makes the Woman?

If you think it is the face, take another look at the two heads pictured here. One shows a girl which the most critical would pronounce beautiful.

While her features are fairly perfect, her greatest charm lies in a mass of fine lustrous hair. The opposite picture is identical as to features and other detail except that the wealth of hair is wanting.

Both of these ladies would attract attention anywhere, but each for a different reason, one on account of her superb beauty and the other on account of her comical appearance.

The hair makes all the difference. A woman loses her good looks in exact proportions as she loses her hair.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

Saves the Hair

There is nothing which is so destructive to the hair as dandruff.

Everyone is more or less exposed to this annoying trouble, because dandruff is contagious.

Dandruff robs the hair of the snap and lustre of health, destroys its life and causes it eventually to fall out.

Thousands daily are experiencing the wonderful merit attending the regular and intelligent use of Newbro's Herpicide. That Herpicide is something besides a delightful hair dressing is proved by the disappearance of dandruff, a clean scalp and healthy, luxuriant hair.

Not only may hair loss be stopped, but if the hair follicles have not become atrophied, a new growth of hair may be anticipated.

The life and luster of Herpicide hair is beautiful to see, is unmistakable.

An abundance of fluffy, glittering hair is woman's chiefest beauty and to permit its needless destruction is unpardonable.

All Dealers sell and guarantee it in both 50c and $1.00 sizes. Money refunded if not satisfactory.

WIRELESS NEWS FROM THE ARCTIC BY THANKSGIVING

Members of MacMillan Party Predict Communication Will Be Established.

SHIP DIANA WRECKED

Explorers Greeted With Joy by Natives When Boat Reaches Greenland.

ST. JOHNS, New Brunswick, Oct. 11.—Judge Carroll Sprigg and Frederick Patterson of Dayton, O., who accompanied Donald MacMillan to Etah and left the polar party establishing their winter home here, predict that wireless messages will begin to reach civilization from the frozen North by Thanksgiving. Prominent members of the MacMillan expedition are Profs. Elmer Ekblaw of Illinois University, and Maurice C. Tanquary of Kansas University.

Owing to the wreck of the ship Diana and the fear of Capt. Kehoe of the Erik, which took the party on to Etah, that the ice barrier would make trouble the locating of the winter camp was delayed. Capt. Kehoe has been in the Brazilian trade most of his life, but was the only captain available when the hurry call for the relief boat arrived. It was the plan to camp at Cape Sabine, but there is an unusual flow of ice in the Arctic waters and although within 50 miles of the proposed site, experienced Arctic sailors predicted that the Erik never would reach there and Etah was chosen instead.

Judge Sprigg says the arrival of the boat was a great event in Greenland and the joy of those who rushed to the landings was doubled when they found that MacMillan, whom the Eskimos admire, was leader of the party. Before reaching Etah MacMillan had engaged a dozen guides and more than 100 dogs and had them on shipboard with him. The guides included Itookashoo and Arpelah, who were with Dr. Cook. An effort to locate Egingwah, who went to the pole with Peary failed.

Judge Sprigg tells a graphic story of the wreck of the Diana. He was sleeping on deck in company with Patterson and MacMillan.

Occurred in Dense Fog.

"The wreck," he said, "took place in a dense fog. About 6 o'clock we had passed Point Amour, and so we had a good idea of where we were. We—that is, Mr. Patterson and I—had been asleep about two hours when we were awakened by three violent bumps. The ship quivered, and as I jumped up there loomed high above our decks the shadow of an iceberg. The fate of the Titanic came to my mind.

"A moment after we struck all was confusion among the crew, although the members of the party were cool. The men rushed about and scarcely needed the order to lighten ship to start them throwing things overboard.

"The first thing to go was our deck load of coal—75 tons which we had taken aboard at Sydney, C. B. I. Then our power boat was put over. Luckily, it landed right side up. Murphy, the bo'sun, was rushed below and reported that all seemed tight as a drum. This gave us hope, but there were no chances to be taken, so Green, Allen, Small and I started out to find Red Bay, where there is a wireless station. After a few hours we found the place, and it was lucky that Allen was along. We reached the wireless station only to find that the operator had gone fishing!

"Without further permission, Allen sat down at the instrument, and in a short time was in communication with an outside station, Cape Riche or Fogo, I don't know which, and they in turn sent word of the disaster to St. John's. At once he was told that the Stella Maris would be started to our assistance.

Fishermen Gave Rescue.

"When we returned to the ship we found that the Diana's whistle for assistance had brought half a dozen fishing boats, and to these the cargo was transferred. They took it almost to Red Bay before they could land it. The wreck of the Diana lay within 100 yards of the shore, but the rocks rose sheer from the sea, and it was impossible to land. It was mighty lucky all round that the sea was smooth and that it continued so, for had there been the least sea there is no doubt the Diana and her cargo would have been lost, probably with some, if not all, of those who were in her."

Judge Sprigg went North especially for a hunting trip and was greatly pleased when a polar bear was sighted at Booth Bay.

"The ship was stopped at once,' said Judge Sprigg, "and a small boat was put over with the idea of shooting it. It was the first time a bear had been seen so far south in summer, and particularly on land, so it was the more honor when I was chosen to kill it.

Stalked a Bear.

"After our boat reached shore, we stalked the bear, but at once it headed for the water. It was just about to dive when my bullet found it. The lead did not stop the bear, however, and it was about 20 yards from shore when I put another shot through its head, and it was our game. It was a magnificent specimen of poralis, and its skin I prize very highly."

One of the amusing features of the trip was the capture of live walrus. The captive was only a baby, but when a baby weighs half a ton or more, it is no mean job to get it into a small boat. This feat was performed, however, by Ensign Green, engineer of the party; Small, the electrician; Judge Sprigg, and the inseparables, Itookashoo and Arpelah. When Judge Sprigg tells the story he is forced to laugh at the recollection.

"We were out in the power boat—Green, Small and I—with the two huskies," says the Judge, "when, by a lucky shot, I killed a mother walrus. Despite the great amount of fat which it carries a walrus sinks at once after it is shot, so, to save the body, the Eskimos use a sealskin attached to a [illegible] by a leather line.

"Itookashoo had planted the harpoon when the walrus cub, that had been sporting about, came up under our bow with a bump that gave us all a good scare. Then the little fellow swam about, barking at us and attacking the float which supported the body of its mother. We knew that if he succeeded in breaking this we would lose our game, so we tried to shoo it away. But it wouldn't be shooed. We didn't want to shoot it, so Green proposed that we catch it alive.

It is one thing to suggest catching a walrus alive and another thing to do it. Small was running the engine, so Green and I tried to lassoo the beast when it came up beside us barking. We could get the rope over his head all right, but when it got back of his flippers it simply slid down his fur to the other end.

"Half a dozen times the boat was nearly capsized, and we were all laughing. The two huskies were convulsed at our futile efforts. Finally, it was suggested that the rawhile line they use on their harpoons would hold better, so we tried it and it worked.

"After many struggles and much splashing we got the creature into the boat, but it wouldn't keep still. Itookashoo and Arpelah finally had to sit on it to hold it still while we ran back to the ship.

Getting the walrus on deck was another problem, and it furnished plenty of fun for every one, but it was finally solved to our satisfaction, if not to that of the walrus."

Once aboard the ship the walrus proceeded to make itself at home, and in a short time it seemed to know the members of the party.

"It would follow us around, flopping and slopping in a most gainly way, despite its apparent ungainliness," said Patterson. He added that it liked to be petted and did not resent the friendly approaches of those on board.

"The trouble came as to feeding it," said Judge Sprigg. "We couldn't spend all our time fishing, and it seemed to have unlimited capacity to eat. I really wanted to keep it alive and ship it on to Dayton on my return, but the dogs spoiled my plan. They did not like the ust from the start, and finally a bunch of the dogs—we had all told about 100 aboard—attacked the animal and bit him so we had to shoot him."

CANAL CALLED ONE OF "GRANDEST CONQUESTS"

Rome Newspaper Says It Is One of Most Noted Achievements of Two Centuries.

"The Panama Canal is one of the grandest conquests of humanity, which feverishly looks toward the future with an ever-growing faith in new successes and triumphs. The canal will remain undoubtedly one of the most famous of the achievements of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, both for the audacity of the idea and the technical difficulties surmounted."

Mrs. Mary Clark of 7511 Page avenue, St. Louis County, has asked the police to try to find her daughter, Nellie Clark, 16 years old, who left home Sept. 30 and has not returned. Her daughter told her, Mrs. Clark said, that she was going to look for work. The last she heard of her, she told the police, was that she was seen with a man a week ago Friday at Page avenue and the Suburban tracks.

Operations Avoided

Thousands of surgical operations are performed every year in our great city hospitals upon women afflicted with serious female troubles. Sometimes the operations are successful and sometimes they are not; sometimes they are necessary, many times they are not.

It is safe to say that a very large percentage of surgical operations for female troubles may be wholly avoided. This statement is amply proven by hundreds of letters constantly being received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., of Lynn, Mass., and the following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock of Paw Paw, Mich., relates her sad experience, which is only one of thousands that are constantly occurring. Had she taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at first, as she finally did, her dreadful hospital experience would have been avoided.

Here is her own statement: Paw Paw, Mich.: "Two years ago I suffered very severely with womanly ailments. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for several months without much relief, and finally sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks, and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and advise my friends who have any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. Orville Rock, Paw Paw, Mich.

If you are ill don't drag along until you are advised to have an operation, but remember that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills and has saved a vast army of women from surgical operations. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not at least give this famous medicine a trial.

A HANDSOME REWARD WILL BE GIVEN to any person who will prove that any of our testimonial letters constantly being published in the daily newspapers are not genuine and truthful, or that any of these women were paid in any way to give their testimonials or that the letters were published without their permission or that all the original letters did not come to us entirely unsolicited. THE LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO., Lynn, Mass.

SUGAR MEN ASK FARMERS TO PLANT MORE BEETS

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 11.—The beet sugar men do not seem to be so greatly worried over the effect of the new tariff. Officials of the United States Sugar and Land Co., which operates the big sugar factory at Garden City, are going over the State urging the farmers to plant more beets, pointing out to them the big profit in beets and the value of the beet tops for silage.

The sugar company is making contracts with farmers as usual for next year's crop of beets and the officials, it is said, have told farmers that they cannot get all the beets they need.

There has been no hint from the sugar company that it will offer any lower prices for the beets because of the passage of the tariff bill.

FOR A SOUR STOMACH, INDIGESTION, GAS OR DYSPEPSIA—PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps, your head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food, breath foul, tongue coated—just take Pape's Diapepsin, and in five minutes you will wonder what became of the indigestion and distress. Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps the stomach regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is astonishing. Please don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.—ADV.

OFFERS $26[illegible]0 FOR A SANDWICH[illegible]AN'T GET ONE

U. S. Cava[illegible]ymen Reject Mexican Rebel's Proffer of Fiat Money.

EL PASO, TEX., Oct. 11.—The operation of the inexorable economic law of supply and demand was strikingly demonstrated near Columbus, N. M., a few days ago when a Mexican Constitutionalist offered $26,000 for a ham sandwich and then didn't get it.

The Mexican, Alberto Rodriguez, a rebel from Sonora, carried the $26,000 Constitutionalist fiat money in a roll in a pocket. The money is issued by the Sonora government. United States cavalrymen to whom the Mexican offered the fortune in figures for a sandwich were amazed, but all military rules forbade them to accept it.

However, they took pity on the soldier and although they couldn't or wouldn't give him the sandwich, they gave him a hearty meal, the value of which, counting the sandwich as worth $26,000, is estimated at $275,000.

After expressing his satisfaction, Rodriguez was arrested, but he did not mind it at all, because arrest meant three meals a day.

DIPLOMAT GOES ON PEACE MISSION TO SOUTH AMERICA

Robert Bacon to Represent Carnegie Foundation on Journey.

LISBON, Oct. 11.—Robert Bacon, at one time Secretary of State in the second Roosevelt administration, spent several days in Portugal previous to sailing for South America, whither he has gone in the interest of better and closer relations between nations.

"Personally, aside from my mission," said Bacon in this connection, "no country holds for me more interest than South America. When I was in the State Department South American affairs had a peculiar interest for me. Now more than ever the attention of the world is being directed to the continent south of the United States, which is developing in a way that has no comparison in history except with our own development. In a little while the Panama Canal will increase this rapid growth, particularly on the western coast. Our intellectual and commercial relations, already very important with South America, will grow, and the isolation that now prevents many persons from the United States from traveling to the Southern continent will largely disappear."

Bacon is visiting South America under the auspices of the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace. In further explanation of his journey, he said:

"The movement which has behind it, in America, Senator Root, President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, James Brown Scott and others associated with them, has very definite and specific purposes and practical methods of accomplishing them.

"The membership of the Institute of International Law comprises some of the most learned men of Europe and America, who hold regular meetings to discuss the laws that govern the relations of nations. Now a similar institute has been established for South America, and a part of my work will be to encourage the formation of branches of this society, of which Senator Root is president.

"I will discuss also the arrangement of exchanges between the universities of South America and those of the United States, of both professors and students, and also the exchange visits of individuals. By these means the nations must acquire a more intimate understanding of the problems that each one faces, and the peoples must be drawn into a closer intellectual and spiritual relationship."

COL. WATTERSON IN PARIS

Newspaper Men Give Luncheon for Louisville Editor.

PARIS, Oct. 11.—Henry Watterson of Louisville, Ky., with his wife and granddaughter, Miss M. Watterson, have arrived here for a stay of six weeks before going to Egypt and the French Riviera for the winter. The Colonel is visiting old acquaintances among French journalists whom he knew as early as the fifties when he was here as correspondent and after the siege of Paris in 1871, when he was one of the first to enter the city. A luncheon was given to Col. Watterson by the local American and English newspaper men.

James D. Phelan, special commissioner for the San Francisco Exposition, has arrived here on the completion of his European journey. He says he is gratified at the results of his tour and feels confident that Great Britain and Germany will eventually decide to exhibit.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

RUPTURE

By Dr. Lewin's Non-Surgical Treatment

St. Louis, April 9, 1913.

Dr. W. A. Lewin, Star Bldg., City.

Dear Doctor Lewin: It is with the greatest pleasure I can now say that you have completely cured me of a most severe Rupture, from which I had suffered many years. A number of friends and business acquaintances advised that I consult you, and finally when I just had to have treatment, I did so. Must now confess to you that I was a "doubting Thomas," as I didn't believe you could cure me. The results are most satisfactory, however. I have discarded my truss, and most heartily recommend all who are afflicted with Rupture to consult you, knowing you will keep your agreements with them.

Wishing you unbounded success in the future, as you have enjoyed during the past 20 years that you have practiced your noble profession in St. Louis. Sincerely yours,

Oscar M. Damm.

CASCARETS TONIGHT! IF YOU ARE BILIOUS, HEADACHY AND CONSTIPATED.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy stomach.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets—or merely dosing yourself every few days with salts, pills, castor oil and other harsh irritants? Cascarets immediately cleanse and sweeten the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the system.

A Cascaret tonight straightens you out by morning—a 10-cent box keeps your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular and you feel bully for months. Don't forget the children.—ADV.

PHILADELPHIA WINS WORLD'S BASEBALL CHAMPIONSHIP, 3-1

Fifth and Decisive Game of the Series Is Taken From New York Giants by the Athletics' Scoring Machine and Impregnable Defense.

MATHEWSON NOT AS EFFECTIVE AS PLANK

Both Veterans to Form, However, and the Deciding Issue is the Difference in Teamwork Behind Them.

Post-Mortem.

MACK'S team outplayed the Giants in every game, with the exception of the 10-inning contest, which "Matty" won from Plank.—Hugh Jennings.

THE Giants did not do their best. The Athletics surpassed theirs. The team with the punch won.—Christy Mathewson.

MATTY could hold the Atheltics, but he couldn't hold the Giants. Hence, we could not win.—John J. McGraw.

I HAD it figured out that Bender must win two, Plank one and one of the youngsters one [illegible] rder to give us the four. [illegible] dentically what they did.—[illegible] Mack.

Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—The Philadelphia Athletics won the baseball championship of the world for 1913 at the Polo Grounds this afternoon by defeating the New York Giants, 3 to 1, in the fifth and deciding game of the series.

The 50 players on the two teams, who were eligible to participate in the world's series, will divide $135,163.89 between them on the basis of 60 per cent to the winners and 40 per cent to the losers.

The stockholders of each of the two clubs will also have $79,109.50 to divide as a result of their players' drawing powers during the world's series.

The National Commission received $32,-[illegible] for overseeing the five-game contest, the entire gate receipts amounting to $325,980, coming from the pockets of 151,000 fans, who paid to witness the play. The profits of the ticket speculators are not available at this time.

The players' share of the receipts ceased with Friday's game, so they were not financially interested in today's attendance, which totaled 36,632, for gross receipts of $75,675.50. Each member of the Athletics' team will get $3300, and each member of the Giants' team will get $2200.

New York Had No Chance.

With the score of games standing 3 to 1 in their favor, the American League representatives went in to clinch the series, and before the masterly playing of the Mack men the National Leaguers had absolutely no chance.

Connie Mack, anxious to finish the struggle on the final day of the week, sent Eddie Plank, his veteran southpaw, to the mound, and John McGraw, his back to the wall, called upon Christy Mathewson to check the victorious rush of the Athletics and thus gain for his team a breathing spell.

Both old masters of curve and break responded nobly to the call of their manager and club, but the Giants, unable to help Mathewson by even mediocre batting, fell victims to the vicious hitting and fast fielding combination which has again raised the standard of the American League over that of the National organization.

The victory was a personal triumph for Plank, but the downfall of the Giants carried no odium for Mathewson, who besides pitching an excellent game with but two days of rest since his victory of Wednesday, made one of the two hits scored against his rival in the box.

Mathewson did not respond as promptly to the demands made upon him as Plank did, and, lacking that wonderful offensive and defensive support which the Athletics accorded to their twirler, faltered just enough in the opening innings of the game to give the Mack men a lead that the Giants were powerless to overcome.

As was the case in all the games of the series but yesterday's, the top half of the Philadelphia club batting order hit heavily when hits meant runs. Mathewson faced a determined club-swinging delegation from the first moment he stepped into the box, and before he could get his muscles and curves working smoothly, the game had been won.

Plank could well afford to be magnanimous, for he proved to be the pitching hero of the series and may decide before another baseball season rolls around to retire on his he[illegible] ago. During the five games [illegible] seemed [illegible] Plank has [illegible] years.

HUERTA DEFENDS ARREST OF DEPUTIES A[illegible] STEP FOR PEACE

Mexican [illegible]esident in Proclamation De[illegible]es 110 Imprisoned Members [illegible] Chamber Were Active [illegible] Revolutionaries Against Gov[illegible]ment.

HOPE OF PACIFI[illegible]TION LOST BY WA[illegible]NGTON

State Department Thin[illegible] Crisis in Southern Republic Will Make Constitutional Ele[illegible]n Impossible.

By Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 11.—President Huerta's defense of his action in causing the arrest of 110 members of the Chamber of Deputies last night is that the Deputies were revolutionists. It is his belief, as he states it, that they represented the Carranza sentiment in the capitol.

In a proclamation dissolving the chamber, it is frankly stated that their threat to remove themselves from the capital and hold sessions where they would enjoy the protection which they alleged was denied them here, meant that they would transfer their session to territory controlled by the rebels.

In spite of the fact, the proclamation continues, that the executive has intervened with good offices repeatedly, in order to prevent clashes between the Chamber and the other branches of the Government, and has carried prudence and good will to an extreme by going repeatedly to ask the Deputies to reconsider their illegal acts, his tolerance has resulted in nothing farther than obtaining additional proof that the body was decidedly of a dissolutionist and revolutionary character and was "resolved to finish with the executive power, by whatever means possible, without caring that the gravest possible consequences were entailed by such conduct."

Addresses Mexican Citizens.

In a separate proclamation addressed to the Mexican people, the President declared that the deputies had shown systematic and implacable hostility to each and all of his acts.

"The executive has been able to convince himself," continues the proclamation, "that a majority of the deputies had resolved to deny him all financial assistance in spite of the abnormal conditions through which the country is passing and the grave obligations which it has both at home and abroad."

The Chamber, the President asserted, even overstepped the bounds of common courtesy and decency. He had seen himself alluded to in a way profoundly offensive and calumnious by the committee appointed to investigate hypothetical offenses.

"If the undersigned," the proclamation adds, "saw in rebellious attitude of the Chamber a co-ordinate movement emanating from public opinion with leaders capable of taking over the government and conducting the country to days of prosperity, he would gladly abandon power and give it into expert hands. Nothing of the kind is happening. The opposition of the Chamber was due to the most conflicting motives and the most divergent aspirations.

"It can be asserted that if tomorrow this body were called upon to designate an executive of the union there would arise in it one of the most bloody of battles over the remains of public power."

Objects of Obstructionists.

Officials close to President Huerta said that in the opinion of the executive the desire of the obstructionists in Congress was, at first, to prevent the elections and failing at that, to declare them void for the purpose of keeping Gen. Huerta in power. This done, they would point out to the United States the imperialistic attitude of Huerta, attributing his retention of the presidency to his machinations, their purpose being to secure support to the revolutionary cause.

The Minister of Foreign Relations called on the diplomatic representatives today and explained at length the attitude of the administration and Gen. Huerta's desire to hold the election as planned.

Deputies Are in Prison.

The Deputies are still in prison. A report which was current that some of them had been killed is without foundation. The Government officials apparently have not made up their minds as to what disposition to make of them.

The American charge, Nelson O'Shaughnessy, was besieged today by the wives of the imprisoned Deputies. More than a dozen of them called at the embassy and implored him to use his influence to obtain the release of their husbands and procure guarantees for their safety. President Huerta assured Mr. O'Shaughnessy tonight that none of them would be mistreated.

There is as yet no trace of Dr. Belisara Domingues, Senator from Chiapas, who, some time ago, denounced President Huerta from the floor of Congress as a traitor [illegible] Huerta [illegible] ears in the brewery, [illegible] that [illegible] arge of his private investment [illegible] holding his power of attorney during the absence of himself and his son, August.

BODY OF ADOLPHUS BUSCH TO ARRIVE HERE ABOUT OCT. 30

Carrying Out Wish Expressed by Brewer, Just Before Death, It Will Lie in State for Employes; Funeral Saturday or Sunday.

WIFE AND CHILDREN SHARE IN MILLIONS

Charles Nagel, Who Drew Will Won't Say Whether It Provides for Trust Fund; August A. Busch May Head Brewery.

The body of Adolphus Busch, multimillionaire brewer, who died Fridy night at his villa in Rhenish Prussia, will probably reach St. Louis Thursday, Oct. 30, making it possible to hold the funeral the following Saturday or Sunday. A cablegram received last evening by Edward A. Faust, a son-in-law, from August A. Busch, said the family party, accompanying the body, would sail from Bremen, Oct. 21, on the Kronprinzesin Cecilie, due in New York Oct. 28. The Busch party some time ago booked passage on the Cecilie, which was Adolphus Busch's favorite ship.

Other cablegrams brought further details of the unexpected death, which was caused by heart disease, and not directly by the dropsy from which Busch had suffered for several years. He was 76 years old. Seven hours before his death, one of the messages said, he was writing at his desk. He was conscious for some time after suffering the first heart stroke.

Body to Lie in State.

One of his last declarations to his son, the latter said in the dispatches to Faust, was that he wished to be buried in St. Louis, and that he wished his body to lie in state, where all the employes of his industries might see it. The delay in bringing the body to this country, Faust said, was because of August Busch's inability to get accommodations for the family on ships sailing earlier than the one on which he had previously booked passage.

A special train from New York will probably convey the body and the family to St. Louis.

Those of the family who were at the Villa Lily, Langenschwalbach, Germany, at the time of his death, were Mrs. Busch, whose golden wedding was celebrated in March, 1911; August Anheuser Busch, eldest son and business successor; two daughters, Mrs. Paul von Gontard and Mrs. Eduard Scharrer; an adopted daughter, Mrs. Hans Kluhn, and Carl Conrad, for several years Busch's closest personal friend and traveling companion.

James Harvey, a close personal friend of August A. Busch, went to Germany with him a few weeks ago, in the expectation of enjoying some hunting there, no particular apprehension being felt at that time about the health of the elder Busch.

Faust and Charles Nagel, the latter Busch's chief legal adviser, who was Secretary of Commerce and Labor in President Taft's Cabinet, will have charge of the St. Louis arrangements for the funeral, and will be in frequent communication with August Busch by cable and, after the sailing, by wireless.

More than 500 telegrams, bearing messages of sympathy and respect, were received at the offices of the brewery yesterday. These came from personal friends, from noted public men and from business associates in other cities.

Disposition of Estate.

With the Busch fortune estimated by his various associates at between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000, there was much speculation in business circles yesterday as to the probable disposition of the great property interests. This speculation was chiefly on the point whether the estate would be divided among the heirs or left in the form of a trust for a term of years, like the Marshall Field and J. Pierpont Morgan estates.

Whatever provision the will may make, it was considered certain that the control of the brewery would be vested in August A. Busch, now vice-president of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association, and for a half dozen years the active manager of all the Busch interests. Edward A. Faust will be most closely associated with him in control, it is believed.

All the stock in the brewing corporation is owned by the Busch and Anheuser families and their close connections.

The will was drawn several years ago, and is believed not to have been materially changed. According to the belief of close friends of the family, it names August A. Busch and the St. Louis Union Trust Co. as joint executors of the estate. The will, it is said was drawn by Charles Nagel, but he would not discuss the matter last night.

Mrs. Busch is said to be the chief beneficiary. Bequests to charity, education and public objects are said to amount to $1,000,000.

Principal Business Interests.

Busch's principal business interests, aside from the brewery and the glass works connected with it, were the South Side Bank, the Manufacturers' Railway, the American Diesel Engine Co., a number of ice factories, the Hotel Adolphus [illegible] allas and the Great Northern Hotel [illegible] hicago. He was a director in the [illegible] Union Trust Co., the Third [illegible] Bank, the American Car and

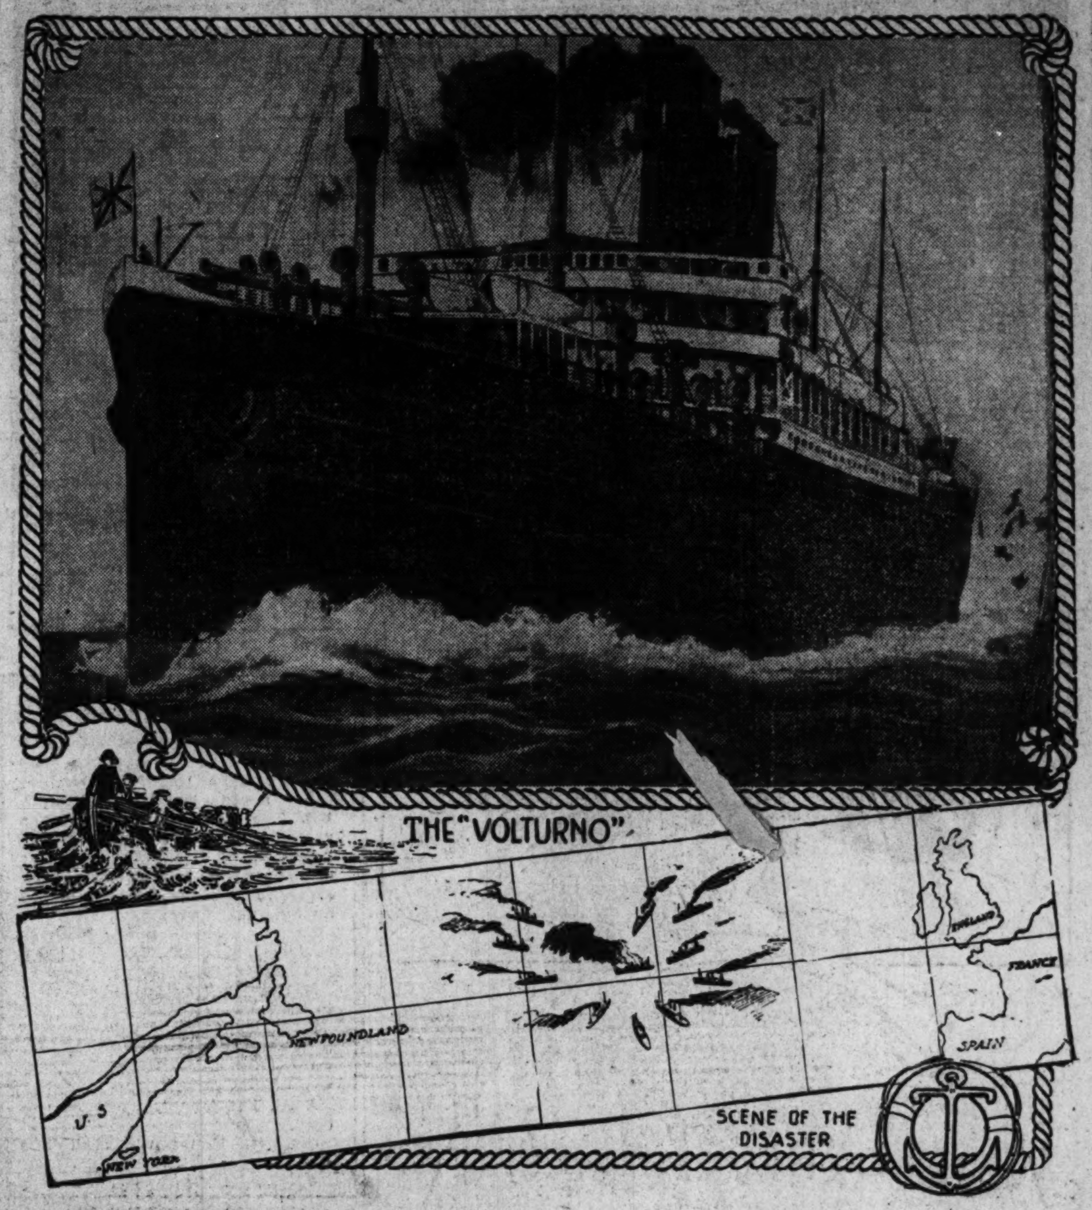
The Steamer Volturno Which Was Burned at Sea With Great Loss of Life



LAND AS LARGE AS GREENLAND IS FOUND IN ARCTIC

Russians Report Discovery of Tract Stefansson Now Is Searching For.

ST. MICHAELS, Alaska, Oct. 11.—The Russian Government steamers Taimyr and Waygatch, under Commander Wilitsky, which have been engaged in Arctic exploration north of Siberia for three years, arrived here today for coal.

Capt. Wilitsky reports the discovery of a body of land as large as Greenland, extending beyond latitude 81 north and longitude 102 east.

Admiral Peary and other Arctic explorers have believed that a large body of land, almost a continent, existed in the polar regions. The Canadian Government had so much faith in the theories of Peary, Stefansson and other explorers that last summer it sent Vilhajalmur Stefansson with the best-equipped polar expedition that ever entered the ice.

Three of Stefansson's boats are frozen in the ice pack near Point Barrow, Alaska. Two of the boats carried supplies, which were to be landed at depots east of the mouth of the McKenzie. The third was to explore the main land and islands already known, east of the McKenzie delta.

Stefansson himself, with the whaler Karluk, got away safely from Point Barrow and steered for the north, seeking the unknown continent which the Russian expedition that arrived at St. Michael reports having discovered.

Russian Steamers Make Trip From Europe Along Arctic Shores.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 11.—American trading and exporing schooners that cruised along the Siberian coast last summer were surprised to meet Russian steamers, including an ice breaker, that had made the voyage from Europe along the Arctic shores, almost to Bering Strait. It is supposed the Russian Government is making extensive surveys of its Siberian shores and the seas that wash them.

No additional details have been received here concerning the discovery north of Siberia of what may prove to be a hitherto unknown continent. The Russian Government steamers Taimyr and Waygatch, which announced the finding of a great body of land, are coaling at St Michael.

MAN KILLED BY TRAIN

Unidentified Victim Attempted to Cross Track at Valley Park.

An unidentified man, well dressed and apparently 30 years old, was killed last night by a passenger train in front of the Frisco station in Valley Park. The victim is believed to have attempted to cross the track.

A card found on the dead man bore the name Peterson, and indicated that the holder had been an employe of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad.

German Sailors Defy Storm in All Night Rescue Work

BREMEN, Oct. 11.

THE captain of the Grosser Kuerfuerst has made the following report to his ship's offices by wireless:

"We received the appeals for help from the Volturno on Thursday at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, while we were in latitude 48.50 north, longitude 35.06 west. When we arrived near the Volturno we found her completely on fire. The fire apparently had arisen from a violent explosion in the forward part of the vessel and this explosion had killed a number of passengers and sailors.

"Eleven steamers gathered in the neighborhood of the disaster, which took place during a violent storm blowing from the northwest, with the sea breaking high.

"Two of the boats of the Grosser Kuerfuerst were lowered and kept at rescue work during the whole night, from 9 o'clock in the evening till a quarter past 3 in the morning. It was almost impossible for them to approach the wreck and the rescue of those on board the Volturno was possible only when they jumped overboard.

"A boat was lowered from the Volturno with five men, who were saved, but the boat sank immediately afterward.

"The total of those rescued from the burning ship was 523, and of these, 86 passengers, two ships officers, one engineer and 16 sailors, making a total of 105, were taken on board the Grosser Kuerfuerst.

"Two full boatloads from the Volturno are still being sought, but it is improbable that they will be found.

"One hundred persons from the Volturno are missing. The Carmania and La Tourraine are searching in the vicinity of the disaster, where the wreck is dangerous to navigation.

"The shipwrecked passengers and crew on board the Grosser Kuerfuerst are being well cared for and have been provided with proper accommodations. We are proceeding."

"That's an unheard-of thing Huerta did — arresting a hundred members of the Mexican Congress and putting them in jail," remarked the junior member.

"Not altogether unheard-of, son," replied the senior member. "The third Napoleon did the same thing in France, back about 1851, when he was President."

"Oh, I see Huerta's game. He is looking forward to becoming Emperor, like Napoleon III."

BOY AT PLAY RUN DOWN AND KILLED BY FUNERAL AUTO

Chester Goettel, 8-year-old son of Albert Goettel of 3806 Penrose street, running in play with other children from behind a pile of bricks near his home yesterday afternoon, was struck and killed by an automobile in which three employes of the late William Medart were returning from his funeral.

William A. Lang of 3555 Lawton avenue, chauffeur of the car, telephoned to the police that his machine had killed a boy and informed them that he would wait at the scene until patrolmen arrived to arrest him. He did so, and was taken to the Angelica Street Station, where he was locked up on a charge of manslaughter.

The employes of the Medart Patent Pulley Co., of which William Medart was president, who were in the automobile were F. N. Nieman, E. W. Steinberg and Joseph E. Henry. They gave their address as that of the company, 3500 De Kalb street. With them were Edward A. Wagner, 5059 Cabanne avenue, president of the Edward L. Wagner Construction Co., and Milo C. Shands, 5359 Clemens avenue, sales agent of the American Car & Foundry Co.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—At least 135 lives were lost w destroyed the steamship Volturno in a raging storm in t Atlantic Thursday. Ten other liners, brought to the res wireless telegraph, saved 521 lives. These ten liners st powerless to prevent the tragedy, because of the mounta seas.

Wireless reports received in England today told the st the disaster. The Volturno left Rotterdam Oct. 2 for New and officials of the Uranium line say there were 656 board, including 22 cabin and 538 steerage passengers of 96.

RESCUE OF CREW A BRIGHT SPOT

Burned Steamship Several Times in Danger and Agent Banished.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—The one bright spot in the seven-year career of the burned Volturno was her rescue of the crew of the French bark, La Champaigne, during a violent storm in March, 1907. The Volturno, then commanded by Capt. Harrison, came upon the La Champaigne helpless in a violent mid-Atlantic storm. She stood by four days before life boats could be sent to bring off the bark's crew.

The Volturno's crew was thanked for this act of bravery by the French Government.

The Volturno was built by Fairfield & Co., at Glasgow, in 1906. She was 340 feet long, with a 40-foot beam. Her gross tonnage was 3581 tons; net 2208. She had accommodations for 1504 persons, including the crew. Accommodations for only 24 cabin passengers were provided and from the first the ship has been in the immigrant business.

She has been running into Halifax during her entire career and many of the present crew lived there. She has run with varied funnel marks and once bore the design of the Erie Railroad's Marine Department. After the Erie Railroad officials had denied connection with the trans-Atlantic business, the mark was changed to that of the Northwestern Transportation Co., and eventually became the Uranium Line, which leased the ship from the Canadian Northern Steamship Co., the owner.

A Story of Trouble.

The Volturno was in deadly peril from ice floes in May, 1909, when she was frozen in for 24 hours and carried far out of her course, all the time in danger of being crushed.

In 1911 the Dutch manager of the line, Rudolf B. Tinslay, was banished from Holland because the Volturno arrived in Holland with 800 Russian immigrants who had been turned away from the United States as undesirable and who were not allowed to land on German territory when they returned.

The ship was quarantined on account of an outbreak of smallpox in the steerage in March, 1912.

The Volturno was in an accident on Chedabucto Head, 12 miles from Halifax, entering that port, Jan. 12 of this year and 833 passengers were saved with the utmost difficulty. The accident was blamed on the neglect of the precaution of taking a coast pilot aboard.

The United States Steamship Inspection Bureau here had long regarded the Volturno with suspicion and despite the fact that she sailed under the British Board of Trade and was forced to comply only with regulations of that body, frequent inspections were made.

Wireless Has Saved 5000 Lives at Sea

WIRELESS telegraphy has saved at least 5000 lives since it came into practical use in 1909. The first notable instance was at the time of the sinking of the Republic. The following are some of the most important marine disasters in which the wireless played an important part:

January, 1909, Republic sunk in collision with Florida; probably 1500 saved.

March, 1909, Horatio Hall disabled in Lake Michigan; 150 saved.

April, 1909, City of Racine disabled in Lake Michigan; 200 saved.

July, 1911, British cruiser Niobe wrecked off Cape Sable; 300 saved.

April, 1912, Titanic sunk; 703 rescued.

Oct. 11, Volturno burned and sunk; 521 rescued.

Deputies Arrested After Huerta's Message Is Read

diers, President Huerta and his Cabinet appeared at a leading restaurant and supped together. There was a strong Federal guard in the street during the progress of the feast.

Meantime, the 110 deputies who had been conveyed from the National Palace in a score of automobiles to the penitentiary found the latter place already so crowded with political prisoners that not a single cell could afford further accommodations. The deputies were compelled to sleep on the floor of the corridors.

When Minister Aldape mounted the rostrum in the Chamber of Deputies and began to read President Huerta's demands, several deputies rushed toward him. They were seized by the soldiers, taken forcibly outside the building and put into cabs.

That was the beginning of the trouble. When Huerta's demands that certain legislation be rescinded were referred to a committee, there was an outcry in the chambers at the uselessness of any attempt to compromise with Huerta.

After an hour of vain conferences between Minister Aldape and the committee, Aldape motioned to the soldiers.

"Arrest them," he cried to Chief Chavez.

Thereupon the coup de etat was accomplished.

Several of the deputies attempted, as they were about to be led away, to make speeches from windows to the great crowd outside, but got no chance.

Huerta charged that the investigation which the De... to make withdraw the resolution warning him of their intention to dissolve the parliament and hold sessions elsewhere.

WASHINGTON LOOKS FOR EARLY CRISIS; ARMY REBELLIOUS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Although latest advices to the State Department tonight declared the Deputies arrested by order of Provisional President Huerta had been released from prison, the dissolution of the Mexican Congress and the invasion of the legislative halls by armed troops caused the Washington Government practically to lose all hope of seeing a constitutional election held on Oct. 26 or the pacification of the country brought about through the authorities in power at present in Mexico City.

A crisis is expected in the Mexican capital. Administration officials pointed to President Wilson's reference in his address to Congress last August that "the true state of affairs in Mexico would soon be revealed."

Evidence that the Federal troops are disgruntled and on the verge of mutiny because they have not been paid, and the comparatively easy successes of the Constitutionalists in capturing such important places at Torreon, in North Central Mexico, were significantly referred to by Washington officials as revelations of the real situation.

Far-Reaching Results Expected.

The establishment of a virtual dic... by Huerta through the use ... likely to have the most far-reaching consequences to the Huerta regime. It also was held as a vindication of the attitude of the Washington administration that military assumption of power should not be recognized and there is hope now among high officials that foreign governments which hitherto had recognized the Huerta regime would withdraw their support.

There was no official pronouncement of policy today, but the American Government is quietly preparing for any emergencies that may arise. Its advices show the improbability of an election on Oct. 26, not only because of the successes of the Constitutionalist arms, but numerous illegalities in connection with the preliminary arrangements for an election. The dissolution of Congress by force is plainly looked upon here as an unconstitutional act.

At the Cabinet meeting next Tuesday a full discussion of the situation is expected, though Acting Secretary John Basset Moore briefly talked over the dispatches with President Wilson today.

May Change Navy Plans.

There is a possibility that developments in Mexico may bring about some change in the detail of American battleships in Mexican waters.

Huerta's pointed declaration recently, in his message to Congress that the six months' period allowed American war vessels in Mexican waters would expire on Oct. 26 and would not be renewed, caused the Navy Department at that time to order the Rhode Island, Nebraska, New Jersey and Virginia to go to Vera Cruz to relieve the Louisiana, South Carolina, New Hampshire and Michigan. It was in accordance with the right under ordinary conditions of the Mexican authorities to limit the time that foreign vessels might remain in their ports.

Today it was stated at the Navy Department that the four ships would sail from Hampton Roads on Oct. 27 for Vera Cruz.

The American Government probably will follow the letter of Huerta's declaration, however, changing the vessels every 30 days as provided by international law. Should unexpected developments occur and American lives be endangered, all vessels may be retained by the United States.

Bryan Advised of Situation.

Additional advices to the State Department were that in the turbulence that attended the dissolution of the Congress, a petition was circulated calling upon Provisional President Huerta to resign and all the signers were arrested.

Secretary Bryan at Knoxville, Tenn., today was kept constantly advised of the developments. It was thought possible that he might hasten his return to Washington, reaching here tomorrow instead of Monday.

It is unlikely that the American Government will take steps in the situation, however, before Tuesday's cabinet meeting.

John Lind Thinks Huerta's Coup a Serious Development.

VERA CRUZ, Oct. 11.—The arrest of a large number of members of the Mexican Congress by provisional President Huerta last night is regarded by John Lind, personal representative of President Wilson, as perhaps the most serious development in Mexico for many weeks.

Lind was not informed of the sequel to the congressional debate until nearly ... toda...

BITTNER CONVICTED OF KILLING FATHER, GETS LIFE TERM

Jury Returns Verdict After Deliberating Four Hours Over Five Instructions.

JURORS RETIRE AT 6:20

Mother and Girl Friend of Accused Youth Await Decision in Courtroom.

Arthur Bittner was found guilty of the murder of his father, Arthur P. Bittner, and sentenced to imprisonment for life, in a verdict returned at 10 o'clock last night, four hours after the case was placed in the hands of the jury. Bittner shot his father twice in the head as he was driving in an automobile truck to market at 2 o'clock on the morning of July 27, 1912.

The jury was instructed that five possible verdicts might be returned, two pronouncing him guilty and inflicting either the death penalty or life imprisonment. The others would have reported him not guilty, one stating he was insane at the time of the murder and is still insane, another declaring he was insane when the crime was committed but has since recovered, and the last acquitting him unconditionally.

In his argument to the jury, Circuit Attorney Harvey cited a Supreme Court decision, of which Judge Kinsey expressed his approval, to the effect that Bittner's attorneys, in pleading insanity, acknowledged that he committed the murder.

It was remarked that Harvey, in his speech to the jury just before its retirement, did not, as was expected, demand the penalty of death, and it was recalled that, in examining the veniremen, he permitted none to be chosen for the jury who did not assert that they had no scruples against capital punishment. In his final argument he stated that Bittner's crime was a "dastardly" one, deserving "very severe" punishment.

Mother Awaits in Courtroom.

The jurymen were taken to dinner at 5 o'clock to a restaurant on Clark avenue. They returned an hour and 20 minutes later, and resumed their deliberations. The defendant's mother, Mrs. Anna Bittner, who testified in his behalf yesterday, and Miss Myrtle Benhoff of 1126 St. Louis avenue, a young woman friend, waited in the courtroom for the verdict.

Harvey declared that the law recognized only one form of insanity as a defense in criminal cases—the inability to tell right from wrong. He said that the skillful preparations made by Bittner and his carefully laid plans for escape after the murder proved that he was both sane and fully aware of the wrong of murder.

Bittner's attorneys, L. B. Nickols and Guy C. McMillan, who were appointed to defend him by the court, pleaded that Bittner is the victim of an organic hereditary disease, and that he is legally irresponsible. "If he did commit the crime,' they said, "he was insane at the time."

Insane, Say Alienists.

Previously, in support of this idea, the defense placed two alienists upon the stand, Dr. C. G. Chaddock and Dr. M. W. Hodge. They examined Bittner while he was in the observation ward at the city hospital, following the murder. They both declared him "medically insane," afflicted with "dementia precox," or dementia in its first stages. They said he was abnormally nervous, slow of perception, and liable to violent headaches.

But Dr. Edward F. Brady, in reply to a hypothetical question of 4000 words, expressed his conviction that Bittner is sane. The question recited the details of the murder, including the assertion that a shoe brush was found under the windowsill at Bittner's rooming house at 927 Montgomery street, "so that after killing his father he might re-enter the house without attracting attention."

Dr. R. G. Hall, physician at the city jail, said that during the six weeks Bittner was confined there prior to being sent to the hospital, he complained frequently of headaches. Dr. Hall believed he was feigning, he testified.

The defendant's mother, smiling and weeping by turns, and showing mental strain by her rambling and incoherent sentences, testified in behalf of her son on the second day of the trial. Another son, Edward A. Bittner, who was with his father when he was killed, was the State's principal witness. This family division has created an estrangement between the mother and Edward Bittner.

Miss Benhoff attended the trial each day, and at the conclusion of the session walked with Bittner and the Sheriff from the court to the jail, two blocks away. This was her only opportunity to converse with him.

BLACK BEAR GUEST AT HOTEL JEFFERSON

Tourists From Oregon to Indianapolis Attract Much Attention With Joy Riding Animal.

An unexpected guest at Hotel Jefferson last night was "Standard," a black bear from the Mount Hood region in Oregon. It has traveled more than 5000 miles by automobile on its way to Indianapolis, where it will be presented to Joseph J. Cole III, formerly of St. Louis, whose father is head of the Cole Motor Car Co. Standard is five months old and weighs 80 pounds.

"We got Standard in Portland," said C. S. Crawford, who is in the auto party. "He has turned out to be an enthusiastic joy rider. He rides anywhere—on top of the car, on the hood, on the front seat with the driver, or taking a snooze in the tonneau. When he is awake he watches the country and sees everyhing."

The tourists reached St. Louis last night. The bear attracted much attention at the Automobile Show.

At the Jefferson two waiters were detailed to serve the bear in the lobby. The bill of fare devoured by Standard included a bottle of sterilized milk, a cocoanut custard pie, an alligator pear with lettuce and a loaf of French bread with half a pound of butter. Later Standard drank a bottle of St. Louis beer. He will depart this morning with his party for Indianapolis.

PRINTER'S WIFE BOUND, GAGGED AND POISONED

Woman, Found Unconscious by Husband, Says Unidentified Man Attacked Her.

When Edward Cramer, a printer employed by Buxton & Skinner, returned to his home at 717 North Compton avenue shortly after 5 p. m. yesterday he foudn his wife, Mamie, 28 years old, lying unconscious on the floor, gagged and bound. Cramer called a policeman and neighbors summoned a doctor, who diagnosed the case as one of strychnine poisoning.

When revived, Mrs. Cramer cried: "That man said, 'I've got you!'" She is in a serious condition. When found a silk handkerchief was crammed in her mouth, her arms and legs were bound with towels and she was tied to a bed post.

Mrs. Cramer said she returned from East St. Louis shortly after 4 p. m. and was seized from behind by a man she did not know. He forced a bitter liquid down her throat, she said, and she struggled with him until she became unconscious.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—Lazarus Finkelstein of 218 South Seely avenue celebrated his 105th birthday and Yom Kippur today. His immediate family, consisting of 65 children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, assembled in the city to do him honor. Finkelstein is active and healthy and takes interest in politics, baseball, the fashions and pleasures of the young. He talked today of the changes he has seen since he was born in Poland.

"I'm not behind the times because I am old, no sir," he said. "I love to see the girls tango and I'm for votes for women. I don't think much of the slit skirt and those English ladies who throw bombs at policemen and churches, though. When I was a boy—but, say, what's the score?"

Finkelstein keeps in close touch with the standing of both Chicago teams and can give a complete history of many of the players.

MANN DECLINES TO LET CONGRESS TAKE A REST

Republican House Leader Says "Either Adjournment to December or Stay at Work."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Representative Mann, Republican leader of the House, tonight upset the plans of Democrat members to secure a little surcease from legislative duties. When the urgent deficiency appropriation bill had been agreed to, Democratic Leader Underwood tried to get an agreement with the Republican side for three days' adjournment, with the understanding that no business would be done for some time.

"I am perfectly willing to agree to adjourn Congress until December," said Representative Mann, "but so long as Congress remains in session I intend to stay here and make it just as uncomfortable as possible for Democrats who want to get away."

The House adjourned until Monday.

W. C. M'BRIDE GAVE $100,000 FOR NEW CATHEDRAL ALTAR

Wealthy Oil Operator Revealed as Donor of Mysterious Gift.

The donor of the $100,000 altar, which is to form the center of an ornamental group in the new Cathedral, became known yesterday. He is W. C. McBride of 29 Washington terrace.

In his monthly Cathedral sermon last Sunday Archbishop Glennon, discussing the opening of the edifice, which is scheduled for the early part of the new year, referred to the altar donation for the first time, though plans for its erection have been under way all summer.

McBride is an oil producer with extensive interests in Texas and Oklahoma. He has resided in St. Louis five years, having brought his family here from Pittsburg, where he was known to have made large charitable bequests.

He is at present in the Southwest looking after his business affairs. A Post-Dispatch reporter who had learned of the donor's identity, when he called at his home last night, was informed by Mrs. McBride that she would not discuss for publication the report that her husband had furnished the money with which the altar is to be constructed.

When seen by the reporter, Archbishop Glennon said that one of the provisoes of the gift was an agreement that the donor's name should not be revealed. He referred the questioner to a large subscription book in which the donation was recorded and called attention to the fact that the space for the donor's name had been left blank.

The altar is to be more than 75 feet in heighth and will be made of colored marble, mosaic work and bronze, ornamented with multi-colored blocks of Venitian glass. Life-sized figures of the divine family and apostles will decorate the sides and top.

GIRLS TRY TO BE HOBOS

Convent Runaways Arrested for Attempting to Beat Way.

Elizabeth Whitworth, 17 years old, and Mary Denzloff, 17 years old, were arrested last night after they approached Henry Beck, a switchman for the Wabash Railroad, at Calvary avenue and the Wabash tracks, and asked his assistance in getting on a freight train so they could beat their way to Kansas City.

The girls told Beck they escaped from the House of Good Shepards, at Gravois road and Bamberger avenue, last Tuesday and that they were dissatisfied with convent life and with St. Louis. Beck held them until an officer arrived. The Whitworth girl says her mother resides at 2912 North Broadway and the Denzloff girls says her mother, Mrs. Kate Geissman, resides at 4016A Chouteau avenue.

The Pelligreen Construction Co. of St. Louis was yesterday awarded the contract of completing the interior work of the Little Rock Capitol. The superstructure was completed five years ago at a cost of $2,000,000. Work on the interior was temporarily abandoned owing to a failure on the part of the Capitol Commission Board, of which John I. Moore is chairman and Gov. Foundry Co., the Kinloch Telephone Co., and, according to Faust, in some fifty other corporations.

August A. Busch, who will succeed his father in the headship of the great enterprise which bears the family name, early 48 years old. He was edu d in the St. Louis public schools, in hicago military academy and in per Institute, Boonville, Mo. He t some time in Germany, learning brewer's art as practiced there, and egan the service of his father's con as an apprentice, working up only e showed his ability and his know e of the mechanical and commercial ses of the business.

e was married in St. Louis in 1890 Alice Zisemann. They have five chil n, Adolphus Busch III, Marie, Clara, gust Jr. and Alice. Adolphus III was rried last June to Mrs. Florence rker Lambert. Marie made her de t in 1912 in a brilliant function at nset Inn.

"Gussie" Busch is one of the best own personalities in St. Louis. He s his father's ability to combine busi ss and good fellowship. He is a sports an, particularly a hunter, and is a ember of the principal clubs in the y, and of a number outside.

Purchased Grant Homestead.

He purchased the Grant homestead in Louis County ten years ago, and has nce built there a dwelling which rialed his father's villa in Germany, or s winter home in California. Sunset nn, now the home of the Sunset Hill Country Club, was also the result of his plans, and its site, scenically one of the most beautiful in the west, was selected by him.

The other children are Mrs. Jacob W. Loeb, Mrs. Hugo Reisinger, Mrs. Paul von Gontard, Mrs. Edward A. Faust, Mrs. Eduard Scharrer, and Carl Busch, the last named an invalid. Mrs. Faust, whose home is at 1 Portland place, is the only one of the daughters whose home is in St. Louis.

The grandchildren include two sons and two daughters of Mrs. Loeb, who was formerly Mrs. Magnus; three sons and a daughter of Mrs. von Gontard; two sons of Mrs. Reisinger, and a son and daughter of Mrs. Faust.

It was not generally known by the present generation that Adolphus Busch had an adopted daughter. Dispatches from Germany stating that an adopted daughter, Mrs. Hans Kluhn, was with Mrs. Busch at the time of his death, made this known. It was learned here that Mrs. Kluhn was a Miss Kliehr, the daughter of a sister of Mrs. Busch, and was left an orphan soon after the marriage of the Busches. They adopted her before any of their own children were born. She married a man living in Hamburg, Germany, and has visited St. Louis but once since her marriage.

Invalid for Seven Years.

Busch had been, to a certain extent, an invalid for nearly seven years, Faust said. This decline from his former physical robustness dated from Christmas Eve, 1906. At that time his daughter, Mrs. Eduard Scharrer, was returning to St. Louis from abroad, and Busch was determined to greet his "little girl," as he affectionately called her. The night was cold and raw, the train was long delayed, and Busch, pacing the station midway impatiently, caught a cold which soon developed into pneumonia. The attack was severe, and the inflammation of the lungs, passing slowly, brought about dropsy.

From that time it was necessary for him to keep in close touch with his physicians, and to avoid fatigue, exposure or unusual exertion. From that time, too, dated his virtual withdrawal from the active management of his vast business enterprises, whose burden thereafter fell on his soon, August A. Busch.

Of the men who were with him in the brewing business when he made his beginning in 1866, four survivors are still in the employ of the Anheuser-Busch concern. They are E. S. Clauss, third vice-president; August Schmedtje of the bottle department; H. Mumperow of the shipping department, and Frederick Schofield, chief clerk and telegrapher, who received the first news of his death here.

[illegible], who returned recently from the [illegible] villa in Germany, said that Mrs. [illegible] left her father three weeks ago. [illegible] was then in good spirits and seemed to be good for 10 more years.

"I went to Germany with him," he said, "and on the way across he was on deck every day, and never missed a meal in the main dining room. His physicians in Germany were surprised to find him so well.

"I have been associated with Mr. Busch for 15 years in the brewery, having charge of his private investments and holding his power of attorney during the absence of himself and his son, August.

"It has been a great pleasure to be associated with him. It has been said that he was one of the greatest commercial geniuses of the country, and that he would have made a great success in any business. I have little doubt that if he had chosen the railroad business for a career he would have ranked with James J. Hill, E. H. Harriman and other masters of the railroad world. He knew much of all lines of business, and never met a man with whom he could not talk intelligently of that man's business.

"His knowledge of farming was that of an expert. He took great interest in the development of the agricultural resources of the country, and was one of the creators of the Crop Improvement Bureau, with headquarters in Chicago. In riding through the country, he would often stop to talk with farmers and advise them about agricultural methods.

"On his estate at Pasadena, Cal., he kept large flocks of finely bred chickens, in which he took great pride. He used these flocks to create an interest among famers and breeders in blooded fowls.

"Although he has not spent much time in St. Louis in recent years his knowledge of the business of the brewery was almost amazing. Every mail that comes in brings letters to department managers that he dictated in Germany before he was stricken with his fatal illness. This morning's mail brought a 16-page letter to General Supt. Menzenwerth, in which he discussed matters of business with the keenest insight.

"He spoke and read not only English, German and French, but also Spanish and Italian. He was fond of reading, but was no bookworm, and had the knack of getting what he wanted from a book or paper without reading it through.

Acquaintance Was Worldwide.

"He had a world-wide acquaintance. In my travels over the country and throughout the world, in connection with the business, I have met everywhere persons who were his close personal friends. He wrote letters to his superintendents and agents throughout the country, and always had some kind and encouraging words for them. His relationship with his customers was so close that, to my certain knowledge, he never lost a wholesale customer. He never denied himself to anyone who called at his office, whether he thought any business likely to result or not. On his way to lunch, he would stop to talk to any he might not have had time to receive earlier.

"His eye for credits was remarkable. Through the efficiency of the credit department he organized, the brewery's losses amount to less than $1000 a year on all of its immense business, covering the entire United States and many foreign countries.

"He never came to St. Louis that he did not make special reservations of time for long conferences with the manager of each and every department of the brewery. He was conversant with the details of the business to a remarkable extent. He would spend the mornings in his office, his afternoons outdoors.

Loved by His Employes.

"All of his 5000 employes in St. Louis loved him; he always treated them kindly, and they, with their families, will mourn his death.

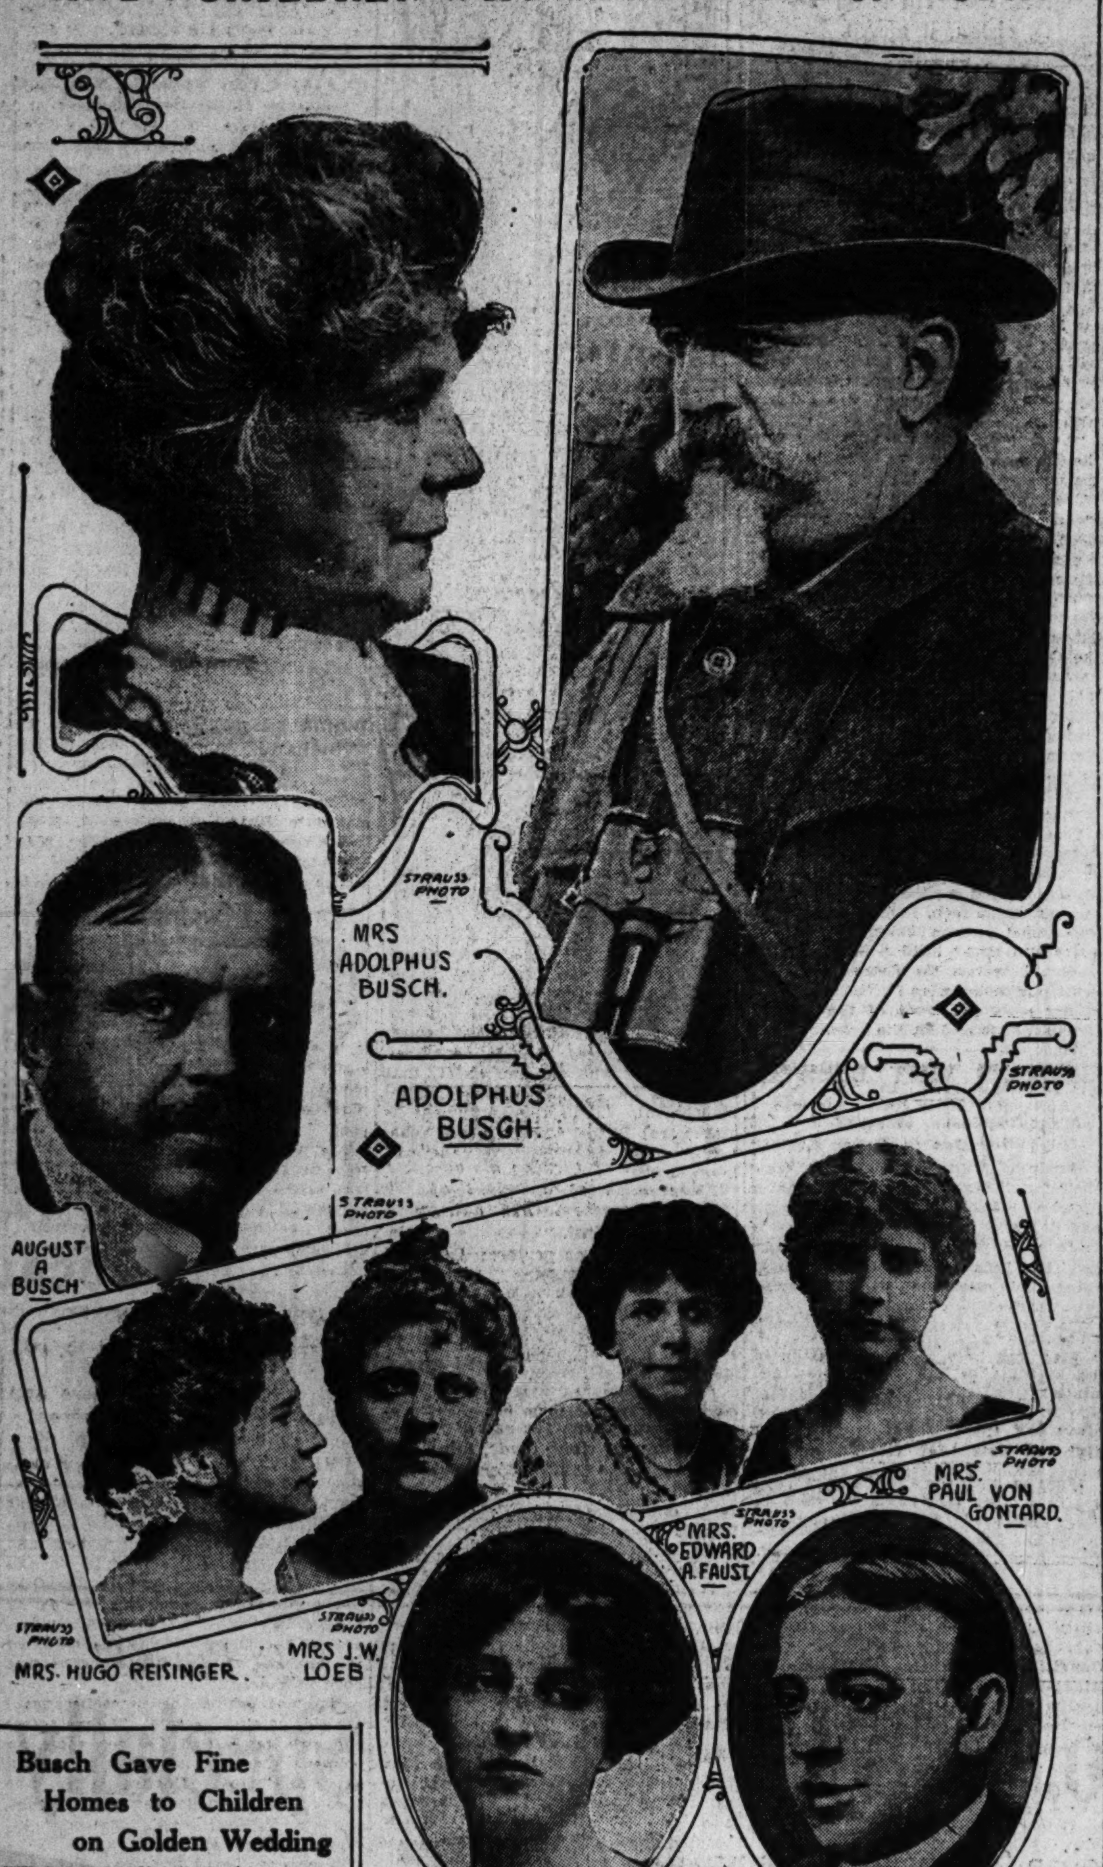
"The motive that prompted him in his gifts was to do good. Wherever he saw suffering, he gave with a quick and free hand, never stopping to consider whether his bread cast on the waters would return again."

Busch's pre-eminence in the city's affairs had in it nothing of surprise to anyone who had talked with the man, or whom had even seen him. Strength of mind, no less of body, was personified by his big frame, his massive head and the full, well-barbered mustaches and imperial which had changed in recent years from auburn to gray. His erect, military bearing and his unfailing care in dress added preciseness and elegance to his appearance.

Greetings Heartily Spoken.

This impression of physical and intellectual dominance was carried still farther by his loudly spoken greetings, which were almost explosive in tone, and were accompanied by physical demonstration in the waving of hand or cane. In social or business groups he took the lead naturally by his assertiveness and good-natured aggressiveness. He was approachable and was characteristically kind and cordial, with a capacity for the severest anger upon occasion, but with little tendency to store up resentment.

MULTIMILLIONAIRE BREWER WHO IS DEAD; WIFE AND 7 CHILDREN WHO WILL SHARE IN ESTATE



Busch Gave Fine Homes to Children on Golden Wedding

To partly distribute his great fortune among his children before his death, Busch, on his fiftieth wedding anniversary three years ago, directed each to build or purchase just the kind of home he or she wished. He also directed that the title to the homes acquired in accordance with this order should be vested in both the daughter and her husband, or the son and his wife. Here is the result of his generosity to his children:

August A. Busch and his wife received the Grant farm, with a beautiful French model chateau.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Faust, following his instruction, built at 1 Portland place one of the handsomest and costliest mansions in St. Louis. One room is finished entirely in gold fixtures and hardware, and special rooms are decorated with imported materials from Germany and France. Some of the fixtures cost thousands of dollars.

Mrs. Hugo Reisinger of New York received a beautiful mansion at 993 Fifth avenue, New York City, in the heart of the exclusive and fashionable residence district.

Mrs. von Gontard received a splendid mansion within a few blocks of the Reichstag in Berlin.

To Mrs. Loeb was given a mansion near Lincoln Park in Chicago.

Mrs. Scharrer received a handsome home in Stuttgart, Germany.

Ample provision was made also for the invalid son, Carl, and Mrs. Kluehn of Germany, an adopted daughter.

BUSCH'S QUICKNESS IN BUSINESS DEALS RELATED BY NAGEL

Immediate Decision in All Matters Was Brewer's Strongest Trait, Says Friend.

Charles Nagel, an intimate friend and personal counsel for Adolphus Busch, and Edward A. Faust, his son-in-law, last night told a Post-Dispatch reporter of Busch's quickness of judgment and decision in business deals and in dispensing money for the public good. He was a man of rare judgment and when he placed his confidence in a business venture or in the loyalty of a friend, it could rarely be displaced, they recalled. Nagel said that hundreds of gifts he made and little acts of charity he performed for worthy persons have never been known to the public. They told the following stories to illustrate Busch's character:

Nagel and Busch were at Tony Faust's one day drinking a glass of beer. Nagel suggested to Busch that Washington University should have a chair in German. He told Busch that he had figured the matter and had come to the conclusion that if a fund sufficient to produce $3000 a year could be raised, the chair could be established. Busch said that he believed there should be a chair in German.

"I am not sure of the best way to raise the money," Nagel remarked.

"Well, I believe the money can be raised and the chair established," Busch replied. "In fact, I am sure the money can be raised immediately, and I will tell you how. I will give it myself."

Busch had never before been approached on the proposition and the conversation did not last over five minutes. The next morning the announcement of the gift was made.

Giving to the Earthquake Fund.

At the time of the San Francisco earthquake Busch was in Los Angeles. He returned to St. Louis immediately thereafter. Upon his arrival Nagel went down to the brewery to see him. It was just noon when he arrived there. Outside of Busch's office Nagel met August A. Busch.

The son spoke to Nagel about the donation to the earthquake relief fund which the brewery contemplated making, and asked Nagel what he thought should be given. Nagel replied that he thought the brewery should make the largest donation it had ever made for any public purpose.

Nagel and August Busch went into Busch's office. After the greeting, Busch asked Nagel to accompany him to his home for luncheon. The son spoke up and told his father that before he went he wished to talk to him about the donation, as they had been awaiting his return.

"What is your idea of what we should give?" Busch asked his son.

"I would rather have Mr. Nagel state his idea," he replied.

Busch turned to Nagel and asked for his opinion.

"One hundred thousand dollars," Nagel replied.

Busch pulled his large black hat down over his eyes and asked for the figures again. Nagel repeated them. turning to his son, Busch asked if his idea was the same. He received an affirmative reply.

Busch thought a minute and then turning to his son, said:

"Get a certified draft for the amount immediately."

Turning to Nagel he asked him to draw up a telegram announcing the gift.

He arose from his seat at his desk and taking Nagel by the arm started for his home. From that time until Nagel left him after luncheon, the subject was not mentioned. He had made up his mind on the instant.

Work for Diesel Engine.

Once his mind was made up he would start to work unceasingly, to accomplish his end. He became confident a number of years ago that the manufacture of Diesel engines would be profitable. He started to form a company, but found difficulty in getting supporters. This spurred him on to work harder, as he loved the game of business, and the harder the project the more it interested him.

He started the company practically alone and although his friends tried to dissuade him from investing more money in the project he stuck to his decision. Through years of difficulty he kept furnishing money when it seemed he would never be able to introduce the engine.

He kept at work until he finally proved that his judgment had been correct, and today the company promises to be one of St. Louis' largest manufacturing plants.

Busch was generous to a fault, Nagel found, but in the game of business he would give no quarter. His best friend might be in competition with him in business and he would work to defeat him, yet it made no difference in his friendship.

Makes Losing Hotel Pay.

He found himself in possession of stock in the Great Northern Hotel in Chicago a few years ago. He had loaned some money and had to take the stock in return. He found that the hotel was being run at a loss.

He took the train to Chicago and made a personal inspection of the establishment. He asked questions of every employe. He began to study the hotel business from every angle. He returned to St. Louis and continued his study.

Nagel walked into his office one day and found him studying the menu. He started to make changes in the management and the manner of conducting the hotel. In a year it had turned from a losing to a paying investment.

NUTSHELL STORY OF SUCCESSFUL CAREER OF ADOLPHUS BUSCH

Here is a nutshell story of the career of Adolphus Busch, from his birth in Germany 76 years ago, his arrival in St. Louis as a boy of 15 with a small allowance, to his attainment of great wealth and international fame as a brewer and philanthropist:

Born at Mayence-on-the-Rhine, Germany, July 10, 1837.

Son of well-to-do lumber merchant, Ulrich Busch, and his wife, Barbara.

Educated in high schools and academies of Germany.

Started out for himself at age of 15, chosing America as his home.

His small allowance from his father, which, with his earnings, he spent, "hunting, loafing, getting acquainted and having a good time," according to a recent statement of his own, after his arrival in St. Louis at the age of 15.

Then he found employment as a "mud" clerk in a commission house on the levee, his principal duties being cleaning windows, sweeping floors and similar tasks.

Began development of his commercial talents six months later when entrusted with the duty of making purchases for his house. He showed keen ability as a buyer and was noted for the bargains he drove.

Enlisted in the Civil War and served four months.

Returning to St. Louis after the war, he embarked in his first independent business venture—the brewery supply business. This he conducted in connection with a cotton and Southern produce business.

From these two sources he accumulated a small sum of money which, with a modest patrimony from his father's estate, enabled him to form a partnership with Eberhard Anheuser in the brewery business.

In 1861, at the age of 24, he married Miss Lilly Anheuser, daughter of Eberhard Anheuser.

Four years later he acquired a controlling interest in the Bavarian Brewery, which Anheuser had founded, and this was made the foundation of the present great Anheuser-Busch Brewery—largest in the world.

He was the first St. Louis business man to put carpets on the floor of his office. Also the first to put in brass cuspidors and hang "Don't spit on the floor" signs on the walls.

The brewery business was the principal source of his great fortune, estimated by business associates at $40,000,000 to $50,000,000.

He attributed his success as a business man to the fact that he selected his assistants on merit.

As his fortune grew he invested extensively in bank stocks, railroad enterprises, hotels, industrial establishments, public service corporations, becoming a director in almost a score of institutions.

He was noted for his philanthropies. His donations to Washington University, St. Louis, have aggregated $200,000 and it is believed that he made provisions for other gifts to it in his will.

He gave $150,000 to Harvard University; $100,000 to the San Francisco earthquake sufferers, $25,000 to the Dayton flood sufferers, and made liberal contributions on numerous occasions to communities or institutions in need of financiad aid.

In recent years he divided his time between his homes in St. Louis, Pasadena, Cal., and Lilly Villa at Langenschwalbach, Germany.

His acquaintance was almost worldwide. He was an intimate friend of former President Taft and of Emperor William of Germany. On two occasions he was decorated by the Emperor for notable achievements.

He celebrated his fiftieth wedding anniversary at Pasadena, Cal., March 7, 1911. At that time he gave outright to each of his children a magnificent mansion or estate or directed them to spare no expense in building or purchasing a home to their exact liking and to send the bills to him.

His last visit to St. Louis was in May and early June. In recent years he spent the spring and fall in St. Louis, the winter months in Pasadena and the summer months in Germany.

He never completely recovered a severe attack of pneumonia in St. Louis about five years ago.

He died at 5 p. m. Friday, St. Louis time, at his German Villa on the crest of one of the Taunus mountains in the midst of a 5000-acre estate, maintained principally as a hunting preserve.

Burial will be in the Busch family lot in Bellefontaine Cemetery about Oct. 25 or 26.

ONCE DECORATED BY THE KAISER; TWICE BY DUKE

Emperor William of Germany bestowed a notable decoration upon Adolphus Busch, for whom he had a great admiration and whose invitation to hunt deer and other big game in his mountain preserves in Germany he often accepted. The decoration from the Emperor was the Order of Red Eagle, given in recognition of Busch's courtesies to Prince Henry on his visit to St. Louis in 1903.

The Grand Duke of Hesse several weeks ago conferred on him the Order of Philip the Good, in recognition of his philanthropy to the people of Germany.

The Duke of Hesse decorated Busch with the Order of Commercial Counselor on the occasion of his seventy-second birthday, four years ago.

FOREIGN PAINTINGS REJECTEDBYBUSCH

A St. Louis art dealer, who for the last 10 years cared for the brewer's gallery of pictures in his home, told a story last night which illustrated Busch's patriotism even in art towards his adopted land.

"Two years ago," said the dealer, "Mr. Busch remarked to me:

"'I am through with buying pictures by foreign artists. Hereafter I shall buy only pictures by American artists.'

"He was true to his word, and after that bought no pictures which were painted in Europe. This is remarkable, as he owned such wonderful paintings as Lenbach's "Bismarck," Kaulbach's portraits of his wife and children, and Zorn's portrait of Mr. Busch himself, which is one of the three greatest paintings of that artist.

Recognized Keith Early.

"Mr. Busch was one of the first connoisseurs to recognize the talent of William Keith, one of America's greatest landscape artists. A picture named "Moonlight," by H. Brewer, was sent to Mr. Busch's villa in Germany. He also employed Brewer to paint three scenes from his estate at Pasadena. He was the only St. Louisan to have an American picture hung at the exhibition of American pictures at Berlin in 1911."

The dealer continued that Busch bought several cowboy pictures by Hansen, and that after the Louisiana Purchase Exposition he bought a mammoth scenic painting representing the entrance of American troops into Manila, and a painting by Harvey Young of Custer's Last Stand. This picture has been widely used by the Anheuser-Busch company in its advertising.

"I remember," said the dealer, "seeing Mr. Busch and a friend from Europe walking through his art gallery arm in arm. Mr. Busch stopped in front of a painting by Brewer and exclaimed:

"'That's what I call a picture! See how an American can represent on canvas what nature has done!'

"Mr. Busch talked to me not long ago of building an art gallery off the dining room of his home in St. Louis. He said he had so many pictures that the problem of hanging them was getting difficult."

Then the dealer told what he said was a characetristic anecdote of the brewer.

His Attitude Todard Expense.

"Some time ago," he said, "Mr. Busch brought me the two largest photographs I had ever seen to be framed. They were taken in Germany. I was afraid the ordinary French glass would not be adequate, and asked him whether I should use plate glass.

"'Which is the better he asked?' I told him plate glass was, and he said:

"'Never ask me such a question again. I always want the best.' This was true. If he once got confidence that you were giving him the best, he never asked what the price was."

The painting named "Organ Loft," by Kuehl, was presented to the St. Louis Art Museum by Busch in 1903. He also gave to the Metropolitan Museum in New York a cattle piece by Zugel.

TRIBUTE IS PAID BY GERMAN PRESS

Berlin Newspapers Praise Warmth of Busch's Friendship and His Love of Country.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

BERLIN, Oct. 11.—The entire German press pays warm tribute to Adolphus Busch of St. Louis, who died at his castle yesterday. The Berlin Tageblatt says one of the most admirable features of his character was that despite his success he kept a warm heart for his countrymen, even the poorest.

"There are many hundred Germans alive and doing well today," it says, "who came to Mr. Busch penniless and not only got good advice, but also good positions at living wages."

The Taeglicbe Rundschau says that "Not many German-Americans have kept as warm their attachment to the old home as Adolphus Busch."

According to a telegram tonight the city of Mayence, which presented its freedom to Mr. Busch, will arrange a special memorial ceremony.

The immediate cause of Mr. Busch's death is stated to have been a heart attack, though it is admitted that only great medical skill has kept him alive for some years.

Busch's Last Letter Written to Banker in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 11.—"Receive from me in spirit a hearty handshake," were the words that J. G. Schmidlapp, multi-millionaire, banker-philanthropist and head of the Union Trust & Savings Bank of this city read in a letter received today from his friend, Adolphus Busch, St. Louis brewer—and the same moment Mr. Schmidlapp picked up an extra edition newspaper and saw the telegraphic report of Mr. Busch's death in Germany.

The missive was, it developed, the last that Mr. Busch wrote. In it Mr. Busch expressed disappointment that Mr. Schmidlapp had been unable to spend part of the summer with him in Europe as had been his wont for years, but added that they would make up for this by meeting in the fall.

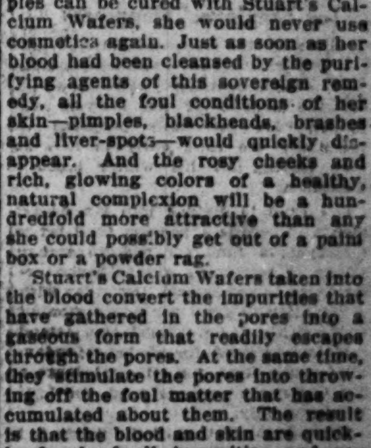
Two summers ago Mr. Schmidlapp hunted with Mr. Busch in Germany. The Cincinnatian cabled his condolences to Mrs. Busch.

Try to White-Wash Pimples

People Who Attempt to Hide Unsightly Pimples Behind Paint and Powder, Clog Their Pores and Coarsen Their Skin.

Pimples are the source of the greatest chagrin and humiliation to the sensitive girl anxious for the admiration that beauty receives. And it is only natural that she tries to hide them behind paint and powder.

She little realizes, however, what almost irreparable injury she inflicts on her skin through the clogging and enlarging of the pores of the skin. The impurities in the blood that cause pimples have now no way of escape and new pimples break out not only on the face but on the shoulders, back and arms. Instead of improving her looks, she has spoiled whatever beauty was left her.



"There's No Use Trying, I Can't Hide Pimples With Paint."

If she only knew how easily pimples can be cured with Stuart's Calcium Wafers, she would never use cosmetics again. Just as soon as her blood had been cleansed by the purifying agents of this sovereign remedy, all the foul conditions of her skin—pimples, blackheads, brashes and liver-spots—would quickly disappear. And the rosy cheeks and rich, glowing colors of a healthy, natural complexion will be a hundredfold more attractive than any she could possibly get out of a paint box or a powder rag.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers taken into the blood convert the impurities that have gathered in the pores into a gaseous form that readily escapes through the pores. At the same time, they stimulate the pores into throwing off the foul matter that has accumulated about them. The result is that the blood and skin are quickly freed of all impurities and restored to a healthy, vigorous condition. With pure blood, a healthy, beautiful skin will follow as certainly as day follows night.

If you have a pimply, broken out skin, you should clear it up at once with Stuart's Calcium Wafers. Don't white-wash your face. It fools nobody and only makes matters worse. There is only one remedy that is at once safe and effective—Stuart's Calcium Wafers—recommended by the best physicians. There is only one sure and quick way to beauty for you. That is a straight line to the nearest drug store for a 50c box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. Start now.

Stories of the Personal Side of Adolphus Busch

CAMPBELL SAVED IN PANIC BY $100,000 CHECK FROM BUSCH

Ministers Attested to Brewer's Place as "First Citizen" by Men and Religion Movement.

WHEN James Campbell, multi-millionaire president of the North American Co., and director and stockholder in 30 other public service corporations, was a "curbstone" broker on Third street, he numbered Busch among his closest friends. Campbell, once a brakeman on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad, dabbled heavily in the stocks of public utility companies. Once, in a financial flurry, he needed ready money and went to Busch.

"You look good to me, Jim," said Busch to Campbell. "How much do you want?"

"I think $100,000 will be plenty," replied Campbell.

"That's easy," said Busch, as he sat down and wrote a check for the amount.

Laws Not Necessary to Force Brewery to Close

DURING the State-wide prohibition campaign in Missouri in 1910, Busch, from his castle in Germany, watched the progress of the fight. Some of the prohibition orators had criticised the brewing business in unsparing language. Busch was indignant. He called his secretary and dictated a cablegram to his son, August A. Busch, in St. Louis, declaring that if the manufacture and sale of beer was a real injury to the community he would stop it without the enactment of any prohibitory amendment.

"If I didn't think it was an honest, legitimate industry," his cablegram concluded, "I would not be in it."

How Ministers Attested Busch as "First Citizen"

ADOLPHUS BUSCH'S so-called place as "first citizen" of St. Louis was uniquely attested when, in the fall of 1911, a number of the city's religious leaders began preparation for a campaign of the Men and Religion Forward Movement.

As a preliminary to this campaign, in other cities, a sort of social and civic census had been taken. A list of the leading ten citizens was the principal feature of this census. The promoters of the movement here, some of them clergymen and all of them actively interested in church work, were asked to prepare lists, with the understanding that they were to name the men who actually exercised the greatest influence on the city's life.

When the lists were presented for comparison, it was found that Adolphus Busch's name was included in every list, and was the first name on most of them.

This tribute was the more striking, in that it came from men, some of whom were opposed to Busch's business, and when it is further considered that Busch himself was not a man of religious professions. He gave liberally to churches and their institutions. Once, when his brewing firm desired the site of a small Episcopal church, he built the congregation a much handsomer house of worship on a new site.

Lamented Split in Party; Sent Protest to Bartholdt

IN the election of 1912, Adolphus Busch took more interest than he ordinarily did in partisan contests. He was for Taft, and he lamented what he considered the needless action of Col. Roosevelt in splitting the Republican party by organizing the Progressive movement.

At a meeting of Americans, held in his Rhenish castle July 4, 1912, a cablegram was prepared which was sent to Congressman Bartholdt, with Busch's name heading the lost of signers. "We do not want or need a third party," the message began. The re-election of Taft was urged as "the best President our country has had for a long time."

Gave $75,000 a Year for Employes' Happiness

ONE of the works of Busch's later years was the establishment of a "happiness fund" of $75,000 a year, for the benefit of his brewery employes. He personally prepared the plans for the fund early in 1910, before leaving for his winter home in Pasadena.

The fund is divided into six departments. There is a pension fund for all employes; a fund for widows and orphans of workmen; a sick benefit endowment administered by the Relief Association, a fund for bravery medals and awards, for workmen only; an entertainment fund, for workmen; the annual picnic fund, for all employes; and the Christmas presents fund, for office employes only.

The administration of the funds is in the hands of seven men. The president of the corporation, three men selected by the workingmen and three by the company.

Men Who Tried to Rob Him Freed by Brewer

TWO armed men swung onto the railing of the observation end of Busch's private car, when Busch and a private party were journeying between Kansas City and St. Louis, last spring.

The would-be robbers were thrown off the car and later arrested. Busch was asked to prosecute them. When told that the prisoners were not more than 20 years of age, he made a personal appeal to the Kansas City prosecutor for their release. After considerable parleying his request was granted.

"They'll know better the next time," said Busch, "and it won't do any harm to give them another chance."

Advice to Young Men by Man Who Made $40,000,000

Adolphus Busch was one of 10 men who told the story of their business lives to Walter B. Stevens two years ago for publication in the Post-Dispatch Daily Magazine. Each gave advice to young men. Mr. Busch said:

"THE best advice I can give a young man just starting in business life is to work faithfully and loyally and with untiring energy for his employer—to give his employer double what he is paid for.

"Then somebody will discover his ability, his diligence, and will promote him, make a friend of him, and will wish him well. That is the substance of my career.

"I may say this to you. In this great establishment of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association there are 6000 men. The office force numbers 100. All promotions are made according to merits.

"The opportunities to rise are as good today as they ever were. Good men are scarce. Good captains are still scarcer. If a man has capacity and industry he is bound to rise. I believe that in proportion to the opportunity, good men are scarcer than they ever were."

Lights on Gate Go Out as Busch Doctors Die

WHEN Aolphus Busch was critically ill at his home, 1 Busch place, about six years ago, his physicians were Drs. Bernays, Luedeking and Fischel. The story is told that his bed was so placed that he could look from his window and see the ornamental gateway which formed an entrance from Pestalozzi street to the parked driveway which led to his home. Above this gate were three electric lights, one at either side and the other in the center. One night as the millionaire invalid looked from his window one of the lights went out.

A few minutes later a member of the family entered the sick room and told Busch that Dr. Bernays had died.

A short time later while Busch was looking from the window another of the three lights went out. He called in a servant and asked: "Who is dead now?" As the servant was leaving the room a telephone message to the Busch home said that Dr. Luedeking had died.

"Only one more light," said Busch when the news was conveyed to him.

The next morning Dr. Fischel called to see his patient. Busch told him of the strange coincidence of the vanishing lights and added:

"When the third light goes out, doctor, it will be for you or me."

Spends Youth on Rafts; Breaks Jam Years Later

AN interesting incident throwing light on Busch's boyhood is told by William B. Thompson, a St. Louis attorney, who was a guest of Busch at Frankfort-on-the-Main during a trip to Europe in 1895.

He was invited by Busch to dine with him and United States Senator Vest at the Busch villa. After dinner Busch suggested that they visit points of interest in the city.

When the trip reached the River Main the carriage stopped for Busch and his guests to see the extent of the inland traffic. The stream was blockaded by a jam. Busch jumped out of the carriage and ran to the river bank. He leaped from raft to raft until he reached the one which caused the jam, which he soon broke.

When Busch returned to the carriage Senator Vest remarked to him that he seemed to have many accomplishments and had proved himself versatile.

"I spent my early life in rafting on the Rhine and Main," Busch answered, "and I am familiar with the ways of rafts and raftsmen. That was my father's occupation, and I followed it until I went to America."

Busch Called "The Prince;" Title Conferred by Taft.

"THE PRINCE," was the nickname applied to Busch by his most intimate friends in recent years. The title was bestowed by President Taft, who, visiting St. Louis, saw Busch's form among those awaiting him in the Union Station train shed. "Hello!" called the President, "there's my friend, Prince Busch!" And he hastened to grasp Busch's hand.

EMPLOYE RELATES ATTITUDE TO BUSCH

"We Regarded Him as Greatest Employer on Earth," Says Brewery Superintendent.

Henry Menzenwerth, general superintendent of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association, who had worked 32 years under Adolphus Busch, told a reporter last night of the brewer's interest in his employes and of their great loyalty to him.

"We all regarded Mr. Busch as the greatest employer on earth," he said. "This feeling was not shared by his higher-salaried men alone, but extended into the ranks of the most lowly, as Mr. Busch was interested alike in the welfare of laborers and those of higher station.

"His interest in the employe was always manifested in some outward way, and was never so forcefully or repeatedly shown as in the case of one 'Jimmel,' a nickname he had for a laborer. After every trip to Europe or California, Mr. Busch never failed to inquire for 'Jimmel,' for whom he had a great liking.

Men Raised From the Ranks.

"Once Mr. Busch became acquainted with an employe, he made it a part of his business to watch his development and to see to it that he advanced from time to time as reward for his merit. All his department heads in the brewery are men of from 15 to 25 years' experience, and it was his delight to inform his employes of his appreciation for their work. He never went outside his brewery for experts to come in and do his work. He was forever looking for men in his own offices to step in and assume the reins where vacancies occurred. Sometimes men were set back again, but only in cases where they proved incapable. Once a man proved his capability, Mr. Busch always found him an opportunity to demonstrate his ability to the fullest.

"I have 27 assistants. All of them were picked from the ranks, according to the ideas of Mr. Busch. They love the Anheuser-Busch concern. They regard it as if it were their own.

"Mr. Busch was a man who gave his employes his fullest confidence. Once you had given him proof of your loyalty he left the performance of your tasks to you alone. It worked like a charm, for everyone knows that the Busch family toured the world and the business went on just the same."

Menzenwerth was shocked Friday evening when the telegram arrived telling of Mr. Busch's death. He told of how Busch had sent him a 16-page letter, dated Sept. 30, which indicated that he was in excellent spirits and in full possession of all his business faculties on the eve of his death.

"In this letter," Menzenwerth continued, "he told me of his desire to return to St. Louis and of the things he intended to do when he arrived. He spoke of improvements for the brewery, and suggested that it might be a good thing for me to select an assistant to go abroad and see what others were doing in the brewing line.

"He jokingly said that he believed we were ahead of all the brewers in the world, but it wouldn't hurt hus men to get about a little and see how others were getting along."

Menzenwerth told of his employer's great concern for the poor, be they friends or total strangers. On cold mornings, after his arrival at the brewery he invariably inquired about the needs of the destitute ones on the South Side. Time and again Menzenwerth declared he had been called and told to order a few extra cars of coal and to inform the police that needy persons would be supplied by his own drivers upon their approval.

1508 Auto Casualties in New York in Nine Months.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—There were 1508 persons either killed or injured by automobiles in New York City during the past nine months. Astounding as it is, the rate per 100,000 of population is the smallest of any large city in New York State or New Jersey. Poughkeepsie's rate is 100, Hoboken 97, Atlantic City 60, while in New York City it is only 29 to 100,000.

SULZER'S 'STORY' LOCKED IN SAFE BY HIS LAWYERS

Judge Herrick Says It Won't Be Given Out Till After Decision, if at All.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 11.—If Gov. Sulzer's so-called "sensational story," which he long has said he wanted to make public, ever is given out, it will be after the verdict of the High Court of Impeachment is in and his attorneys have withdrawn from his employ.

The manuscript of the story was located today in the office safe of Judge D. Cady Herrick. The Judge admitted that he had it. When the case is over, the Judge said, he will return the manuscript to the Governor. Then Herrick will have withdrawn from Sulzer's employ and responsibility for the publication of the "revelations" will not rest with him.

"After I am through with this case, the Governor may do as he sees fit with the manuscript," Judge Herrick said.

The careful manner in which the Governor's counsel have guarded the document since it was indited almost three weeks ago has caused much speculation regarding its contents. The attorneys consider the publication of it before the verdict has been reached would be detrimental to their case. In order that the Governor, who has not always regarded their orders in respect to remaining silent, could not release the statement they carried it away from the Executive Mansion.

A rumor that the Governor was ready to make public his story today caused much interest. Then it was that Judge Herrick revealed its whereabouts.

This is the first day since the trial began that the Governor has absolutely refused to see anyone. While generally he has denied audiences to newspaper and magazine men, heretofore he never has failed to see callers from other cities and many local politicians daily. Today, however, the doors of the Executive Mansion were barred to all. Mrs. Sulzer answered most of the calls on the telephone and at the door.

They were welcomed with a speech by G. Thirolf, assistant chief engineer of the brewery. Complimentary replies were made by Adolph Timm, secretary of the National German-American Alliance, and Alfred Meier of St. Joseph, Mo. A luncheon was served.

AVIATOR LOOPING THE LOOP IN AN AEROPLANE

THIS remarkable photograph shows M. Pegoud, the daring French aviator, in the act of turning his aeroplane upside-down at a height of 1500 feet, to perform his hair-raising loop-the-loop feat.

Of this feat, as performed recently at Brooklands, England, the London Pall Mall Gazette says:

"M. Pegoud turned over abruptly backwards from the upside-down position. The machine turned over in its own length, and, therefore, did not exactly describe a 'loop.' One instant the spectators saw the pilot's head pointing downwards, the wheels upward, and the propeller to the left. The next instant the pilot was on top, the wheels below, and the propeller to the right."

DR. BLAKE WILL RESIST WIFE'S SUIT FOR SEPARATION

First Contest Will Be Made Friday When Motion for Alimony Is to Be Heard.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Dr. Joseph A. Blake, the surgeon whose wife, Katherine Ketcham Blake, brought suit for separation in the Supreme Court yesterday, will resist the action. This became known today when it was learned at the offices of Nicoll, Anable, Lindsay & Fuller that Cornelius Sullivan, a member of that firm, had been retained by Dr. Blake to represent him.

The first contest in the suit will be made Friday when a motion for alimony and counsel fees will be made by Mrs. Blake's attorneys O'Gorman, Battle & Marshall. Sullivan will appear then in behalf of his client and will, it is understood, oppose the motion.

Mrs. Blake askes for $150 a month alimony, $4500 for her attorneys and a lump sum of $3600 to pay for outstanding bills, which she says she has contracted since her husband is alleged to have ceased contributing to her support. She also asks for allowance for the two sons for their maintenance and education.

Dr. Blake has not conferred with his lawyers since the filing of the suit. The last conference he had with Sullivan was a week ago. At that time it was stated the alienation suit for $1,000,000, brought by Mrs. Blake against Mrs. Clarence Mackay, was discussed. It was not announced what position Dr. Blake would take in the matter.

The surgeon has been cautioned by his attorneys not to discuss the case, and his attorney is following the same advice he gave to the client.

Sullivan was seen by a Post-Dispatch correspondent today and asked to make a statement in behalf of his client, as Dr. Blake has thus far said nothing.

"I won't discuss the case in behalf of Dr. Blake, and most certainly he will not have anything to say," was Sullivan's response.

MAN, 82, IS SENT TO WORKHOUSE 103RD TIME

Eighteen Years of the Forty He Lived in Minneapolis Have Been Spent in Prison.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 11.—George Kelley, 82 years old, today in Municipal Court received his 103d sentence to the workhouse. He was given a 30-day term. Judge O. L. Smith was inclined to make it 90, but Kelley thought 30 enough.

"Well," said Judge Smith, "you've been up there so many times that you perhaps have a right to say how long you'll go for. Thirty days it is."

Kelley, who is known as "Workhouse Kelley," has spent 18 years of the 40 he has lived in Minneapolis in the workhouse.

CAMINETTI FILES APPEAL

Bill of Exceptions Covers 400 Typewritten Pages.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 11.—A bill of exceptions vovering 400 typewritten pages was filed in the United States District Court here today by counsel for F. Drew Caminetti, convicted of violation of the Mann act.

Failure of the Court to instruct the jury that Caminetti's omission of details of his trip to Reno with Miss Lola Norris, when he told his own story from the witness stand, could not be held against him, is one of the grounds of appeal. The prosecution will be allowed 10 days to prepare amendments to the bill.

"MAN OF THE WOODS" TELLS THE STORY OF HIS TWO MONTHS' EXILE

"Mental Starvation and Craving for Companionship My Only Real Suffering," Says Artist Joseph Knowles, Who Proves That Modern Man Can Still Live Like Adam.

Never Will Forget Voice of Little French Girl Who Was First to Greet Him—It Was Sweetest Music He Ever Heard.

JOSEPH KNOWLES, an animal artist and former trapper and Maine woods guide, entered the forest at Spencer Lake, Me., Aug. 4, to live two months like Adam. He was naked. He had no weapons, no tools, nor implements of any kind. He had wagered with several friends that a man could support himself in the primitive surroundings and come forth in good physical condition and sufficiently attired to walk the streets of a city, without risking arrest.

It was a part of the arrangement that he was to write messages on birchbark with charcoal and leave them at a certain point to assure his friends that he was in good health. In case a message was missed these friends were to enter the forest in search of him.

Knowles returned from the forest to civilization Monday in good physical condition. He carried a ide pack on his back and was clad the skins of animals he had illed.

He has lost 30 pounds of weight the two months, dropping from 4 pounds to 174. His appearance early tells the tale of the hardships e has undergone. From head to eet he is scratched and bruised by he briars and underbrush in which e has lived for 60 days. He is anned like an Indian, almost black.

Over his tanned neck and arms was a black bear skin, cleverly fastened with thongs of deerskin. His trousers were of deerskin, made Indian fashion, with the hair inside. His feet were encased in moccasins, sewed with sinew. He wore no hat, no sleeves, no underwear.

On his back was a knapsack of woven lining bark. It was filled with trophies from the forest. Slung over his arm were his bows and arrows. Sheathed in buckskin a crude knife of horn hung from his belt.

How Knowles Looked When He Came Back to Civilization

TANNED like an Indian, almost black from exposure to the sun.

Had a matted beard of gray, and long and matted gray hair.

Has lost 30 pounds in weight, dropping from 204 to 174.

Scratched and bruised from head to foot by briars and underbrush.

Wore skin of black bear over his upper body, cleverly fastened with thongs of deerhide.

Upper garment sleeveless.

Had no underwear.

Wore no hat.

Trousers of deer skin, made with the hair inside, Indian fashion, skin tight.

Feet encased in moccasins of buckskins, sewed with sinew.

Carried a pack made of the woven lining bark of cedar, filled with forest rophies.

His rude bow and arrows were slung over his arm. From his belt hung a crude knife made of horn, carried in a buckskin sheath.

MY RETURN TO CIVILIZATION

By JOSEPH KNOWLES.

IT was good to hear a human voice again.

Never will I forget the greeting of Frienie Gerard, the 14-year-old French girl who ran into me unexpectedly, seven miles from Lake Megantic. How I strived with my trapper's knowledge of the patois, to follow her artless remarks, the first spoken words that I dared listen to for two months. I had heard voices when I happened near camps in the forest, but I had run away from them, lest I be tempted to go to them.

Frienie had greeted me shyly, but so confidently that I had given no thought as to how I might appear to her, so my first shock was when 10 children of Mrs. U. N. Roy, at play in the farmyard a mile up the road, ran screaming into the house when I approached.

Then I remembered my last look at myself in a water mirror; that my face was covered with a brown and gray beard that for the lack of an effective comb appeared matted and my hair, more or less unkempt. Also I realized that the exposure had given to me more the color of an Indian than a white man.

My conversation with Frienie was much more welcome to me even than the cigarette I smoked after I reached the Queen's Hotel in Megantic or the hearty meal of fried salt pork and potatoes I enjoyed that evening, although I had been deprived of salt for two months and had eaten nothing in that period that could be called a substitute for potatoes on the ordinary daily menu.

All of these things I craved for the stomach, but the physical craving was nothing to compare with the mental starvation and loneliness in that great forest. I had hunted much and had worked as a guide, and was accustomed to days of silence, but not to weeks and months of loneliness; of not hearing a human voice and with nothing to read. I realize as never before how much more fixed a mental habit can become than a mere physical one.

Scared Children Flee.

THE frightened scurrying of the Roy children to shelter was like that of the animals I had been watching and studying in the woods, but the fact that Frienie had greeted me so confidently had left me unprepared for the amazement that was apparent in the face and manner of a railroad engineer when I approached him as he stood at the side of his freight engine on the switch, oiling the bearings as he waited for the almost due through passenger train.

I believe that if he had not read of my adventures in the forest he would have run. His first impulse was to seek shelter and then, as he told me afterward, he remembered my flight from my camp and of hearing of a prospect that I would leave the forest in this section.

He greeted me kindly and called a conference of the freight crew as to the best method of stopping the passenger train to carry me to Megantic, and I confess that I was not unwilling to accept this aid.

It must be remembered that I had been on my feet for 10 days in my flight from Game Wardens. Those 10 days had been more or less a period of terror because of my fear of an arrest that would spoil my plans and also that some big game hunter would hear me prowling through the bushes, and, seeing my fur coat, would shoot me.

I was entirely unprepared for the enthusiastic reception that began the moment I stepped on that passenger train. I had not thought that newspaper reporters would be sent up there to await my coming, nor did I realize that my feat of seeking to prove that man still was master of his natural surroundings would arouse so much interest. I was seeking to enter Megantic almost as a fugitive from justice, and here was a gala reception, with Game Wardens from the State I had left, the Mayor, provincial officials and the entire city in festival array in my honor. I was overwhelmed, and I have a less connected memory of that first evening in civilization than of any period spent awake in the forest.

Milk First Food.

THE glass of milk sent to my room at the hotel as my first food in civilization was delicious. Also how I enjoyed lying on that bed and smoking a cigarette! These creature comforts would not have appealed to me so strongly had I carried out my original program of going from my camp direct to friends.

In the 10 days that I spent in flight I endured many hardships that I had not encountered before. I had left my comfortable, sheltered bed of fir boughs, had deserted my stock of dried flesh and my known supply of berries. Also I had hurried through underbrush at the cost of many slight but somewhat painful wounds.

The last two nights before I reached Megantic I had slept but little because of the terrific downpour of rain. I had been forced to spend the nights sitting on the sheltered sides of trees and was unable to build a fire. During the last two days I had eaten little except a single partridge. Also my flight and worry had sapped the buoyancy from my life.

My food during my period in the woods, as I have told before, largely consisted of fish, fresh deer meat, bear meat, spruce partridges and berries. As late as last week I found blueberries in the burnt lands.

I came out feeling in fine condition. I do not believe every man can do what I have done, but I feel confident that a man with good health, a knowledge of the woods and resourcefulness can accomplish the same thing. I believe any one of the game wardens could do it. I have satisfied a curiosity.

The hardest thing of all was the awful lonesomeness, because of which I came near coming out twice. The isolation almost drove me crazy. Several times I have heard voices afar off and that made it only the harder.

Cold Did Not Bother Him for He Soon Had Enough Skins to Protect Him—Missed Salt and Tobacco.

The eating question is nothing, neither is the dress. I did not suffer any to speak of from the cold. It was that awful lonesomeness.

Loafed Last Ten Days.

DURING the last 10 days I accomplished little. Up to this time I constantly aspired to accomplish something, but my ambition left me. During the past 10 days I believe I have gained 10 pounds because of this.

On my trip up to Canada I simply used the moss on the north side of the trees to guide me. I have worn my furs but little lately. I dressed up to come to town.

On my last night I don't know whether I camped in Canada or Maine. It was somewhere on the other side of Beattie. I did not sleep any because the rain was falling heavily. Perhaps it was about two hours I sat with my back against a tree.

I started on this march to Canada the day after I waved the torch on the shore of King and Bartlett Lake. When I got out I was not sure whether it was Saturday or Sunday. It was a pretty rough country, but my trip was largely down hill all the way.

I came through the deepest forest because I did not dare to strike the roads for fear of being seen before time. Then from up in the mountains I heard a wonderful thing. I heard the whistle of a train. I pressed towards it and finally came on the railroad tracks. Someone told me later it was a little after 4 o'clock.

When the Maine Game Wardens came to my room at the hotel I said to Chief Durign, their spokesman:

"I want to explain just why I came to Canada, gentlemen. It was because I feared that I would be molested in my experiment just at the close by Wardens whom I thought might hunt me down. It was not to escape my fine. It was simply because of what I have told you. I seem to have made a mistake. I knew friends of mine had wagered money that I would win out and if I had been apprehended before my time was up they would have suffered. The whole experiment would have suffered. It took hold of me terribly, and it preyed each day more and more upon my mind. I am sorry, gentlemen, to have caused you all this trouble."

Perhaps I would not have become a prey to the fears that overpowered me had I not been a victim of mental starvation, but while in the woods I did not know of the interest my experiment had aroused and that I had become a big enough figure for an offense to be overlooked.

Garment Strikers Commended.

A resolution condemning police brutality and commending the striking members of the Cloak and Skirt Makers' Union was adopted Wednesday at a meeting at the Central Trades and Labor Union Hall, 228 Olive street.

Appetite Ho! Ho! 'Tis a Great Joy

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Are the Best Appetite Makers Dyspeptics and Stomach Sufferers Can Use.

Appetite is very largely a series of signals from the stomach. When one has a rousing appetite at the sight or smell of food the stomach through its connection with the mind of man is asked whether the food seen or smelled would be welcome. The stomach, if healthy, says yes and at once our mouths water and we are hungry from desire—keenly, ravenously hungry. If the stomach be sick then we have no appetite and are actually nauseated.

Waiter—"How's your appetite today, sir."

Guest—"Bully good. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets make me eat like a horse."

Appetite makes the glands of the mouth open and saliva flows very freely—hence the term "Mouth Water." This is the first digestive juice. It has an important office to perform as all starchy foods are partially digested by it because one of its ingredients, ptyalin is almost an instant digestive of starch. This process reduces the starch in foods to sugar.

The appetite causing a free flow of saliva aids the stomach by its ability to mix the food eaten with mouth juices which enables it to more readily do its work.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into the mouth like food, are eaten, then dissolved and fluidized by the saliva. This mass then goes into the stomach and there quickly readjusts the stomach juices so that in a short time food is not offensive and man's appetite comes speedily back to him and he is hungry in a healthy, normal way.

By all means use a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet the very moment you feel a loss of hunger. The quick return of appetite to you will convince you quickly that your stomach has been out of order and that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were the means of restoring its normally healthy condition.

Every druggist carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and no matter where you may be you can always obtain a box anywhere for 50 cents. —ADV.

BALTIMORE AND NEW YORK

We Are St. Louis and Texas Agents for Steinway Pianos

Buy YOUR Steinway from the STEINWAY HOUSE

Fall Exhibition of Latest Designs

Think of 58 Grand Pianos

(mostly Steinways) on our various floors; this stock is larger than any two or three other grand stocks in St. Louis—even in Chicago and New York you will find only three grand displays as large as ours.

Friday of last week we received one solid carload of Steinway Grands, including among others twelve magnificent Miniature Grands—the ever-popular small size—ebonized $800 and mahogany $900.

You will find this display a joy and delight—come in, examine the various styles—play them and have them played for you—you will be under no obligation to buy.

Our stock of uprights is equally complete—if you are not ready for a grand now, why not buy an upright, and we will arrange for its exchange later on a grand without any loss to you.

What's in the Steinway Name?

There are names which are literally plowed into the business world. The name of Rothschild circulates wherever currency is known. Krupp is another word for cannon. Pullman signifies sleeping cars, while the name of is a world-wide synonym for pianos. The Steinway is the only piano known in every city, town and hamlet of the globe.

This international renown of the Steinway could only have been achieved by its vast superiority over all others.

From coast to coast the sale of the Steinway Piano is in every city controlled by the leading piano house. In San Francisco, Sherman, Clay & Co. in Denver, Knight & Campbell; in Chicago, Lyon & Healy; in New York, Cincinnati and Indianapolis, Steinway & Sons; in St. Louis, the FIELD-LIPPMAN PIANO STORES.

The question is often raised about the personnel of Steinway & Sons of today. It may interest intending buyers to know that there are seven direct descendants of the founder in control of the making and selling of Steinway Pianos.

Slightly Used Steinways at Reduced Prices

Never before at one time have we had in stock so many Steinways that could be offered at a reduced price—nor do we expect to have such a number again in many years. Large sales of new style Steinways are responsible for this splendid collection.

There is a difference in value—the prices will indicate that, but each instrument is a STEINWAY PIANO IN FINE CONDITION, with all that statement implies.

Steinway Pianos are not subject to the large price reductions of other pianos, because they retain their tonal qualities and general good condition longer than other instruments—consequently their intrinsic value decreases slowly.

We usually "rebuild" all pianos that are not absolutely new, but we hardly feel justified in calling these Steinways "rebuilt," for in but two or three cases have slight repairs been necessary.

With two or three exceptions you could place any one of these instruments in your home without your friends being aware of the fact that it was not a new piano.

We strongly urge all music-lovers who have the remotest idea of ever owning a Steinway to call and examine this collection of Steinways—you will be surprised at the saving you can make—very liberal terms of payment will be extended to any one wishing to purchase on terms.

A detailed history of each piano will be given to any one who asks for it—you will be given exact facts, dates and full information.

You have often seen Steinway Pianos offered at impossible prices—only to find them "sold" when you tried to buy them.

One firm has advertised a Steinway for several months at $290. We know of one man who has tried repeatedly to buy it, but has never succeeded in SEEING it. It is "always sold"—yet they continue to advertise it.

Another dealer advertises a Steinway nearly 50 years old at $100. This instrument has earned the right to honorable retirement, but will, perhaps, be compelled to serve this dealer's advertising necessities for many years to come.

The Steinways offered by us are not to be had for $100, $200, etc.—they are not sold or offered at such figures—Steinways, even when many years old, are worth several times what other pianos will bring, and those we offer are nearly new.

The buying public is familiar with the rigid one-price system upon which new Steinways are sold, and will recognize in the offerings below, genuine savings—some of these pianos have never been out of our store—and are like new.

We Did Not Buy Any Bankrupt Auction Stock

WHY? Because of the five Steinway Grands, four of them were over 25 years old, and most of them were not full modern scale pianos, being less than 7⅓ octaves, that reason accounting for their presence in the bankrupt auction stock.

To answer many inquirers, we will give full data regarding these pianos which were bought by a piano department to be resold.

Grand No. 22,703 is 42 years old, and was sold under the hammer at $140.00.

Grand No. 42,956 is 34 years old, and brought $260.00.

Grand No. 48,500 is 32 years old, and brought $230.00.

Grand No. 61,688 is over 25 years old, sold at $305.00.

The conditions of an auction sale of this kind are so well known to the public that we need only to remind you of the tribute shown to these old Steinways when old pianos that have been played upon for a generation bring such prices under the auctioneer's merciless hammer. At private sales these pianos, no doubt, would have sold for much more.

TERMS ON BRIDGE APPROACH MADE KNOWN BY A. & M.

Proposal to Build and Lease to City for 20 Years to Be Incorporated in Bill.

SUBMIT MEASURE TUESDAY

Comptroller Player Estimates Cost to St. Louis by Plan Will Be $7,000,000.

Player's Estimates of Cost to Complete Bridge Approach

Highway and A. & M. approaches, by bond issue	$7,400,000
Highway and A. & M. approaches, A. & M. offer	7,000,000
Highway and Reber approaches, by bond issue	5,087,500

(Estimates made by Comptroller Player on 4¼ per cent interest basis).

The three estimates include the paving and tracks on the channel spans, and St. Louis approaches, but do not provide for surface tracks in St. Louis between Eighth and Twenty-third streets on Gratiot street. the A. & M. approach includes the surface tracks through St. Clair County to the northern limit, a total distance of 21 miles.

Alton & Mississippi officials say that under their offer, if no bond election is held, the city will save an additional $80,000 on the election, and at least 12 months' interest, amounting to $170,000 on bonds that would have to be issued while the approaches were under construction. The A. & M. offers to give the city the 21-mile right-of-way, 100 feet wide, for its approach, valued at $250,000.

A proposal to build and lease to the city for 20 years the highway and Alton & Mississippi Railroad approache to the free bridge in Illinois will be made in a bill drafted by former Counselor Charles W. Bates, which will contain the terms offered by the promoters and will be introduced Tuesday in the Council and House of Delegates.

Leo J. Scherrer, promoter of the Alton & Mississippi, and sponsor for the bills to be introduced, says the measures will propose that $100,000 in cash be deposited by the A. & M. upon the passage of the ordinance, to be used by the Board of Public Improvements with $90,000 now in the City Treasury, to complete the tracks and road bed on the bridge spans and St. Louis approaches, estimated to cost $189,000.

President Edmund R. Kinsey of the Board of Public Improvements yesterday estimated the cost of the two Illinois approaches and the track and paving on the balance of the bridge at between $3,900,000 and $4,000,000.

Player to Submit Tables.

Comptroller James Y. Player will submit printed tables to the Assembly Tuesday, showing that a $4,000,000 bond issue bearing 4¼ per cent interest for 20 years, would make the total cost to complete the bridge by this plan $7,400,000. Player's tables show that an annual interest charge of $170,000 and sinking fund of $200,000 under a bond issue would necessitate a tax rate of 6 cents on the $100 for 11 years and 5 cents for the last nine years.

Scherrer says his bill will stipulate that the entire property specified by the city shall be built by his company and leased to the city for 20 years on an annual payment of $350,000 a year, or a total of $7,000,000 in 20 years, when the approaches shall become the property of the city without further cost.

"Our bill will propose also that the payments shall not begin until Jan. 1, 1915, or as soon thereafter as either one of the approaches is accepted by the city as complete," explained Scherrer. "This provision will save the city, in addition to the $400,000 in the total cost, a year's interest of $170,000 that it would have to pay if bonds are issued before a contract is let. It will also save the city about $80,000 that it will cost to hold a bond election, if it is decided to issue bonds."

Cash Payment Discussed.

Scherrer says the $100,000 cash payment to be made the city would not be an extra obligation, and that his company would be reimbursed for this as well as the cost of building the Illinois approaches, by 20 annual payments of $350,000 under the proposed lease.

President Kinsey says this proposal would enable the city to complete every detail of the bridge except the surface railroad tracks in St. Louis between Eighth and Twenty-third streets on Gratiot street, estimated to cost $135,000.

Kinsey says the specifications he has prepared for the approaches call for a 21-mile railroad approach extending from the shore pier of the bridge to the Madison-St. Clair County line, about three miles of which would be elevated, and 5500 feet of which would be steel construction in East St. Louis.

Comptroller Player will submit also at the next meeting of the Free Bridge Conference Commiatee, estimates of total cost of the A. & M. project if the city were to issue bonds for 30, 40 or 50 year periods, bearing interest at the rates of 4 or 4¼ per vent.

Estimates of Total Cost.

The total cost at 4 and 4¼ per cent interest respectively of a $4,000,000 bond issue would be, according to Player's tables: For 20 years, $7,200,000 and $7,400,000; 30 years, $8,800,000 and $9,100,000; 40 years, $10,400,000 and $10,800,000; 50 years, $12,000,000 and $12,500,000.

Comptroller Player has gathered statistics from many American cities of good credit that have attempted to float bonds recently, and has found that some have failed to sell bonds bearing 4½ per cent. Boston has advertised for bids to be opened Oct. 15, on $4,000,000 of city bonds bearing 4¼ per cent interest, and the fate of this issue may determine largely the value of St. Louis bonds today.

Scherrer said yesterday that his proposal to the city is on the assumption that 4¼ per cent is an accurate gauge of the interest that would have to be paid for money by the city today.

Offers on Longer Term Leases.

"In compliance with the suggestion of Councilmen and Delegates that we submit propositions to extend the term of the lease to the city to 30, 40 or 50 years, we will submit offers on this basis also, in every case agreeing to lease at a less annual rental than the interest and sinking fund under a bond issue would amount to. For instance, on a 20-year basis we will agree to accept $350,000 a year instead of the $370,000 the city would have to pay under a bond issue, making a total payment of $7,000,000 to us, where the cost by a bond issue would be $7,400,000. Upon a 50-year basis, the city would pay $12,500,000, or $250,000 a year interest and sinking fund. We will offer to extend the lease to 50 years if the Assembly desires for $240,000 a year, or a total of $12,000,000."

The alternative of building the Alton & Mississippi approach by either bond issue or leasehold, is the construction of the Reber approach for which the city already has acquired land.

The construction cost of the Reber approach together with the highway approach in Illinois has been estimated at $2,750,000, the size of the last two bond issues submitted to the public. Comptroller Player previously has advised the Assembly as to the total cost of this plan under a bond issue.

Estimates Cost at $5,087,500.

Player has estimated the cost of this project at $5,087,500, assuming that 20-year bonds bearing 4¼ per cent interest will have to be issued.

Scherrer says it is the company's preference that a 20-year lease be assumed by the city, but that he is prepared to arrange a lease of greater period if it is the desire of the city to spread the cost of the bridge approaches over more than a single generation. The interest charges on a 50-year bond issue or lease would make the total cost 71 per cent greater than under a 20-year lease or bond issue.

Scherrer says the right-of-way previously tendered the city for $1, will be offered under his bills on the same terms, and he estimates the value of this land at $250,000. It will be a strip 100 feet wide and 21 miles long.

Mayor to Call Conference.

Mayor Kiel has announced that he will summon the Free Bridge Conference Committee to a meeting Wednesday to pass upon the features of the A. & M. plan incorporated in the bills to be introduced Tuesday.

When questioned as to the possibility of accurately fixing the cost of work to be done by the Alton and Mississippi instead of relying upon the usual system of competitive bidding to fix the lowest price, President Kinsey of the board stated:

"Of course it depends upon the efforts of those who prepare the specifications and estimate the cost of materials and labor, to determine accurately that the city will not pay more than the work is worth. I shall submit the proposal of the Alton and Mississippi representatives to the entire board and obtain their concerted judgments upon the value of the work. The specifications are to be under the direction and to the satisfaction of the board."

CLAYTON YIELDS TO WILSON, QUITS SENATORIAL RACE

Alabaman Will Remain in House to Help Carry Out Anti-Trust Program.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Representative Henry D. Clayton, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, today sent to President Wilson a letter expressing his willingness to withdraw from the Alabama senatorial race and remain in the House to help carry through the administration's anti-trust program.

Coincident with the publication of this letter, Clayton announced his resignation as the senatorial appointee for the unexpired term of the late Senator Johnston. His resignation was addressed to Gov. O'Neal, who appointed him several weeks ago, and a copy of it was sent to Vice-President Marshall.

Clayton's letters were made public after conferences with Gov. O'Neal, former Gov. W. D. Jelks and other Alabama political advisers. The resignation as Senator, which is now under consideration in the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, reopens the entire question of the right of Gov. O'Neal to make an appointment under the new direct elections amendment to the Constitution.

Gov. O'Neal Undecided.

"I have not decided what course I will follow as regards filling the vacancy resulting from Senator Johnston's death," said Gov. O'Neal tonight. "As the Senate has not yet passed on Mr. Clayton's credentials, the situation is the same as when the vacancy first occurred. I have no doubt in my own mind of my right to appoint a temporary successor to Senator Johnston, but I will not act in the matter until after returning to Alabama and consulting with legal advisers.

"There seems to be conflicting opinions in the Senate as to whether the Governor may appoint, or whether he must call the Legislature into special session before an election can be called."

In making public his letter to President Wilson, Clayton reiterated the brief statement he made yesterday in acceding to the President's wish that he remain in the House.

Following Wilson's Wish.

"I can do no less than follow the express and repeated wish of the President to remain in the House and continue as chairman of the great Judiciary Committee, provided, of course, the wishes of the Democrats in the Third Congressional District of Alabama are in harmony with the expressed judgment and desire of the head of the party.

"I have, therefore, tendered to the Governor of Alabama my resignation of the appointment to fill the vacancy created by the death of the late Senator Joseph F. Johnston, and will be a candidate for re-election to the House."

HELEN GOULD SHEPARD SCHOLARSHIP TO TEACHER

CLAREMORE, Ok., Oct. 11.—To Virgil Kershner, a native of Iberia, Mo., and one of the brightest young teachers of Eastern Oklahoma, has been awarded a Helen Gould Shepard scholarship in the New York University. He won in a high score of points over more than 1500 eligible candidates, and has gone to New York to enter the university.

Kershner is 20 years old, and of German parentage. He attended the public schools of Iberia, Mo., and Claremore, Ok. His secondary education was received in the State University Preparatory School at Claremore.

After being graduated from this school, Kershner spent some time in field work with an engineering party and later received appointment as a cadet in West Point. He failed in the physical examination, owing to an injury suffered in a football game. This fall he obtained a school in a Rogers County district and had begun teaching, when word came that he had won the scholarship. He has chosen the engineering course in the New York University.

ATHLETICS HAVE NO WEAK POINTS, MATHEWSON SAYS

Old Master, Who Pitched Well but Lost in Series Final, Declares "Team With the Punch Won."

By Christy Mathewson,
Star Pitcher of the Giants.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.

THIS semes to me to be the time to write a funny story, only I haven't any more laughs left in me than there is "stuff" left in my right arm at this minute.

I feel as if it would be more appropriate now to write my baseball valedictory, but I suppose I will be trailing South with the club for spring practice next March. Therefore it must be a funny story. Certainly there was a lot of humor in the game. You should have watched it from where I did and you would have been handed many a laugh.

Did "Home Run" Baker win the game for the Athletics? Certainly he did! Whereabouts in the stand did he drive the ball? Why, he didn't drive the ball into the stand at all; but he won it with what is known as a "Cincinnati base hit," resulting in two runs. That was just as good or even better than a home run, except that no fan had a baseball to take home as a souvenir.

"Cincinnati Hit" Ruins Matty.

Don't you get the laugh in that yet? Well, maybe you don't know exactly what a "Cincinnati base hit" is. If you do skip the next two or three lines. Always previous to this season, when there were men on the bases and the ball was hit to the infield, if the play was made to some other base besides first, and the attempted play did not go through, it was scored as a fielder's choice in all towns on the circuit, except Cincinnati. This year the scoring rules were revised so that it is scored in every town as a hit, instead of being localized to Cincinnati. Hence it is known as a "Cincinnati base hit," and it was Baker's terrific "Cincinnati base hit" which resulted in the two runs that beat us.

If I hadn't had to laugh, I would have felt sorry for poor old Eddie Plank out there trying to beat us, without a thing on the ball.

His curve wasn't breaking and he had no speed and his crossfire was rotten. In fact, he was so bad that Mr. Klem, the umpire, had to go out and teach him how to put his foot on the rubber.

That was a terrible disgrace for a man who had been pitching only 39 years—no, I mean 13 years—and hadn't learned any more about the game than that.

It Was No Joke to Matty.

Just to think—to be warned by the umpire in front of all those 40,000 persons. Did you notice Plank blush, and how he immediately went up in the air so high that he was buried under a fusilade of two-base hits during the entire game?

But what could you expect when a fellow had nothing on the ball? How am I getting along with this funny story? Have any of the actor-humorist writers on the world's series got anything on me?

But I can't keep up the pace any longer. Plank beat me by pitching wonderful ball, and I take my hat off to him. I would rather be beaten by Plank than some youngster with lots of "pep" and dash. There is something in losing to an old bird like Eddie Plank.

Now that the funny story is all torn to pieces because I have exhausted my laughs, I want to say that I was responsible myself for the first run. Murphy got a hit over second base in the first inning, but Oldring forced him. Then I made my mistake. I put one where Collins could reach it, and this is bad taste any time you are pitching to that boy, because he usually responds. He did today with a base hit to right field, and Murphy moved to third. That was my mistake—to give Collins a ball he could get hold of. Baker pushed a fly to left field, and Oldring scored after the catch.

The fly was not a very long one, but Burns hurried his throw and got it too high. McLean missed the ball. You cannot blame him, for a throw from the outfield to the plate has to be made fast and is liable to go astray any time. Therefore I hold no one responsible for that first run except myself.

Baker Fails to Get Another Homer, but His "Cincinnati Hit" Wins Game

BAKER did his terrific slugging in the third inning. Murphy got his second hit to start it, and Doyle mauled the ball that Oldring hit at him so that there were two men on the bases. Anybody is liable to make an error, so you can't blame Doyle. Then Collins played the game by sacrificing. Baker had the spectators in the right field stand, at whom he was going to smash the ball, all picked out; but it carried only to Merkle, playing close, on the first bound.

Merkle got the ball, but he was torn between conflicting emotions, trying to make up his mind whether to touch out Baker or throw it home to stop Murphy. Murphy hesitated some in his start from third and as Merkle settled on Baker until he saw Murphy almost to the plate. Then he threw, but too late, and both were safe.

Baker made his calebrated "Cincinnati" base hit, which won the game. If Murphy had been caught at the plate, this would have been the second out, and McInnis' long sacrifice fly would not have been a sacrifice, but the last out. Instead, Oldring scored on it.

There is no use in trying to hold the boys when they are dumping down the "Cincinnati" base hits on you like that.

Then the Athletics fell all to pieces in the game. They could not do anything behind Plank, when some of the Giants did connect with his feeble little curves once in a while except cut down base hits and things.

The Athletics are a great ball club. We tested them thoroughly in this series and did not find a weak spot in their armor. Baker, Barry, Collins, Bender, Plank, McInnis, Oldring, Young Schang, all of them played wonderful ball. As I have said before, it is a great "money club." They go into the game with their heads up all the time and are a thinking ball club.

Collins, in my opinion, is the individual star of the series with his fast fielding and his great hiting. As I have said, he was responsible for the first run today, but he is not the kind of a player who seeks individual glory. He is always working for his team, as is shown by the fact that he sacrifices when that looks like the best play. He could take a chance on slamming the ball out and getting better press notices, but he is playing to win and using his head. To my mind this is the greatest type of ball player.

McLean Makes Good.

It looked for a minute as if his prophecy had come true when McLean came through with one of our magnificent collection of two hits. That's accumulating some—two hits. McLean has been batting well in this series. Shafer scored the only run on the hit, we were still hopeful that the muffing of the dinky infield fly would lead to better things, but Merkle hit to Collins, and that drab streak got the ball and threw to second, forcing McLean. The double play was completed easily.

There are many excuses which could be made for the result of the series, but the trouble with these alibis is that they won't fit the returns. There is that old one about the lame players and then Meyers being hurt, resulted in the younger pitchers, like Marquart, Tesreau and Demaree being handled by a strange catcher. But to get the real answer, it is only necessary to compare the batting and fielding averages of the two teams.

Our club did not play the game of the regular season. The Athletics showed they are a great team by playing their best when the stakes ran highest. Some of our players were nervous, and men like Burns and Shafer, whose work was largely responsible for the winning of the National League pennant did not play up to their standard because of nervousness.

The Athletics deserve all the credit of the series. Their pitchers worked wonderfully, and I never saw a club pull together so well. They act like a lot of college players in their games, all rooting and helping one another.

THE TEAM THAT CARRIED THE PUNCH WON. It is a great question whether I will ever get into another world's series. I am getting old. So here I write:

The End.

NOT MATTY'S FAULT IF GIANTS FAILED, JENNINGS WRITES

Old Master Pitched a Great Game, but Received No Hitting Support.

BY HUGH JENNINGS.
(Manager of the Detroit Tigers.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.

The closing world's series struggle was another great pitchers' battle between those two wonderful veterans—Christy Mathewson and Eddie Plank, the Gettysburg southpaw. The "old master" went down to defeat when his defense crumbled in the first three innings of today's game, and with this reverse went the last hope of the Giants winning the world's championship.

Mack's team outplayed the Giants in every game of the series, with the exception of the first Philadelphia contest, when Matty won the thrilling 10-inning game from Plank. The Athletics outhit the Giants and their fielding during the series was sensational. Mack has a wonderful team, both on the defense and attack, and it should be good for several years, providing that Plank and Bender, the two veterans of the Athletics can stand the strain.

Plank pitched a better game against Matty today than he did in Philadelphia. The veteran southpaw held the Giants to two singles and in every inning except the fifth and sixth retired McGraw's players in order. His pitching was sensational, yet a base on balls in the fifth inning and his error paved the way for the Giants' only run.

Eddie had wonderful control of his side-arm curves and the Giants had a hard time hitting the ball to the outfield.

Matty at His Best.

It was no fault of Matty that the Giants lost the game that gave the Athletics the world's championship In my opinion the old master's performance was equal to the game he pitched in Philadelphia, on Wednesday. After the fatal third inning, when the Athletics scored two runs on an error by Larry Doyle and a very bad piece of judgment on the part of Fred Merkle, the Athletics obtained only one more hit off Matty.

The old master allowed Mack's team only six hits and five of them came in the first three innings.

The same misfortune which happened to him in the Red Sox series, last year, cost him defeat today. The Giants went to pieces, or rather Merkle did when the first baseman lost his head in the third inning and the Athletics managed to score two runs on his costly mistake.

Three Players Score 39 Points for Smith in Defeating Ranken

Exceptional ground-gaining work by Hennerich and Holliday, and goals from three touchdowns made by Lineman Jarvis, netted 39 points for Smith Academy, the total made against the Ranken school in a contest at the Smith campus yesterday. The final score was 39 to 7, Ranken scoring in the last period after a brilliant end run by Schaefering, who also kicked the goal.

Six touchdowns were made by Smith, two of them following forward passes near the Ranken goal line.

The others were made on straight football plays, chiefly wide end runs. Hennerich and Holliday divided the touchdowns equally. Smith played an evenly good game on attack, making 19 points in the first half and 20 in the second period.

Games at C. B. C. Today.

The last games of the amateur baseball season will be played at Christian Brothers College today. The Banner Buggies will meet the Midland Athletics while the Wabadas will play the O'Neills. Play will begin at 1:30. W. Daly and W. [illegible] will umpire.

Eddie Collins Was Biggest Factor in Winning World's Title for Athletics, McGraw Thinks

His Playing Determined the Result in Three Games

Athletics' Second Baseman Starred at Bat, in the Field and Did More Valuable Headwork Than His Mates.

Matty Pitched Wonderfully and Held Mack's Sluggers in Final Struggle; but He Couldn't Hold His Own Team Down.

By John J. McGraw,
Manager of the New York Giants.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.

WELL, Matty could hold the Athletics, but he could not hold the Giants today. I suppose everybody wants to know what I think of the series, and tonight I don't feel as if I wanted to think about anything. Two things about the games for the championship of the world, concluded by the defeat of my club today, impressed me.

One was the great pitching of Mathewson in the series, after 13 years of work, and the hardest kind of work, in the big League. The other was the playing of the comparative youngster, Eddie Collins. I want to go on record as saying that Collins is the greatest ball player in the world. He showed it in this series.

Ty Cobb may mean more in the box office, because of his ability as a drawing card; but Collins wins more ball games for a club. He made a great many plays in this series that the spectator in the stand may have missed, but which were very apparent to me. Besides his individual work, he keeps the club on edge and thinks for many of the other players. He is a steady and brilliant fielder, getting balls that no other second baseman would try for. He also is one of the fastest thinkers I have ever watched, judging plays and executing them with great accuracy.

Besides his fielding he is easily the most dangerous hitter on the club, as is shown by his work in the series just closed. They may talk about Baker and the rest of them; but Collins is the most damaging in a pinch.

Collins No Grand-Stander.

COLLINS is not playing for individual glory, which is what I like about him. He is always ready to dump down the bunt when that looks like the play. He is also very aggressive and has so much pepper that he keeps all the rest of the team on its toes. He is a finished ball player of the thinking type, and to my mind the greatest in the world.

What makes me sore every time I look at him is to think of him playing at Columbia and getting away from me because his family wanted him to study law and not play baseball.

It was Connie Mack who persuaded him otherwise, and he has a world's series title as a result, now, for Collins was the principal factor in winning the first, third and fifth games of the series.

The fans doubtless want to know how my players felt after the defeat. The scene in the clubhouse was not one of hilarity. Somebody dropped a scarf pin while the players were getting dressed, and it sounded like a load of coal being dumped down a chute there was so much conversation.

We had counted on this series, but the Athletics outplayed us at every angle and I admit it.

My club looked like a very bad one at times during the series. Again it looked good, but only in spots, as in the second game in Philadelphia which Matty won, for instance, and during the innings yesterday when they were hitting Bendar and fighting against that six-run lead which Bender had behind him.

Wallie Schang Proves World's Series Star

WALLIE SCHANG was the individual star of the 1913 world's series.

Serving his first year in the major leagues, this youngster, inoculated with Connie's confidence, slashed his way to the top of the slugging Mackmen by driving home seven of the 23 runs scored by his team. He tied Baker in runs driven in, but his hits were more timely than those of the Trappe terror. The batters who drove home the runs in the big series are rated as follows:

ATHLETICS. Player.	H.	R DI.	GIANTS. Player.	H.	R DI.
Schang	5	7	Merkle	3	3
Baker	9	7	Fletcher	5	3
Collins	8	3	McLean	6	2
McInnis	2	2	Doyle	3	2
Strunk	2	2	Burns	3	2
Barry	6	1	Shafer	3	2
Bender	0	1	Murray	4	1

Burns and Shafer Fail.

I AM not going to find fault with anybody, because I said yesterday they are my players, picked out by myself and good enough to win the championship of the National League. Some of them disappointed me in the series. Burns and Shafer had been largely responsible for us winning the pennant in the National League, but both were nervous in this series and did not play the baseball that they are capable of.

This is liable to be the case with a youngster. Neither did Tesreau and Marquard pitch the ball that I expected from them. Each had had experience enough to know how to work batters, but they seemed to lose all their baseball craft when they got into the box. In such a way does a big series affect some players. They are not at their best when the stakes run high. On the other hand the Athletics are, especially Collins. I went over and shook hands with him after the game.

"You are the greatest player in the world, to my mind," I told him. "They may talk about Cobb, but I'd rather have you."

He acted nervous and embarrassed by it. He is a gre[illegible]oung fellow.

Now I come to M[illegible]y, about whom I have built two championship teams. In spite of the fact that he was beaten by the wonderful work of Plank, I still hold he is the greatest pitcher in the world. With fair support he would have had a tied score today, and he was always pitching with the nervous knowledge that his backers might crack, as they did. It was what is called a "Cincinnati base hit" which beat us out of two runs and the game.

The Athletics got away to a good start today with the jump in the first inning. That is a great habit of theirs, getting the [illegible]p and keeping their opponents working uphill.

None Like Peerless Matty.

I CANNOT say enough in praise of Mathewson. He has the greatest heart of any ball player I ever knew, and by "heart" I mean courage. He never quits, and he always uses his head. To show that he is a great money player, he not only supplied all of the good pitching that I got in the series, but he also led the club in batting, banging the ball for an average of 600.

I regret to see him growing old. I don't believe that there ever will be another like him for ability, brains and courage.

I do not want to stint in my praise for the Ahletics. Connie Mack, by his own cleverness, has constructed a great ball club. He has found the players and developed them all himself, and he deserves the credit for the victory.

"Will you have a drink?" invited a friend of mine tonight.

"Not on your life," I answered. "I must figure out how to win the world's championship next year."

Athletics' Stars Show Better in Big Series Than During Season

THOSE youthful men of Mack—mere college kids—are what gamblers term "money players." They tighten up in the pinch. McGraw's rough-shod regiment has a habit of playing loose ball in "croocial" games.

In the five games just played in the big series, involving the world's championship, four of Connie Mack's stars—Baker, Collins, Schang and Barry—attained a better batting average than they had in the regular National League championship season.

McInnis, Strunk and Murphy, playing in their first world's series were the only Mackmen who failed to maintain their season's pace as batters. They showed the lack of experience in the blue ribbon batties. Murphy, however, came to in the last game and drilled out two hits off Matty, virtually winning the game and fattening his average.

Another big item: Of the 15 extra-base hits made in the series, 10 were credited to the Mackmen. Home runs by Baker and Schang, two triples by Collins, a brace of doubles by Barry and a three-bagger by Oldring constituted the long hitting of the winners.

The Giants, sadly humiliated for the third time, have only two men who deserve the slightest commendation. One is Old Ironsides Mathewson, dean of them all. The other is a player found unfit for service on the Cardinal club, one Larry McLean. McLean vied with Mathewson for the honors in McGraw's cabin. He hit .500, combing six hits out of twelve times up.

The Giants batted .205, against .264 for the Mackmen. The figures:

CARDINALS GAIN A LAP ON BROWNS IN JOKE TITLE RACE

With Lucky Breaks, Huggins' Men May Yet Prove Themselves Worst Team.

By Clarence F. Lloyd.

Resenting the efforts of the Browns to prove to the universe that they form the "booby" baseball aggregation of the major leagues, the Cardinals almost put themselves on equal terms with the American Leaguers, yesterday. They succeeded in losing the first game, 8-5, but hurt their chances by getting a tie, 2-2, in the second contest of the twin bill.

The weather man again cut in on the proceeedings, turning on the darkness after six rounds had been played in the windup. This probably prevented the Cardinals from losing two games. The series now stands: Browns, two losses, one victory, one tie; Cardinals, one loss, two victories and one tie.

Manager Huggins had to trot out three pitchers in the first game to give the Browns enough runs to win. Doak, Trekell and Griner worked in that order. Earl Hamilton got his mates off to a good start by permitting the Cards to tally three runs in one round, but Roy Mitchell spoiled matters by holding the Nationals to only one run during the remainder of the game.

Hug Makes Costly Fumble.

The Browns have Manager Huggins of the Cardinals to blame for permitting them to get a draw instead of losing the last game. With the Cardinals two runs to the good, one out and two on in the sixth, Hug butterfingered an easy roller when he had a double play before him. A single by Clarence Walker followed, which scored the two runs and tied up the count at two all.

The second game proved a more interesting battle than the first. It brought out Wyley Taylor, late of Texas, and Bob Harmon, the veteran right-hander of the Cardinals. In the six innings Taylor worked he fanned seven National Leaguers. He was hit hard, but deserved to have only one run scored off him.

It rained base hits while Doak, Trekell and Griner worked in the opener. The American Leaguers collected 15 blows against nine for the Cardinals.

The draw in the second game will necessitate another double-header in the "booby" series. It will be played Monday.

ROLLA, Mo., Oct. 11.—In perhaps the hardest game of football ever played on Jackling Field, the Christian Brothers' College eleven of St. Louis and the Rolla Miners played to no-decision, the score resulting 7 to 7.

The two teams were evenly matched with the Miners carrying the ball for a higher total of gains in yards. They were penalized in the neighborhood of 160 yards, while the Christian Brothers' College's penalties were but 85 yards. The game was one of the fiercest early-season games that was ever witnessed by the lovers of football, with three-fourths of the playing being in C. B. C. territory.

The Miners lost a touchdown in the first half when on C. B. C.'s yard line due to a bad pass. They were also within scoring distance a half dozen times. C. B. C., on the other hand, was only dangerous once besides the play in which they scored the touchdown, Collins making this by a 40-yard run through a broken field, and the touchdown being scored near the middle of the last quarter, putting C. B. C. ahead 7 to 0.

With about eight minutes to play, the Miners came back a determined and fighting team, and scored a touchdown from the kick-off of four minutes, with Stoliker and Freeman doing most of the work.

Mountjoy of the Miners injured his shoulder early in the game, and had to retire. A few minutes later Gallagher of C. B. C. fractured his collar bone.

Both teams resorted to the new style football, and many forward passes were attempted with but few being completed. C. B. C. outweighed the Miners, and the stars of their team were Ratican and Collins. For the Miners E. A. Miller, Stoliker, Freeman, Lodwick and Houston were the stars. The whole team showed up in good form.

INDIANS BEAT CORNELL BY STONE WALL DEFENSE

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Carlisle struck a Tartar in Cornell today and hardly won by a score of 7 to 0. Three times Cornell had the ball on the Indians' five-yard line, but lacked the necessary punch to carry it over.

The red and white outplayed the redskins continuously except in the first period, when the visitors made their only score. Guyon scored for the Indians after Calac and Larvie worked their way into Cornell's territory by brilliant line smashes.

Athletics' Defense Gives Giants No Chance to Win

But for Baker's Eagerness to Field Murray's Pop Fly in Fifth Inning, Which Caused Plank to Drop the Ball, New York Could Not Have Scored.

Mathewson by a 3 to 0 score, although his club threw away an excellent chance for victory in the ninth inning of that battle by poor base-line coaching.

Both veterans were steady, having both control and speed, and but one batter from each team received a pass to first at their expense. The play was confined chiefly to the infield, each first baseman getting 14 putouts. The Athletics' outfielders made eight putouts and the Giants' six.

It was also a day of triumph for Manager Connie Mack and the American League. The Athletics' victory over the Giants in the 1913 world's series marked Mack's third elevation to the title of manager of a universal championship team and the fourth consecutive victory of an American League team over the standard bearers of the National League.

Including the present series, the junior League has won six out of the 10 championship contests with the senior organization, which began in 1903.

The Athletics' victory was also pleasing to Connie Mack and his players, since it gave them the rubber win over McGraw and the Giants in the third meeting of the two teams. In 1905 the Giants won four games to one. In 1911 the Athletics took four out of six and repeated with four out of five this season.

Both Teams Cheered.

Immediately after the close of today's game, thousands of fans swarmed down from bleachers and stands and rushed to the Athletics' bench, where John McGraw was already congratulating Connie Mack.

Despite the fact that the great majority were Giant adherents, they bestowed plenty of praise upon the Mack men. Player after player was patted and assured that the best team won. It was with difficulty that they finally broke their way through the throngs and reached the clubhouse.

The Giants, too, came in for hearty cheers as they raced across the field, assuring them that although defeated, they had by no means lost the support of their followers.

THE GAME, PLAY BY PLAY

Christy Mathewson, the Giants' hope to stop the onrushing Athletics, was wildly cheered as he strode slowly to the pitching box. "Hold them Matty," yelled the fans.

Eddie Murphy, who failed to get a hit off the veteran pitcher in the ten-inning battle in Philadelphia on Wednesday, connected with the first ball pitched and drove it to the right of Fletcher, who made a gallant effort to stab it, but succeeded in only batting it down. Murphy crossed first base before the shortshop could get the sphere. Oldring attempted to sacrifice, laying a bunt down in front of Mathewson, who threw Murphy out at second, Fletcher taking the throw. Mathewson's first offering to Collins was a ball and the next served was driven to right field for a single, Oldring sprinting to third.

Despite this inauspicious opening for the Giants the great crowd gave Mathewson an encouraging cheer. Things looked bad with "Home-Run" Baker up and mighty hard did he try to make trouble for New York.

Finally there was a resounding crack of the bat and the hearts of the Giants' rooters stopped for an instant. Instead of the ball coursing its way toward Baker's right field stand, it shot into left field for a long sacrifice fly to Burns. Oldring racing to the plate as soon as the out was made. Burns made a mighty heave to the home base to get Oldring and threw the ball over Catcher McLean's head. Collins went down to second on the error, amid much excitement.

The inning ended here as McInnis sent a grounder to Herzog, who blocked off Collins and threw to Doyle, who touched out the Athletics' second baseman on the line, between second and third.

Many Athletics' Rooters.

The Athletics' rooters in the stands, and there was a considerable number of them, cheered the Philadelphia team as they took the field behind the veteran Plank. Herzog, the first man up for New York, let two bad balls pass and then Plank got two strikes on him. Herzog went out on a long fly to Murphy. Doyle was an easy out, Barry to McInnis, on a fast fielding play. Fletcher started the New York fans cheering as he belted the ball for what looked like extra bases, but it fell into the hands of Oldring in deep left field.

Strunk opened the American League champions' second inning with a drive at Doyle and was thrown out. Barry sent up a high fly to Murray.

Then Schang, the young and agile catcher, facing the great Mathewson for the first time, shot a single at the pitcher so hot that the New Yorker could not field it, and the ball rolled toward Fletcher, Schang reaching first safely. He was left there as Plank flied out to Herzog.

McGraw's Protest Not Upheld.

As the Giants came to bat in the second inning, Manager McGraw called Umpire Klem's attention to the way Plank lifted his foot in pitching, and the arbitrator went out to the pitching box and watched Plank throw four balls to Schang. Klem was evidently satisfied that Plank was pitching legally, as the matter ended there.

Burns, the first batter up, grounded to Baker and was out at first. Shafer raised a high foul to McInnis, who made a great catch close to the grandstand. Murray hit a slow grounder to Plank and was retired.

The Athletics made the runs that gave them the world's championship in the third inning. Murphy opened hostilities by slamming the ball to left field for his second single. Oldring hit a fast grounder at Doyle, who in his apparent eagerness to complete a double play, fumbled the ball, and both runners were safe.

Murphy and Oldring moved along on Collins' sacrifice, Merkle fielding the ball and touching him out on the line.

Mathewson then faced another ticklish situation. With runners on third and second, he did not waver. Baker, however, got to him and smashed the ball down the right field line to Merkle. The latter feinted to throw to the plate to catch Murphy coming in, but when the latter slowed up and started to go back, Merkle turned to get Baker, but the heavy hitter was too close to first for Merkle to get him, and when the first baseman again turned Murphy was legging for the plate and slid into the home base, under Merkle's throw to McLean, with the Athletics' second run.

Baker was given credit for a Cincinnati base hit, the only one of the kind made in the series. Oldring moved to third base on the play and scored the Athletics last run on a long sacrifice fly by McInnis to Burns. Strunk ended the inning by grounding out, Doyle to Merkle.

The three-run lead, with Plank pitching almost unhittable ball, looked big to the Giant rooters, but they again cheered their team as the players came to the bench. Their stay at home, however, was very brief.

McLean walloped a long fly to Oldring. Merkle shot a liner directly into Collins' waiting hands and Mathewson was given a warm hand by the crowd as he came to bat, but grounded out, Barry to McInnis.

Athletics' Scoring Stopped.

The Athletics' scoring machine stopped running with the beginning of the fourth inning. Barry was quickly put out, Fletcher to Merkle. Schang picked out one of Mathewson's good ones and lifted it out to Murray. Fletcher took care of Plank's little fly in short center field.

For New York in the fourth inning, Herzog could not see Plank's cross-fire ball sizzle across the plate and was out on three strikes in a row. Doyle managed to connect with the ball, but it bounded out to McInnis, who retired the Giants' second-baseman, unassisted. Fletcher flied to Strunk.

In the fifth inning Murphy went out, Doyle to Merkle, and Oldring grounded out the same way. Collins lifted a fly to Shafer.

The National League champions' only activity in the game was in the fifth inning, when they got their first hit and only run through an excusable error by Plank. Burns sent a hot liner into the hands of McInnis, where it stayed.

Plank had difficulty in getting the ball over the plate for Shafer, and as a result the Giants' center-fielder was the first of the New York team to see first base, getting a pass. Murray lifted a high fly to the infield. Barry and Baker each ran in to get it, but Barry stopped to let Baker make the catch. Plank barely moved from the box and was set for the catch as Baker dashed into him, also endeavoring to get the ball.

As a result of the mix-up, Plank dropped the ball and Murray was safe on first and Shafer on second. Had either Baker or Plank held the ball, a double-play would have been completed, ending the inning, as Shafer was speeding past second when the error was made.

McLean's Single Scores Shafer.

With one out and two on bases, things began to look dangerous for the Athletics, as Larry McLean came to the bat. The tall catcher had been hitting consistently and the crowd went into a frenzy when he lashed a screeching single to left field, scoring Shafer. Murray went to second.

Merkle, who helped put the Giants into the game again in Philadelphia on Friday, by his home run drive, hit into a double play, forcing McLean at second, Collins to Barry, and being thrown out at first by the Philadelphia shortstop.

Baker opened the Athletics' sixth inning with a smoking single to right field. He moved to second on young McInnis' sacrifice, McLean to Doyle. Baker went to third on Strunk's out, Doyle to Merkle, and Barry ended the inning by sending a grounder down to Fletcher, who had to make a long throw to first.

Mathewson in the sixth singled to right and the rooters looked for a batting rally. It was the only time in the game that Plank failed to get the first man up. He changed his style of delivering the ball, and took his time in shooting it up. Herzog smashed a grounder at Barry, who threw to Collins, forcing Mathewson, and Herzog was doubled up at first. It was a fast double play. Doyle flied out to Murphy.

Schang struck out in the Athletics' seventh inning. Plank sent a grounder to Doyle, and as the latter fielded the ball cleanly, did not waste his energy running to first. Murphy drew a base on balls, the only pass that Mathewson gave, but was left at first as Oldring sent up a high foul that McLean gathered in near the New York players' bench.

Quick work was made of the Giants when they came up. Fletcher drove a fly to Strunk. Burns went out, Barry to McInnis, and Shafer did the same thing.

In the eighth, Collins was an easy victim, Doyle to Merkle. Baker chopped a grounder at Mathewson, who threw him out. McInnis drove a grounder at Fletcher, who had to play deep to get it, and the runner went out at first.

Plank continued to pitch unbeatable ball, backed up superbly by his teammates. Murray went out on a grounder, Baker to McInnis. McLean raised a fly to Oldring and Merkle was thrown out by Barry.

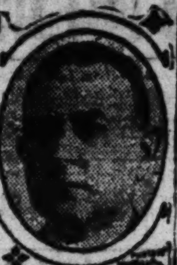
In the ninth inning, Strunk drove a high fly to Shafer. Barry hit a grounder at Herzog and was thrown out, and Schang, the last Athletic batter to step to the plate in the world's series, struck out.

Manager McGraw sent Crandall in to bat for Mathewson in the Giants' half of the inning. The crowd evidently thought it of no use, as the vast throng began to move out of the grounds.

Crandall went out, Collins to McInnis. Herzog flied to Barry. Plank pitched carefully to Capt. Doyle, who lifted a fly to Murphy, and with the out another world's championship went to the Philadelphia Athletics.

SPORT SALAD

by L. C. DAVIS.



THE SEASONS.

THERE are five seasons—Spring, Summer, Autumn, the World's Series and Winter.

Of all the seasons the World's Series is the most trying. Everyone becomes mentally unbalanced. Houses are divided, brother against brother and father against son. Everybody is nutty and it is the open season for the squirrels.

Men go to their offices, but not to work. The ticker ticks merrily, as of yore, but babbles not of stocks and bonds, but of base hits, bingles and batteries. The man at the blackboard yells "Consolidated steals second! Battery for New York Central, Philadelphia & Reading! Collins out, Tennessee Copper to Union Bag!" The preacher in the pulpit exhorts his congregation to place trust in Chief Bender and, with the aid of divine providence and Christy Mathewson's good right arm, they will win to that heavenly bourne which is the just reward of the faithful fan.

The World's Series season lasts a week. Glory be!

The splint and crutch,
The lint and such,
Will shortly be the rage.

We Had Best Pitching Ever Seen in a World's Series—Connie Mack

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 11.—Fans by the thousands were assembled at the station to greet the Athletics on their home-coming from New York tonight. On his arrival Manager Mack said:

"I said at the beginning of the series that we would have the better of the pitching. The outcome proves that I did not wrongly size up the caliber of the men that I was able to send into the games.

"I had it figured out that Bender must win two, Plank one and one of the youngsters one game in order to give us our four. That is identically what they did, but they could have delivered that and a lot more than that had it been required. Bender was ready to go back, so was Bush. In fact, we had the best pitching ever seen in a world's series. And we did not show two of our pitchers, either, Brown and Shawkey, either one of whom I am sure would have been there to win a game.

"Schang established his class as the greatest of young catchers and Lapp was perfect behind Plank in the game of Wednesday. Our infield worked up to its flawless perfection, and Oldring, Eddie Murphy and Strunk proved themselves an outfield worthy to rank with our infield, which is about the highest praise that I can think of.

"There was timely hitting from all our men, Murphy, Oldring, Collins, McInnis, Strunk, Barry and Schang. The teamwork left not a thing to be desired and the swiftness of mental operation kept apace with the mechanical perfection of the team. I never relieved a man. We played only nine men in each game.

"I don't know whether any other baseball honors are reserved for me. In fact I have had more than my share, but I am frank to say that never in my 30 years on the diamond as player and manager have I felt so happy as tonight."

LUCKY TOUCHDOWN SAVES W. U. TEAM FROM A SHUTOUT

Kansas Jayhawkers Have No Trouble in Winning, 55—7, Against Pikeway Eleven.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Oct. 11.—With only two remaining minutes of play, Halfback Coleman of Washington University's football team recovered a fumble and ran 90 yards for a touchdown. It marked the lone score made by the Pikeway team against the University of Kansas eleven, the final score of the game being 55 to 7 in favor of the Jayhawkers.

The Jayhawkers outclassed the St. Louisans in every department of the game. From the first whistle it was merely a matter of how great the score would be. The Jayhawkers' weight, which proved a handicap in the mud a week ago, was of much advantage today. On the defense the Kansas line could not be pierced, while the great bulk of the men made big holes for the backs. The Kansas backs piled up a total of eight touchdowns.

It did not take the Washington players long to learn that it was next to impossible to gain ground through the Kansas line. Early in the opening quarter, Fullback Lewis attempted a drop kick from the 40-yard line, but his kick fell short.

At the end of the first half, the Kansas team had scored 28 points. At the end of the third quarter this lead had been increased to 35 points.

Brilliant Play Helps Illini Win Over Missouri U.

Kemper of Tigers, Makes First Touchdown of Game After a Run of 55 Yards.

CHAMPAIGN Ill., Oct. 11.—Through a series of sensational plays, well-executed forward passes, and well-timed punts, the Illinois U. eleven today, defeated the Missouri football team 24 to 7, on Illinois field.

This was the last non-conference game for Illinois this season. Illinois played a strong offense and the work of the Tigers was steady. Sensational and brilliant plays won the game for the Illini.

In the first quarter, after scrimmages that kept the ball in Missouri's territory, the Tigers took a brace and got back into the Illinois territory. Kemper got the ball on the Missouri 45-yard line and carried it across the Illinois line for a 55-yard run. McWilliams kicked goal. The ball was on Illinois 20-yard line and the score 7 to 0 in Missouri's favor at the end of the first quarter.

The ball was kept in Illinois' territory in the first part of the second quarter. Then the ball reverted to the territory of the Tigers. Herndon of Missouri passed the ball to Wilson, who made 20 yards. When the ball was on the one-yard line, Rowe fumbled and Missouri regained the ball. Players took the oval back 30 yards. Rue made five yards and Pogue of Illinois made a 20-yard run for a touchdown. Rowe kicked goal. The second quarter ended with the score 7 to 7.

Illini Gets Quick Score.

Illinois players made their first goal of the third quarter within the first nine minutes to play. Sheppard started with heavy advances, but the headway the Missourians made was lost in four penalties laid for being off side and for holding. Missourians were out of bounds twice in this period. Moore was injured and Lake was substituted. Sheppard intercepted Chapman's forward pass after 40 yards had been made.

In the last quarter Silkman lost the ball on the Missouri two-yard line on a fumble. Rowe place-kicked from the 30-yard line, making three points for Illinois. Landsche was out, badly hurt. Davis took his place. Final, 24 to 7, favor Illinois.

Athletic Park's Soccer Campaign to Start Today

The curtain in the Athletic Park Soccer League will be rung up this afternoon when a majority of the stars of the local kicking world will be seen in action. The Ben Millers, under the management of Pete Ratican, will meet the Rock Church eleven in the opening game. The champion St. Leos will take on the new Columbian Athletic Club team in the second game.

BUCKNELL FORWARD PASS SCORES AGAINST TIGERS

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 11.—Using a mass of forward passes, which in most cases were unsuccessful, but which in one instance proved good for 60 yards and a touchdown, Bucknell crossed the Princeton goal line this afternoon, the Tigers' first humiliation this season. Topham failed to kick the goal. The final score was: Princeton, 28; Bucknell, 6.

Princeton had no difficulty in plowing through the visitors' line for three touchdowns, to which Streit added another on a 60-yard run. H. A. H. Baker kicking four goals from the touchdowns.

The manipulation of line formations by the Tigers with Streit carrying the ball most of the time was the feature of the game, while the defensive playing of the Orange and Black was also good.

90-Yards Dash by Deming Downs Dennie's Men, 14-7

Billikens, Playing Improved Game, Forced to Yield to Rose Poly on Muddy Field, After Plucky Fight.

By Ralph Bryan.

ON a muddy field which more than once handicapped the home team, St. Louis University, in its second game of the season met defeat yesterday afternoon at the hands of the eleven from Rose Polytechnic Institute of Terre Haute, Indiana. The score was 14 to 7.

St. L. U.'s lone touchdown came in the third quarter, when, after the ball had been well advanced towards Rose Poly's goal by the line-plunging of Gassoway and Thomas, Carroll was able to get around left end for a short quarterback run and a touchdown. The little quarterback also kicked goal after a hard kickout, tying the score.

The condition of the field made open play impracticable and fumbling frequent, coming often at the most critical points. This resulted in the game turning into a kicking duel, soon after the intial kickoff, Thomas for St. L. U. vieing with Carter of Rose Poly.

Fumbles Are Costly.

Five times during the course of the game St. L. U. was within their opponent's five-yard line, only to lose the ball through fumbles, penalties or being held for downs. Except for occasional spurts, neither team was able to make much headway on straight football, resorting instead to a kicking game, in hopes that lucky fumbles would turn up at the proper time, which they often did.

The forward pass was tried but once by the visiting team, at the close of the last quarter, and in that instance proved successful enough to give them their winning touchdown. It was a perfect pass of 30 yards, Baxter to Sheldon, the only successful attempt at the open game made during the afternoon. Coach Dennie's squad had scant luck in that way, failing sadly in every one of their six trials, largely, however, as the result of the poor footing.

Deming Runs 90 Yards.

Rose Poly's first score came eight minutes after the opening kick-off, when St. L. U. fumbled on Rose's five-yard mark, Deming scooping up the ball and sprinting 90 yards across the line. Stoms kicked goal, making the score 7—0, where it stayed until St. L. U.'s tally in the third period.

In the middle of the second quarter, Dennie's team had a piece of hard luck which cost them a probable touchdown. Vaught broke through the line and captured the ball, fumbled by the Rose backs, and raced to within 20 yards of the goal line, where he was tripped by a Rose tackler and downed. Connett, however, had blown his whistle, and declared the ball dead just previous to this, so, instead of awarding St. Louis a 15-yard penalty, which would have practically meant a touchdown, the ball was brought back and given to the visitors.

Billikens Are Improved.

In spite of the poor field conditions which were undoubtedly a big detriment to their work, the local eleven showed a great improvement over their exhibition of a week ago, putting up a good stiff scrappy game throughout. Much credit is due Gassoway, Capt. Kistner, Carroll and Thomas for their consistent work. The Carter brothers, Baxter and Deming, proved responsible in a large measure for the surprisingly good showing of the team from Terre Haute. The line-up:

Rose Poly (14).	Positions.	St. Louis U. (7).
Moore	Left tackle	Starr-Nyquist
Dutton	Left guard	Stanislav-Washburn
Sommers	Center	Smith
W. Carter (Capt.)	Right guard	Mackey-Vaught-Goetter
Davis	Right tackle	Hermann
Sheldon	Right end	Gross
Baxter	Quarterback	Carroll
F. Carter	Left halfback	Thomas
Deming-Hansen	Right halfback	Gassoway-Murphy
Stoms	Fullback	Harrison-Kane

Touchdowns—Deming 1, Sheldon 1, Carroll 1. Goals from touchdown—Stoms 2, Carroll 1. Time of quarters—10m. Referee—Connett (Virginia). Umpire—Walker (Knox). Head linesman—Green (Denison).

Williams Scores by Drop Kick on Harvard Eleven

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 11.—Harvard's football team was played to a standstill for three periods today by an eleven from Williams, but in the closing moments of the play the Crimson scoring machine got into action and made three touchdowns. The final score was: Harvard, 23; Williams, 3.

Brickley scored three Harvard points in the second period on an easy field goal from the 18-yard line and Walker of Williams evened matters up in the third period with a placement goal from the 25-yard mark. Like Williams' field goal of last year, the score was made possible by three brilliantly executed forward passes.

With the count three to three at the opening of the fourth period, Coach Haughton called leading Crimson players back into the game from the side lines and Brickley and Rollins scored touchdowns in succession. The last touchdown resulted from a fumble by Williams, recovered by Gilman of Harvard.

St. Charles Cadets Win.

The St. Charles Military Academy team defeated the Webster Groves High School eleven yesterday, 6—0. The lone touchdown was made in the last 30 seconds of play when Marcham recovered a fumbled kick and crossed the line.

The Ferguson A. C. team of St. Louis defeated the Western Military Academy eleven at Upper Alton yesterday, 14—7.

Yale Produces a New Star in Role of Quarter

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 11.—The Yale eleven struck what the coaches call its real gait this afternoon and defeated Lafayette, 27 to 0. The game was played in a drizzling rain. A fumble and a penalty, each time when the ball was on the visitors' one-yard line, prevented Yale from making two more touchdowns.

Today's game showed the Blue eleven strong at quarterback. Besides running the team well Cornish starred individually with long runs through broken fields.

Lafayette had two chances to score, once in the second period on a drop kick from the 23-yard line, which missed its mark by inches, and once on a drop kick from the 40-yard line. The latter play was smothered. Line rushes failed for Lafayette, but forward passes were successful, netting them a total of 70 yards.

The Yale "wing shift" heretofore crude in its execution, was good for long gains today. The Blue team tried the forward pass once.

The players also feel that Stovall is not doing right in making a loud protest about his uniform being removed from his locker. They contend that it was within Manager Rickey's rights to take the apparel if he saw fit in an effort to keep Stovall off the field, a thing that the players believe is for the better of the club.

"We want the public to feel that we are for Rickey; that he is the best manager we have ever had; that we are playing better ball than ever before under him and that each and everyone of us is trying our level best to make the club a success," said one of the Browns to the Post-Dispatch.

Although Stovall has taken no part in the series and will not be permitted to play, he will get a Browns' share of the receipts of the series with the Cardinals. ROLLA, Mo., Oct. 11.—In perhaps the hardest game of football ever played on Jackling Field, the Christian Brothers' College eleven of St. Louis and the Rolla Miners played to no-decision, the score resulting 7 to 7.

The two teams were evenly matched with the Miners carrying the ball for a higher total of gains in yards. They were penalized in the neighborhood of 160 yards, while the Christian Brothers' College's penalties were but 35 yards. The game was one of the fiercest early-season games that was ever witnessed by the lovers of football, with three-fourths of the playing being in C. B. C. territory.

The Miners lost a touchdown in the first half when on C. B. C.'s yard line due to a bad pass. They were also within scoring distance a half dozen times. C. B. C., on the other hand, was only dangerous once besides the play in which they scored the touchdown, Collins making this by a 40-yard run through a broken field, and the touchdown being scored near the middle of the last quarter, putting C. B. C. ahead 7 to 0.

With about eight minutes to play, the Miners came back a determined and fighting team, and scored a touchdown from the kick-off of four minutes, with Stoliker and Freeman doing most of the work.

Mountjoy of the Miners injured his shoulder early in the game, and had to retire. A few minutes later Gallagher of C. B. C. fractured his collar bone.

Both teams resorted to the new style football, and many forward passes were attempted with but few being completed. C. B. C. outweighed the Miners, and the stars of their team were Ratican and Collins. For the Miners E. A. Miller, Stoliker, Freeman, Lodwick and Houston were the stars. The whole team showed up in good form.

INDIANS BEAT CORNELL BY STONE WALL DEFENSE

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 11.—Carlisle struck a Tartar in Cornell today and hardly won by a score of 7 to 0. Three times Cornell had the ball on the Indians' five-yard line, but lacked the necessary punch to carry it over.

The red and white outplayed the redskins continuously except in the first period, when the visitors made their only score. Guyon scored for the Indians after Calac and Larvie worked their way into Cornell's territory by brilliant line smashes.

Athletics' Defense Gives Giants No Chance to Win

But for Baker's Eagerness to Field Murray's Pop Fly in Fifth Inning, Which Caused Plank to Drop the Ball, New York Could Not Have Scored.

Mathewson by a 3 to 0 score, although his club threw away an excellent chance for victory in the ninth inning of that battle by poor base-line coaching.

Both veterans were steady, having both control and speed, and but one batter from each team received a pass to first at their expense. The play was confined chiefly to the infield, each first baseman getting 14 putouts. The Athletics' outfielders made eight putouts and the Giants' six.

It was also a day of triumph for Manager Connie Mack and the American League. The Athletics' victory over the Giants in the 1913 world's series marked Mack's third elevation to the title of manager of a universal championship team and the fourth consecutive victory of an American League team over the standard bearers of the National League.

Including the present series, the junior League has won six out of the 10 championship contests with the senior organization, which began in 1903.

The Athletics' victory was also pleasing to Connie Mack and his players, since it gave them the rubber win over McGraw and the Giants in the third meeting of the two teams. In 1905 the Giants won four games to one. In 1911 the Athletics took four out of six and repeated with four out of five this season.

Both Teams Cheered.

Immediately after the close of today's game, thousands of fans swarmed down from bleachers and stands and rushed to the Athletics' bench, where John McGraw was already congratulating Connie Mack.

Despite the fact that the great majority were Giant adherents, they bestowed plenty of praise upon the Mack men. Player after player was patted and assured that the best team won. It was with difficulty that they finally broke their way through the throngs and reached the clubhouse.

The Giants, too, came in for hearty cheers as they raced across the field, assuring them that although defeated, they had by no means lost the support of their followers.

THE GAME, PLAY BY PLAY

Christy Mathewson, the Giants' hope to stop the onrushing Athletics, was wildly cheered as he strode slowly to the pitching box. "Hold them Matty," yelled the fans.

Eddie Murphy, who failed to get a hit off the veteran pitcher in the ten-inning battle in Philadelphia on Wednesday, connected with the first ball pitched and drove it to the right of Fletcher, who made a gallant effort to stab it, but succeeded in only batting it down. Murphy crossed first base before the shortshop could get the sphere. Oldring attempted to sacrifice, laying a bunt down in front of Mathewson, who threw Murphy out at second, Fletcher taking the throw. Mathewson's first offering to Collins was a ball and the next served was driven to right field for a single, Oldring sprinting to third.

Despite this inauspicious opening for the Giants the great crowd gave Mathewson an encouraging cheer. Things looked bad with "Home-Run" Baker up and mighty hard did he try to make trouble for New York.

Finally there was a resounding crack of the bat and the hearts of the Giants' rooters stopped for an instant. Instead of the ball coursing its way toward Baker's right field stand, it shot into left field for a long sacrifice fly to Burns. Oldring racing to the plate as soon as the out was made. Burns made a mighty heave to the home base to get Oldring and threw the ball over Catcher McLean's head. Collins went down to second on the error, amid much excitement.

The inning ended here as McInnis sent a grounder to Herzog, who blocked off Collins and threw to Doyle, who touched out the Athletics' second baseman on the line, between second and third.

Many Athletics' Rooters.

The Athletics' rooters in the stands, and there was a considerable number of them, cheered the Philadelphia team as they took the field behind the veteran Plank. Herzog, the first man up for New York, let two bad balls pass and then Plank got two strikes on him. Herzog went out on a long fly to Murphy. Doyle was an easy out, Barry to McInnis, on a fast fielding play. Fletcher started the New York fans cheering as he belted the ball for what looked like extra bases, but it fell into the hands of Oldring in deep left field.

Strunk opened the American League champions' second inning with a drive at Doyle and was thrown out. Barry sent up a high fly to Murray.

Then Schang, the young and agile catcher, facing the great Mathewson for the first time, shot a single at the pitcher so hot that the New Yorker could not field it, and the ball rolled toward Fletcher, Schang reaching first safely. He was left there as Plank flied out to Herzog.

McGraw's Protest Not Upheld.

As the Giants came to bat in the second inning, Manager McGraw called Umpire Klem's attention to the way Plank lifted his foot in pitching, and the arbitrator went out to the pitching box and watched Plank throw four balls to Schang. Klem was evidently satisfied that Plank was pitching legally, as the matter ended there.

Burns, the first batter up, grounded to Baker and was out at first. Shafer raised a high foul to McInnis, who made a great catch close to the grandstand. Murray hit a slow grounder to Plank and was retired.

The Athletics made the runs that gave them the world's championship in the third inning. Murphy opened hostilities by slamming the ball to left field for his second single. Oldring hit a fast grounder at Doyle, who in his apparent eagerness to complete a double play, fumbled the ball, and both runners were safe.

Murphy and Oldring moved along on Collins' sacrifice, Merkle fielding the ball and touching him out on the line.

Mathewson then faced another ticklish situation. With runners on third and second, he did not waver. Baker, however, got to him and smashed the ball down the right field line to Merkle. The latter feinted to throw to the plate to catch Murphy coming in, but when the latter slowed up and started to go back, Merkle turned to get Baker, but the heavy hitter was too close to first for Merkle to get him, and when the first baseman again turned Murphy was legging for the plate and slid into the home base, under Merkle's throw to McLean, with the Athletics' second run.

Baker was given credit for a Cincinnati base hit, the only one of the kind made in the series. Oldring moved to third base on the play and scored the Athletics last run on a long sacrifice fly by McInnis to Burns. Strunk ended the inning by grounding out, Doyle to Merkle.

The three-run lead, with Plank pitching almost unhittable ball, looked big to the Giant rooters, but they again cheered their team as the players came to the bench. Their stay at home, however, was very brief.

McLean walloped a long fly to Oldring. Merkle shot a liner directly into Collins' waiting hands and Mathewson was given a warm hand by the crowd as he came to bat, but grounded out, Barry to McInnis.

Athletics' Scoring Stopped.

The Athletics' scoring machine stopped running with the beginning of the fourth inning. Barry was quickly put out, Fletcher to Merkle. Schang picked out one of Mathewson's good ones and lifted it out to Murray. Fletcher took care of Plank's little fly in short center field.

For New York in the fourth inning, Herzog could not see Plank's cross-fire ball sizzle across the plate and was out on three strikes in a row. Doyle managed to connect with the ball, but it bounded out to McInnis, who retired the Giants' second-baseman, unassisted. Fletcher filed to Strunk.

In the fifth inning Murphy went out, Doyle to Merkle, and Oldring grounded out the same way. Collins lifted a fly to Shafer.

The National League champions' only activity in the game was in the fifth inning, when they got their first hit and only run through an excusable error by Plank. Burns sent a hot liner into the hands of McInnis, where it stayed.

Plank had difficulty in getting the ball over the plate for Shafer, and as a result the Giants' center-fielder was the first of the New York team to see first base, getting a pass. Murray lifted a high fly to the infield. Barry and Baker each ran in to get it, but Barry stopped to let Baker make the catch. Plank barely moved from the box and was set for the catch as Baker dashed into him, also endeavoring to get the ball.

As a result of the mix-up, Plank dropped the ball and Murray was safe on first and Shafer on second. Had either Baker or Plank held the ball, a double-play would have been completed, ending the inning, as Shafer was speeding past second when the error was made.

McLean's Single Scores Shafer.

With one out and two on bases, things began to look dangerous for the Athletics, as Larry McLean came to the bat. The tall catcher had been hitting consistently and the crowd went into a frenzy when he lashed a screeching single to left field, scoring Shafer. Murray went to second.

Merkle, who helped put the Giants into the game again in Philadelphia on Friday, by his home run drive, hit into a double play, forcing McLean at second, Collins to Barry, and being thrown out at first by the Philadelphia shortstop.

Baker opened the Athletics' sixth inning with a smoking single to right field. He moved to second on young McInnis' sacrifice, McLean to Doyle. Baker went to third on Strunk's out, Doyle to Merkle, and Barry ended the inning by sending a grounder down to Fletcher, who had to make a long throw to first.

Mathewson in the sixth singled to right and the rooters looked for a batting rally. It was the only time in the game that Plank failed to get the first man up. He changed his style of delivering the ball, and took his time in shooting it up. Herzog smashed a grounder at Barry, who threw to Collins, forcing Mathewson, and Herzog was doubled up at first. It was a fast double play. Doyle filed out to Murphy.

Schang struck out in the Athletics' seventh inning. Plank sent a grounder to Doyle, and as the latter fielded the ball cleanly, did not waste his energy running to first. Murphy drew a base on balls, the only pass that Mathewson gave, but was left at first as Oldring sent up a high foul that McLean gathered in near the New York players' bench.

Quick work was made of the Giants when they came up. Fletcher drove a fly to Strunk. Burns went out, Barry to McInnis, and Shafer did the same thing.

In the eighth, Collins was an easy victim, Doyle to Merkle. Baker chopped a grounder at Mathewson, who threw him out. McInnis drove a grounder at Fletcher, who had to play deep to get it, and the runner went out at first.

Plank continued to pitch unbeatable ball, backed up superbly by his teammates. Murray went out on a grounder, Baker to McInnis. McLean raised a fly to Oldring and Merkle was thrown out by Barry.

In the ninth inning, Strunk drove a high fly to Shafer. Barry hit a grounder at Herzog and was thrown out, and Schang, the last Athletic batter to step to the plate in the world's series, struck out.

Manager McGraw sent Crandall in to bat for Mathewson in the Giants' half of the inning. The crowd evidently thought it of no use, as the vast throng began to move out of the grounds.

Crandall went out, Collins to McInnis. Herzog flied to Barry. Plank pitched carefully to Capt. Doyle, who lifted a fly to Murphy, and with the out another world's championship went to the Philadelphia Athletics.

SPORT SALAD

by L. C. DAVIS.

THE SEASONS.

THERE are five seasons—Spring, Summer, Autumn, the World's Series and Winter.

Of all the seasons the World's Series is the most trying. Everyone becomes mentally unbalanced. Houses are divided, brother against brother and father against son. Everybody is nutty and it is the open season for the squirrels.

Men go to their offices, but not to work. The ticker ticks merrily, as of yore, but babbles not of stocks and bonds, but of base hits, bingles and batteries. The man at the blackboard yells "Consolidated steals second! Battery for New York Central, Philadelphia & Reading! Collins out, Tennessee Copper to Union Bag!" The preacher in the pulpit exhorts his congregation to place trust in Chief Bender and, with the aid of divine providence and Christy Mathewson's good right arm, they will win to that heavenly bourne which is the just reward of the faithful fan.

The World's Series season lasts a week. Glory be!

We Had Best Pitching Ever Seen in a World's Series—Connie Mack

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 11.—Fans by the thousands were assembled at the station to greet the Athletics on their home-coming from New York tonight. On his arrival Manager Mack said:

"I said at the beginning of the series that we would have the better of the pitching. The outcome proves that I did not wrongly size up the caliber of the men that I was able to send into the games.

"I had it figured out that Bender must win two, Plank one and one of the youngsters one game in order to give us our four. That is identically what they did, but they could have delivered that and a lot more than that had it been required. Bender was ready to go back, so was Bush. In fact, we had the best pitching ever seen in a world's series. And we did not show two of our pitchers, either, Brown and Shawkey, either one of whom I am sure would have been there to win a game.

"Schang established his class as the greatest of young catchers and Lapp was perfect behind Plank in the game of Wednesday. Our infield worked up to its flawless perfection, and Oldring, Eddie Murphy and Strunk proved themselves an outfield worthy to rank with our infield, which is about the highest praise that I can think of.

"There was timely hitting from all our men, Murphy, Oldring, Collins, McInnis, Strunk, Barry and Schang. The teamwork left not a thing to be desired and the swiftness of mental operation kept apace with the mechanical perfection of the team. I never relieved a man. We played only nine men in each game.

"I don't know whether any other baseball honors are reserved for me. In fact I have had more than my share, but I am frank to say that never in my 30 years on the diamond as player and manager have I felt so happy as tonight."

LUCKY TOUCHDOWN SAVES W. U. TEAM FROM A SHUTOUT

Kansas Jayhawkers Have No Trouble in Winning, 55—7, Against Pikeway Eleven.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Oct. 11.—With only two remaining minutes of play, Halfback Coleman of Washington University's football team recovered a fumble and ran 90 yards for a touchdown. It marked the lone score made by the Pikeway team against the University of Kansas eleven, the final score of the game being 55 to 7 in favor of the Jayhawkers.

The Jayhawkers outclassed the St. Louisans in every department of the game. From the first whistle it was merely a matter of how great the score would be. The Jayhawkers' weight, which proved a handicap in the mud a week ago, was of much advantage today. On the defense the Kansas line could not be pierced, while the great bulk of the men made big holes for the backs. The Kansas backs piled up a total of eight touchdowns.

It did not take the Washington players long to learn that it was next to impossible to gain ground through the Kansas line. Early in the opening quarter, Fullback Lewis attempted a drop kick from the 40-yard line, but his kick fell short.

At the end of the first half, the Kansas team had scored 28 points. At the end of the third quarter this lead had been increased to 35 points.

Brilliant Play Helps Illini Win Over Missouri U.

Kemper of Tigers, Makes First Touchdown of Game After a Run of 55 Yards.

CHAMPAIGN Ill., Oct. 11.—Through a series of sensational plays, well-executed forward passes, and well-timed punts, the Illinois U. eleven today, defeated the Missouri football team 24 to 7, on Illinois field.

This was the last non-conference game for Illinois this season. Illinois played a strong offense and the work of the Tigers was steady. Sensational and brilliant plays won the game for the Illini.

In the first quarter, after scrimmages that kept the ball in Missouri's territory, the Tigers took a brace and got back into the Illinois territory. Kemper got the ball on the Missouri 45-yard line and carried it across the Illinois line for a 55-yard run. McWilliams kicked goal. The ball was on Illinois 20-yard line and the score 7 to 0 in Missouri's favor at the end of the first quarter.

The ball was kept in Illinois' territory in the first part of the second quarter. Then the ball reverted to the territory of the Tigers. Herndon of Missouri passed the ball to Wilson, who made 20 yards. When the ball was on the one-yard line, Rowe fumbled and Missouri regained the ball. Players took the oval back 30 yards. Rue made five yards and Pogue of Illinois made a 20-yard run for a touchdown. Rowe kicked goal. The second quarter ended with the score 7 to 7.

Illini Gets Quick Score.

Illinois players made their first goal of the third quarter within the first nine minutes to play. Sheppard started with heavy advances, but the headway the Missourians made was lost in four penalties laid for being off side and for holding. Missourians were out of bounds twice in this period. Moore was injured and Lake was substituted. Sheppard intercepted Chapman's forward pass after 40 yards had been made.

In the last quarter Silkman lost the ball on the Missouri two-yard line on a fumble. Rowe place-kicked from the 30-yard line, making three points for Illinois. Landsche was out, badly hurt. Davis took his place. Final, 24 to 7, favor Illinois.

Athletic Park's Soccer Campaign to Start Today

The curtain in the Athletic Park Soccer League will be rung up this afternoon when a majority of the stars of the local kicking world will be seen in action. The Ben Millers, under the management of Pete Ratican, will meet the Rock Church eleven in the opening game. The champion St. Leos will take on the new Columbian Athletic Club team in the second game.

BUCKNELL FORWARD PASS SCORES AGAINST TIGERS

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 11.—Using a mass of forward passes, which in most cases were unsuccessful, but which in one instance proved good for 40 yards and a touchdown, Bucknell crossed the Princeton goal line this afternoon, the Tigers' first humiliation this season. Topham failed to kick the goal. The final score was: Princeton, 28; Bucknell, 6.

Princeton had no difficulty in plowing through the visitors' line for three touchdowns, to which Streit added another on a 60-yard run, H. A. H. Baker kicking four goals from the touchdowns.

The manipulation of line formations by the Tigers with Streit carrying the ball most of the time was the feature of the game, while the defensive playing of the Orange and Black was also good.

90-Yards Dash by Deming Downs Dennie's Men, 14-7

Billikens, Playing Improved Game, Forced to Yield to Rose Poly on Muddy Field, After Plucky Fight.

By Ralph Bryan.

ON a muddy field which more than once handicapped the home team, St. Louis University, in its second game of the season met defeat yesterday afternoon at the hands of the eleven from Rose Polytechnic Institute of Terre Haute, Indiana. The score was 14 to 7.

St. L. U.'s lone touchdown came in the third quarter, when, after the ball had been well advanced towards Rose Poly's goal by the line-plunging of Gassoway and Thomas, Carroll was able to get around left end for a short quarterback run and a touchdown. The little quarterback also kicked goal after a hard kickout, tying the score.

The condition of the field made open play impracticable and fumbling frequent, coming often at the most critical points. This resulted in the game turning into a kicking duel, soon after the initial kickoff, Thomas for St. L. U. vieing with Carter of Rose Poly.

Fumbles Are Costly.

Five times during the course of the game St. L. U. was within their opponent's five-yard line, only to lose the ball through fumbles, penalties or being held for downs. Except for occasional spurts, neither team was able to make much headway on straight football, resorting instead to a kicking game, in hopes that lucky fumbles would turn up at the proper time, which they often did.

The forward pass was tried but once by the visiting team, at the close of the last quarter, and in that instance proved successful enough to give them their winning touchdown. It was a perfect pass of 30 yards, Baxter to Sheldon, the only successful attempt at the open game made during the afternoon. Coach Dennie's squad had scant luck in that way, failing sadly in every one of their six trials, largely, however, as the result of the poor footing.

Deming Runs 90 Yards.

Rose Poly's first score came eight minutes after the opening kick-off, when St. L. U. fumbled on Rose's five-yard mark, Deming scooping up the ball and sprinting 90 yards across the line. Stoms kicked goal, making the score 7—0, where it stayed until St. L. U.'s tally in the third period.

In the middle of the second quarter, Dennie's team had a piece of hard luck which cost them a probable touchdown. Vaught broke through the line and captured the ball, fumbled by the Rose backs, and raced to within 20 yards of the goal line, where he was tripped by a Rose tackler and downed. Connett, however, had blown his whistle, and declared the ball dead just previous to this, so, instead of awarding St. Louis a 15-yard penalty, which would have practically meant a touchdown, the ball was brought back and given to the visitors.

Billikens Are Improved.

In spite of the poor field conditions which were undoubtedly a big detriment to their work, the local eleven showed a great improvement over their exhibition of a week ago, putting up a good stiff scrappy game throughout. Much credit is due Gassoway, Capt. Kistner, Carroll and Thomas for their consistent work. The Carter brothers, Baxter and Deming, proved responsible in a large measure for the surprisingly good showing of the team from Terre Haute. The line-up:

Rose Poly (14).	Positions.	St. Louis U. (7).

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 11.—Harvard's football team was played to a standstill for three periods today by an eleven from Williams, but in the closing moments of the play the Crimson scoring machine got into action and made three touchdowns. The final score was: Harvard, 23; Williams, 3.

Brickley scored three Harvard points in the second period on an easy field goal from the 18-yard line and Walker of Williams evened matters up in the third period with a placement goal from the 25-yard mark. Like Williams' field goal of last year, the score was made possible by three brilliantly executed forward passes.

With the count three to three at the opening of the fourth period, Coach Haughton called leading Crimson players back into the game from the side lines and Brickley and Rollins scored touchdowns in succession. The last touchdown resulted from a fumble by Williams, recovered by Gilman of Harvard.

St. Charles Cadets Win.

The St. Charles Military Academy team defeated the Webster Groves High School eleven yesterday, 6—0. The lone touchdown was made in the last 30 seconds of play when Marcham recovered a fumbled kick and crossed the line.

Ferguson Beats Western M. A.

The Ferguson A. C. team of St. Louis defeated the Western Military Academy eleven at Upper Alton yesterday, 14—7.

Yale Produces a New Star in Role of Quarter

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 11.—The Yale eleven struck what the coaches call its real gait this afternoon and defeated Lafayette, 27 to 0. The game was played in a drizzling rain. A fumble and a penalty, each time when the ball was on the visitors' one-yard line, prevented Yale from making two more touchdowns.

Today's game showed the Blue eleven strong at quarterback. Besides running the team well Cornish starred individually with long runs through broken fields.

Lafayette had two chances to score, once in the second period on a drop kick from the 22-yard line, which missed its mark by inches, and once on a drop kick from the 40-yard line. The latter play was smothered. Line rushes failed for Lafayette, but forward passes were successful, netting them a total of 70 yards.

The Yale "wing shift" heretofore crude in its execution, was good for long gains today. The Blue team tried the forward pass once.

The players also feel that Stova[illegible] is not doing right in making a loud protest about his uniform being removed from his locker. They contend that it was within Manager Rickey's rights to take the apparel if he saw fit in an effort to keep Stovall off the field, a thing that the players believe is for the better of the club.

"We want the public to feel that we are for Rickey; that he is the best manager we have ever had; that we are playing better ball than ever before under him and that each and everyone of us is trying our level best to make the club a success," said one of the Browns to the Post-Dispatch.

Although Stovall has taken no part in the series and will not be permitted to play, he will get a Browns' share of the receipts of the series with the Cardinals. This matter was agreed to a month ago. Recent happenings will not alter the players' decision to let him share in the spoils, according to the Browns.

SOX, CICOTTE UP, DEFEAT CUBS AND TIE SERIES

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—Eddie Cicotte pitched himself into a lot of holes, pitched himself out of most of them and then pitched and batted the White Sox to a tie in the city championship series this afternoon. Mainly through his good all-round work and timely doubles by Weaver, the Cubs were downed in the fourth game, 5 to 2.

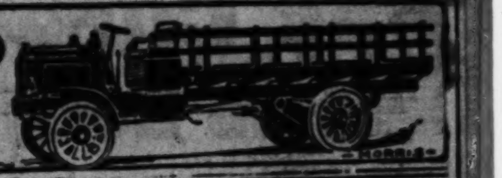
AUTOMOBILE NEWS.



MOTOR CAR SALES AT THE AUTO SHOW EXCEED $750,000

Brilliant Exhibit of Automobiles Closed Saturday Night With a Total Attendance for Week of 51,241 Visitors.

One of the greatest and most comprehensive exhibitions of automobiles ever held in this country closed at Forest Park Highlands last night amid a merry blowing of automobile horns and exhaust whistles. In point of setting, the floral decorations and the general ensemble of the setting, the St. Louis show was pronounced the most beautiful ever held by the half hundred men who attended it as representatives of the various factories whose St. Louis agents made displays there.

The cars were unquestionably the most beautiful ever seen. The 1914 models only were shown, and for the first time in the United States, and to that model the manufacturers have given more thought and attention to beauty lines and finish and to luxurious fittings than in past years.

Attendance Increased 30 Per Cent.

The attendance was 30 per cent greater than at any previous St. Louis show and of a cosmopolitan character. An unusual and unexpected number of farmers and dwellers in the smaller towns in the St. Louis trade territory came to St. Louis for the Auto Show and they came with fixed intentions and money in their pockets so that they swelled the number of sales made greatly.

The total attendance for the week was 51,241. Monday night, heretofore always the largest night in point of attendance, there were 10,241 people at the show. Saturday night, however, eclipsed the Monday night attendance by more than 5000, all cash admissions.

There were exhibited at the show 239 pleasure cars, gasoline and electric, and 44 trucks and lighter delivery wagons. In the accessory department interesting displays were made of the newest and most novel attachments for automobiles and lines of fabric, limousine and coupe bodies and a picturesque line of brilliant colored Indian blanket automobile coats, the newest fad for winter driving.

Sales Exceed $750,000 in Value.

It was not possible to accurately arrive at the number of cars sold during the week by the 73 exhibitors, but a conservative estimate made by the Show Committee would indicate that the value of the sales made will exceed $750,000.

Great credit is accorded to the members of the Show Committee for the smooth running of the big motor exhibit. There was not a hitch during the entire week. The Show Committee was W. C. Anderson of the Ford Motor Co., chairman; H. B. Krenning of the Dorris Motor Car Co.; Samuel Breadon of the Western Automobile Co.; John H. Phillips of the Hudson-Phillips Automobile Co.; T. L. Hausmann of the Overland Automobile Co., and H. F. Fahrenkrog of the Kardell Motor Car Co. Robert E. Lee of the Auto Review was general manager.

A member of the Show Committee said: "We desire it fully understood that all of the shows of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association are held in the fall and at Forest Park Highlands. A publication in a morning newspaper to the effect that our next exhibit may be held at the Coliseum is a mistake. We cannot use the Coliseum because we require more than 80,000 square feet of space to make our exhibit, while the Coliseum floor space is only about 15,000 square feet."

NEW TIRE MANAGER.

E. L. Austin, who for many years was connected with the tire industry in St. Louis, and one of the best-known tire men in local circles, has returned to St. Louis after several years' absence in New York. He is to be in charge of the tire and tire service department of the Fred Campbell Motor Accessory house, which is moving into its new four-story home on Locust street. He will also have charge of the G. & J. tire service and sales.

TRANSCONTINENTAL COLE VISITS AUTO SHOW

On the last leg of its 10,000-mile test trip, the transcontinental Cole arrived in St. Louis last night in charge of C. S. Crawford, chief engineer of the Cole Co. The car was immediately placed in the Cole pavilion at the auto show, where hundreds of visitors attentively listened to the story of the trip and examined the car. One extra passenger returned with this car in the person of a cub bear, which they brought back from the West and is now the official mascot. The big blue car did not have the appearance of having passed through the grueling trip claimed. Nothing was smashed about the body, the lamps were all burning, wheels true and the motor running smoothly.

The log of the trip shows every conceivable road condition and some not "in any book." This car left Indianapolis ten days after the Indiana autoists started on their transcontinental tour and at Denver, the Cole was only one day behind the party. "It was a wonderful trip," says Crawford, "and a wonderful performing car."

STUDEBAKER AGENTS MEET, DINE AND TALK

There was an enthusiastic gathering at the American Hotel Saturday night in the private dining room, of Studebaker agents from all of the surrounding territory, some coming from Kentucky and Tennessee and even as far away as Texas, to attend the banquet.

The banquet was tendered to them by the Studebaker Corporation and Carl J. Simon, manager of the local Studebaker distributing depot, was chairman and toastmaster.

There were 40 agents in attendance and each of them was called upon for a brief talk, which usually proved to be no more than a song of praise for the Studebaker line. After the dinner and talks, the entire party adjourned to the automobile show at Forest Park Highlands.

NEW CHASE AGENTS

A local agent has been appointed for the Chase line of motor trucks and delivery wagons, the account having been taken by the M. W. Bond Automobile Co., 4121 Olive street. This company has been given a wide distributing territory, which is inclusive of parts of Missouri and Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and Arkansas.

M. W. Bond is president of the M. W. Bond Auto Co. and George A. Root, another widely known motor car salesman, is salesmanager.

CADILLAC WINS FIRST BY TOSS OF COIN

A flip of a coin decided the tie in the touring class of the sixth annual reliability tour of the Automobile Club of St. Louis, which took place Saturday, Oct. 4. Three of the contestants—Alvin H. Zucker, driving a Cadillac; Clarence King, driving a Cadillac, and Louis Manne, driving a Franklin, each finished with scores of 998 out of a possible 1000.

The Tie Committee, composed of James Hagermann Jr., referee; George J. Tansey, Edward M. Flesh, Samuel Plant and Roy F. Britton, left the method of deciding the tie to the contestants. They agreed to decide the contest by flipping the coin. The cup was to be cut in half and the second trophy, a gold club emblem watch fob, was to go to the third contestant. Mr. Zucker won the first half of the cup—that is, he had choice of the halves—and Mr. King the second half. This gave the Cadillac cars the first place. Mr. Manne won the watch fob.

The cup will be cut in half and each half mounted on an ebony placque. The presentation will be made at a smoker in the near future.

Edward A. Limberg won the cup in the roadster class, making a record of 994 points with a Locomobile. Bart S. Adams won the second trophy, a gold club emblem watch fob, making a record of 992 points with a Stutz.

Euchre to Be Held at Altenheim.

The Ladies' Society of the St. Louis Altenheim will hold a euchre, lotto and guessing contest next Saturday afternoon at the institution. Mrs. Gustav Cramer is president of the Entertainment Committee.

A Post-Dispatch lost ad will find the lost article if it can be found.

FALL SHOW LOGICAL

"St. Louis dealers are to be congratulated on their initiative in breaking away from set lines and having their show so early in the season," says T. O. Jones, advertising manager of the Marion, who was here all the week. "Years ago, winter or early spring was the time for the automobile show, but then new models were always announced about that time. Now, new types are made public during the summer.

"Take the new Marion line for instance. Our cars are distinctly new this season, a splendid 'six' being added to the line, so that on two classes we have nine separate body types ranging from a racing roadster to a five-passenger sedan. We welcome the chance to exhibit these cars to let them make their formal debut early in the season, and from the interest shown in them by the show visitors, and business done, it is evident that the motorists or prospective motorists are partial to the new models."

AUTO SHOWS EDUCATE

"The St. Louis Automobile Show which closed at Forest Park Highlands last night, is the most wonderful school of mechanical knowledge that has ever been conducted in St. Louis," declared Stewart McDonald, vice-president of the Moon Motor Car Co.

"The 1914 models probably show a more decided mechanical development than have the models of any previous years. They show the electric starter and electric lights as features of permanence; they introduce a new six-cylinder engine with all the power and smooth running qualities of the heavier six, but without the heavy fuel and tire expense that formerly accompanied the six; they introduce new types of bodies that are pleasing to the eye and add to the luxury of automobiling; they introduce such reliefs to the automobile driver as the automatic spark control and so simplify driving.

"And visitors have all these features pointed out and explained to them with more persistence and more effect than they could or would be shown in any school. And they grasp the details better because they do not realize that they are learning something. They are simply having a good time seeing the show.

"I believe that St. Louis people are very fortunate in having an automobile show so early in the season when the new models are really new and can see them at a time when interest in the new models is the keenest."

PACKARD PRICES REDUCED

"Our new '2-38' Packard model at $3850 is certainly attracting attention, and is going to be immensely popular," says R. L. McCrea of the Halsey Automobile Co. "When the Packard factory announced a new '38' at a reduction of price that meant a saving of $500 to $600 on open cars, and $300 to $400 on limousines, over the same model car of other high grade makes, the general public were skeptical. One look at the car, however, will convince them that the 'Packard' standard that has stood for highest quality in the 14 years of motor car building, is in evidence throughout the car. Nothing has been cheapened, but the splendid Packard workmanship has put the highest obtainable grade of material in a car that embodies refinements and innovations that make every part a feature. It's every inch a Packard. CAN NOW SUPPLY TIRES

About the most welcome news that has reached motorists of St. Louis lately came in a recent announcement from Akron, to E. W. Staley, local manager for the Diamond Rubber Co.

During the present season motorists throughout the country have been bewailing the fact that the demand for Diamond tires has far exceeded the production of these popular tires. The situation has been such that dealers have been unable to supply the tremendous demand, and motorists throughout the country in many cases were compelled to accept substitutes until their dealers could be supplied.

The announcement carried the good news that the production of Diamond tires has reached a point where motorists can now be supplied in all popular sizes.

"It has taken a mighty effort on the part of our production department to catch up with the unprecedented demand," said Mr. Staley.

"When we put our new tire on the market this season, with its more mileage features of vitalized rubber, three-point rim contact, and the no-pinch safety flap, our production department was well provided for the usual season's increase in business. But we were not prepared for the unprecedented demand which followed the announcement of this new tire. While we were confident our tires would be popular among motorists this season, we hardly expected the avalanche of orders that has poured in upon us.

TRADE PAPER PRAISES ST. LOUIS ASSOCIATION

One of the editorial staff of the Automobile Trade Journal attended a recent meeting of the St. Louis Motor Accessory Trade Association. This is his view of the meeting as printed in his magazine:

"How St. Louis automobile accessory dealers have solved the difficult problem of credits, through their trade association. called the Motor Accessories Trade Association, was interestingly described at their annual meeting in June, at which an Automobile Trade Journal representative was a guest.

"Organization has done it. Until the dealers got together in this association there was no source of credit reformation for this trade. Every dealer took his own chances and pocketed his losses, while the dishonest individual transferred his patronage to another dealer and began running up a 'bad debt' with him.

"With the organization of the Trade Association, the development was begun of a credit system under the name of a 'watch list.' Each member of the association furnishes each month to Secretary Robert E. Lee a list of customers whose accounts are more than 60 days' past due.

"When the name of any individual has been reported for this list by two members, a bulletin is at once sent to each member, warning them to add this name to their 'watch list.' As a result there is always at hand in each dealer's office a dependable list of the 'poor pay' automobile owners of St. Louis. And in this way the chronic deadbeats are headed off from extending their practices indefinitely through the trade, as they used to do. Secretary Lee told the members that his office averaged five credit inquiries per day, and the tremendous saving to the dealers is apparent.

"Another useful function of the association which saves the members, it is estimated, $20,000 per year, is the Advertising Committee. All solicitors of advertising for programs, entertainments, catalogues, etc., are compelled to secure indorsements from this committee before members are allowed to buy their space. Needless to say, this indorsement is seldom given, and the dealers are thereby saved from 'charity advertising.' Another accomplishment of the association is the elimination of chauffeurs' commissions, at one time a common and rather general practice in St. Louis, as it is elsewhere. This also has saved the dealers hundreds of dollars.

"The association has 75 members and is a splendid example of the benefits which are to be had in any city by co-operation on the fundamentals which affect each dealer equally.

"Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: John F. Shuford, president; J. Park Patterson, vice-president; William K. Norris, treasurer, and Robert E. Lee, secretary. Directors, Fred Campbell, Denmark Donnelly, George M. Hoffman, A. N. Stanley and August C. Bauer."

MIXED FUEL USED WITH SUCCESS BY OMNIBUSES

London Concerns Experiment With Gasoline and Kerosene Mixture.

At least two of the omnibus companies in London are operating cars with mixed fuel. The British Motor Cab Co. is using a mixture of 40 per cent kerosene and 60 per cent gasoline, while the London General Omnibus Co. utilizes a mixture of benzol and kerosene. The former concern says that the only alterations to the carburetor found to be necessary are a slight increase in the size of the jet and an enlargment of the air inlet somewhat. An auxiliary attachment on the dash permits of using gasoline for starting.

Southern Automobiles, Ltd., Blackheath, London, has been testing a mixture of one-third benzol and two-thirds kerosene with very satisfactory results, says The Automobile Journal, as indicated by the following report:

"The only difficulty we have experienced is in starting, and we have found that when the car has been left standing overnight the benzol appeared to separate somewhat from the kerosene. We found we could get over the difficulty by fitting a tap so arranged as to draw a small quantity of benzol from the top of the tank for starting purposes, and after the car has been running, to change the supply over to draw from the lower portion of the tank, as the vibration of running is sufficient to keep the fuel mixed.

"With regard to carbon deposits we have never experienced any difficulty in this direction, either with benzol only or the mixture of benzol and kerosene, except in cases where the carburetor was obviously at fault. The normal amount of deposit has proved to be not more than when gasoline has been used.

"We have during the last few days been experimenting with a still cruder fuel in the shape of a by-product obtained in the production of napthaline; this we find mixes with benzol in equal proportions and works quite satisfactorily."

A DISTINCTIVE EXHIBIT

One of the most interesting exhibits at the St. Louis Automobile Show was that of the Southern Motor Car Co. of this city, who had the Haynes model 23, four-cylinder, five-passenger car.

These models are equipped with the Vulcan Electric Gear Shift, a device which abolishes entirely the use of the hand gear shift lever.

Tonie Ludewick of the Service Department says: "Never did he see so many people interested in any automobile feature. If I shifted the gears once, I shifted them 10,000 times during the show for the benefit of interested crowds who continually invaded our booth."

J. D. Barth, manager of the Southern Motor Car Co., is very enthusiastic, and says he secured a large number of very desirable prospects at the show.

"I am very favorably impressed with the Haynes organization," said Mr. Barth. "Not only have they adopted the Electric Gear Shifting device, and doubled their capacity, but they have equally big plans in mind for the 1915 season. [illegible] already at w[illegible] perfecting it.

APPETITE WAS POOR

Peruna was advised. Was completely restored

Suffered Nearly Twelve Years, Peruna Was My Relief.

Mr. James P. Bracken, No. 442 W. 43rd St., New York City, N. Y., writes: "For nearly a dozen years catarrh has bothered me in one form or another. I was troubled with nasal catarrh that had affected my stomach, which troubled me most in the morning. My appetite was poor, and I did not seem to relish my food. Indigestion bothered me at times, also.

"I was advised to take Peruna, and I took it as prescribed for a month, when my cure was almost complete. Today there is not a trace of catarrh in my system, and I can say without hesitation that Peruna cured me."

November Brings Dyspepsia.

November is very liable to bring dyspepsia. People eat too much in November. This is perfectly natural. During the hot weather little food has been required.

Food has two purposes, tissue building and repairing and heat making. The heat making properties of food are not needed so much during the hot weather, hence less food is required. November brings cold weather again and more food is required for heat making purposes. The appetite craves more food, and the result is most people over indulge.

This may bring on a condition of the stomach known as dyspepsia. The stomach is suddenly surprised with extra work in digesting unusual amounts of food. In some cases it is not equal to the emergency.

Peruna is an excellent stomachic. It stimulates the stomach in its natural functions. It acts as a gentle laxative also, and in this way enables the stomach and digestive organs to rise to the emergency of the extra work thrown upon them during the month of November.

A few doses of Peruna during the early days of November would undoubtedly save a great many people from the horrors of dyspepsia. It is an excellent remedy. It should be in every home, in order to enable the digestive organs to adjust themselves to the differences of diet between summer and winter.

Catarrh of Head and Stomach.

Mr. Frank Richter, 309 East Second St., Winona, Minn., writes: "As a remedy for catarrh I take pleasure in recommending Peruna for catarrh of the stomach.

"My catarrh was principally located in my head and stomach. I tried many remedies without success. I tried several doctors but they were unable to cure me. I read of Peruna in the papers and five bottles cured me."

System in Bad Condition.

Mr. Michael Rooney, 26 Fifth St., Watervliet, N. Y., writes:

"If I had known of Peruna years ago I should have been saved much suffering. Under carelessness and exposure in my younger years my system got into a very bad condition before I was aware of it.

"My friends advised me to try Peruna, for which I am very thankful, as it has cured me in two months."—ADV.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young—is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels, there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle.

Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver. Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities. You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, Ohio.

Rheumatic Blood is Whole Story

Sciatica, Lumbago, and Dreaded Articular Rheumatism Cured.

You Will Feel Like an Acrobat After Using S. S. S.

There is a host of pills, powders, tablets and what-not for rheumatism, but they all lack the first essential to being a natural medicine. To begin with, rheumatism is simply a name given to designate a variety of pains, and can only be reached by irrigating the entire blood supply with a naturally assimilative antidote. True, the pains may be eased with narcotics or the acids may be neutralized for the time being. But such methods merely temporize and do not even lead to a cure. There is but one standard rheumatism remedy, and is sold in all drug stores under the name of S. S. S. Attempts are often made to sell something claimed to be "just as good." Insist positively you will have nothing but S. S. S.

It contains only pure vegetable elements and is absolutely free of mercury, iodide of potash or arsenic.

The recoveries of all types of rheumatism by the use of S. S. S. is a fine tribute to the natural efficacy of this remarkable medicine, for it is assimilated just as naturally, just as specifically, and just as well ordained as the most acceptable, most palatable, and most readily digested food. Do not fail to get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day. You will be astonished at the results. If your rheumatism is of such a nature that you would like to consult a specialist, write to the medical department, The Swift Specific Co., 330 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

CARNEGIE URGED TO ENDOW FRIENDSHIP FUND IN AMERICAS

Minister From Peru Desires People of Two Countries to Be More Closely Related.

IDEA PLEASES IRON KING

Publication of Two Magazines, One Perhaps in St. Louis, Embodied in Suggestions.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Frederico Alfonso Pezet, Minister from Peru to America, has asked Andrew Carnegie to endow with a fund a foundation to help bring the people of the United States and the South American countries closer together, for a better understanding and for closer business relations.

Minister Pezet would have Carnegie make the fund large enough to provide for the writing and printing of books on South America and for the circulation of them in the public and parochial schools of this country, and for the establishment of two magazines, one in a central South American city and the other in a central United States city, perhaps St. Louis.

In addition, Minister Pezet would have an exchange of scholarships and professorships between United States and South American universities, on the same basis as that at present existing between Harvard and German universities.

This endowment is not to be part of the peace endowment, but separate and distinct from that.

Answer Expected This Month.

The plan of Minister Pezet has been submitted to Carnegie in writing at Carnegie's request, and an answer is expected on Carnegie's arrival in this country the last of this month. The matter was taken up with Carnegie first at St. Louis at the paece congress last spring. Carnegie was impressed favorably with the idea and asked for a detailed statement covering the proposition.

Minister Pezet was asked by the Post-Dispatch correspondent today about his plan.

"This country and the South American countries should be closer together," said Pezet. "The way to bring about better feeling and better relations is by having the people know each other better. Our boys, who come here and atttend the colleges and universities, play the games, dance the turkey trot and enjoy the sports of America, have a friendly feeling for the United States that they could not get any other way. The same is true with Peru, with the Americans who go there.

"Good books, telling about our countries, their past and their present, their people and their resources, would help. Magazines and papers and an exchange of scholarships would bring us closer together. South America is a great country. The United States should cultivate the closest ties.

Did Not Specify Amount.

"Did you fix $2,000,000 or more as the sum that Carnegie should put into a foundation fund?" Pezet was asked.

"No, I did not suggest any amount. I put my suggestion in writing and Mr. Carnegie was to think it over. I hope to have a favorable answer from him when he returns to this country. Nothing is definite about the matter and will not be until Mr. Carnegie renders his opinion. We have not throught of trustees or any other details."

It has been suggested that William J. Bryan, John Barrett, Miss Mabel Boardman of this city, and Representative Richard Bartholdt of Missouri might be trustees of such a fund. Pezet said that he would not discuss details with anybody until Carnegie gives his answer. He may ask Secretary Bryan to go with him to see Carnegie.

BREAKS ENGAGEMENT TO ELOPE, IS ARRESTED

Young Woman Charges John Schell Pawned a Diamond Ring She Loaned Him.

John Schell, 15 years old, agrees with his mother that he is too young to marry. His decision was reached after he was locked up at police headquarters Friday night at the instance of Miss Mary Bridge, also 15, of 5010 Minerva avenue. Schell says he was to have eloped with Miss Bridge last Tuesday. He was arrested because the girl told Associate Prosecuting Attorney Thomas Staunton that he had appropriated a diamond ring which she permitted him to wear.

Schell says he has known the girl nine years. About six weeks ago, he told the police, Miss Bridge was wearing a ring too large for her finger. She asked him if he would like to wear it, he said, and he put it on his finger. Without making the fact known to their families, the youth said he and Miss Bridge determined to be married. After he had worn the ring two weeks he pawned it for $25 for the wedding expenses. He sold the ticket for $4, thus raising $29. The ticket has been recovered by the police.

They would have been married last Tuesday, the youth said, but for the fact that his grandfather, John Dennis, was buried Monday. He says he told his mother then that he was about to elope and she advised him against marriage because of his youth.

SEWER DISTRICT TO EMBRACE PART OF COUNTY URGED

The City Plan Commission has invited Sewer Commissioner Moreno and City Counselor Baird to a conference on the subject of the establishment of a sewer district to embrace those portions of St. Louis and St. Louis County that have the same natural drainage conditions.

The conference was urged by President Lazarus of the City Council, President Kinsey of the Board of Public Improvements and Park Commissioner Davis. An act providing for such a district was passed by the Legislature five years ago.

The commission has under consideration a report made by the Sanitary Committee, of which Thomas P. Barnett is chairman. The report was made as a result of a pedestrian study of the River des Peres valley, made by George E. Kessler and other members of the commission.

Residents along the Des Peres, inside and outside the city limits, recently have addressed letters to the commission, asking that the matter be taken up without delay. They say that the question of the disposition of sewage is becoming a serious one to University City, Clayton, Webster, Maplewood and other St. Louis County localities. They assert the time has arrived when there should be a comprehensive study made of the entire watershed of the Des Peres, both within and without the city, and that the question of the adoption of a general plan should be submitted to the residents within the proposed district.

The report points out that sections of St. Louis County, including over 57,000 acres, are within the watershed of St. Louis city. Their natural drainage is toward the Mississippi River and through North and South St. Louis, which are the most thickly populated in the city and in which the increase of population is most rapid.

BOY, 14, FINDS MOTHER UNCONSCIOUS FROM GAS

Note Written by Invalid Woman Says Suffering Caused Attempt to End Life.

When Milton Dinan, 14 years old, of 4018 Leland avenue, awoke yesterday morning his invalid mother was not in her bed or her room. He found her huddled on the floor of the kitchen, apparently lifeless, wrapped in blankets. The cocks of the gas range were turned on. She was not dead, but was unconscious. She was taken to the city hospital, where it was said that she probably would die.

Milton found a note beside his mother. He read it and tried to tear it up. The police pieced it together and read this:

"Boys: Please forgive me for what I have done. I could not help it. The pains was such that they drove me to this. My money you will find in the bank. Take my body to Delor street. They will take care of the money. Everybody please forgive me. Goodby. Jean."

Mrs. Anne Marks of 4533 Delor street is the mother of Mrs. Dinan. There are two sons besides Milton, but they live at other places.

CLARK RULES SELF OUT OF $7000 AUTO WITHOUT A TREMOR

Refuses to Recognize Amendment to Deficiency Appropriation Bill.

MARSHALL LOSES CAR, TOO

House Votes to Abolish Commerce Court, but Saves Judges' Jobs.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The United States Commerce Court, created in 1910 to have exclusive jurisdiction over appeals from decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission, will go out of existence Dec. 31, if President Wilson signs the deficiency appropriation bill as it passed the House today. The position of its judges, however, were finally saved when the House accepted the Senate's amendment continuing the present Judges as additional Circuit Judges of the United States.

The fight against the Commerce Court, which has raged for two years, ended with the agreement of the House to Continue the extra Judges in office until they resign or retire. Previously, the House had voted the Judges out of office, as well as having abolished the court. The Senate's amendment was accepted today because of the belief that the deficiency bill would be indefinitely held up by the Senate if the House insisted on legislating the present Commerce Court Judges out of office.

Clark Loses $7000 Auto.

Speaker Champ Clark, during debate on the measure, ruled himself out of a $7000 automobile without a visible tremor. James R. Mann, Republican leader, proposed to tack on the automobile appropriation as an amendment similar to the provision the Senate had made for Vice-President Marshall. The Speaker would not recognize the propriety of the amendment, however, and in the end Vice-President Marshall also lost his new machine.

Democrats were primed for the fight on the proposal to give the Vice-President a new car, but Mann got the floor first, with his motion to increase the $7000 appropriation to $14,000 and include the Speaker as one of the beneficiaries.

"I make a point of order against that amendment," said Chairman Fitzgerald.

"The Chair sustains the point of order," said Speaker Clark without hesitation, and the House voted out the Vice-Presidential perquisite.

House Makes $400,000 Appropriation.

The House accepted some of the amendments of the Senate, but rejected others from which the Senate will have to recede. Under the leadership of Majority Leader Underwood and Representative Gillette, Republican, the House agreed to the proposed $400,000 appropriation, to be used as part payment for a $700,000 Red Cross building in Washington to be known as a memorial to Northern and Southern women of the Civil War.

RESTAURANT MAN DIES WHILE SEATED IN CHAIR

Wife Who Had Begun Divorce Suit Takes Charge and Will Arrange for Funeral.

Joseph Ehrman, proprietor of the Woodland Cafe in the Pierce Building, died yesterday while seated at his desk in the restaurant establishment. Ehrman, who had opened the Pierce Building restaurant a week ago, arrived at the establishment at 8 a. m., apparently in good health. A few minutes later it was noticed by employes he was bent over the desk, but they supposed him taking a nap, and no one attempted to disturb him until about 9:30, when he was wanted on business. Then he was found unconscious. Dr. Couschon, house physician at the Planters Hotel, was summoned, and said Ehrman had been dead some time.

Ehrman's wife, Mrs. Margaret J. Ehrman, who had sued for divorce, was notified, and she went to the restaurant and took charge of the body. She will arrange for the funeral. Mrs. Ehrman's suit was filed Sept. 10. The case is in Judge Grimm's court. The plaintiff's lawyer, George E. Mix, yesterday said he will appear in court Monday and withdraw the petition. Ehrman had engaged counsel to represent him, and on Friday his wife withdrew a motion for temporary alimony she had filed. They separated July [illegible], after a marriage [illegible] years ago.

For years Ehrman and his wife had been engaged in the restaurant business together. They had the restaurant privileges at Forest Park Highlands until recently, and also conducted a restaurant on Olive street, near Grand avenue, together. Several months ago Ehrmans wife and his brother, Carl Ehrman, acquired his interest in the Olive street place, and since Mrs. Ehrman and her brother-in-law have been conducting this restaurant.

55,000 ARKANSAS ACRES TO BE OPEN TO SETTLERS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 11.—Before Jan. 1 settlers on 55,000 acres of Government land in Arkansas will be permitted to homestead the tracts which they heretofore have held without title or will be compelled to vacate and permit some other person to homestead it.

This land is what is known as "sunk lake lands," in the northeastern part of the State. It was announced several years ago that because of survey errors in that part of the State no title had been given to several townships.

Revised plats have been made of the land and have been approved and the Department of Interior at Washington will send them to the local land office. Persons who have lived on the land will be given first opportunity to homestead if they are eligible.

MOTORMAN OF CAR WHICH KILLED MAN HELD BY CORONER

Charge of Criminal Carelessness Made Against Creve Coeur Line Employe.

William H. Noe, motorman of the Creve Coeur Lake car that jumped the track at Dead Man's Curve, near Delmar Garden Wednesday morning, resulting in injuries to George Gregg of Vinita Park, from which he died, was held by Coroner Padberg for criminal carelessness yesterday.

A transcript of the evidence taken at the Gregg inquest will be forwarded to Prosecuting Attorney Lashley at Clayton for such action as he may care to take. Gregg died Friday at the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium, making it necessary to hold the inquest in St. Louis.

E. C. Davis, conductor of the car, testified that Noe was a new man on the line, having made but one previous trip. He said that Noe slowed down as he approached the curve, but not enough to prevent the accident. William F. Paden and James T. Veatch testified that the car was going at a speed of 30 miles an hour as it took the curve.

Noe has been a motorman for six months, according to the testimony at the inquest. He worked under Supt. John Miers of the Creve Coeur Lake and Delmar divisions. Miers is the owner of numerous saloons at Creve Coeur Lake and devotes much of his time to running them.

SPENCER TELLS OF FIRING FLATS WHEN REFUSED QUARTERS

Janitor Was Killed and 128 Families Were Made Homeless by Slayer's Work.

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—Harry Spencer, slayer of Mrs. Mildred Allison-Rexroat, whose confession last Sunday that he had committed 19 other murders, failed to convince the police today. He said he set fire to the Ingram flats, at Sixtieth and Washington, last February, when 128 families were made homeless, and "old Dad" Benham, janitor of the building, lost his life.

Spencer said he started the blaze in the elevator shaft because he was angry at being unable to rent a flat in the building.

Spencer's confession to the murder of an old man in Jackson Park two months ago and throwing his body into the lake received confirmation in part at the Jackson Park life-saving station. Members of the crew recovered a body from the lake at that time. The skull had been crushed.

Asked if he killed the Peterson children in Des Moines in 1902, Spencer said he had been in that city, but didn't recollect whether he had killed anyone.

A Post-Dispatch want ad will sell it—anything, from a trunk to a tenement—from a range to a ranch.

JANITORS CHARGED WITH THEFT OF $225,000 IN GEMS

Men Arrested on Detectives' Affidavit Charged With Rumsey-Harriman Thefts.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—With the arraignment of two men here today, the police asserted that they had solved the theft of $225,000 worth of jewels last July from the homes of Mrs. Charles Carey Rumsey, a daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, and Mrs. John H. Hanan, at Narragansett Pier, R. I.

James Stewart and Wiley Mason, janitors, each with a police record, were held in $5000 bail each on charges that they were implicated in the theft. They pleaded not guilty.

Detectives making the charge base their allegations upon a story given to them, they allege, by Herbert R. Tinkham, one-time counsel for Mason. According to the detectives' affidavit, Tinkham asserts that Mason showed him a box of jewels which Mason claimed were stolen from the Rumsey and Hanan homes and were worth $200,000. Tinkham is quoted as saying that Mason endeavored to induce him to go to Seattle to dispose of the jewels.

Stewart is charged with having committed the actual thefts by crawling in windows.

NEW TARIFF WILL CUT LIVING COST, MERCHANTS SAY

Material Reduction in Many Lines Will Not Be Felt Until Next Year.

CLOTHES TO BE CHEAPER

Shoe Prices Won't Be Changed—Diamonds and Other Gems More Expensive.

Wholesale merchants in St. Louis, discussing the probable effect of the new tariff law, told Post-Dispatch reporters yesterday that the retail prices in many lines will be materially reduced, but that the full effect of the reduction will not be felt until next year.

Most of the imports for the winter season have been purchased and delivered, they said, and the advantage of the reduced duties will begin with deliveries for next spring and summer seasons.

Woolen materials and the finer grades of cotton fabrics in dry goods lines will be reduced about 10 to 15 per cent, in their opinion, but ginghams, calicos, muslins and the cheaper grades of cotton goods will show little reduction. The price of hosiery and knit goods is expected to remain about the same.

The retail price of dolls and Christmas toys will remain about the same, dealers assert, but in a few lines in which the tariff has been reduced 5 per cent, an added touch in the decoration or in the quality of the article will cause the price to remain the same.

Shoes and men's hats will show little change in price, because the American market is able to compete with the world in these lines and hold the prices steady.

Diamond Prices to Increase.

Diamonds and precious stones will increase in price 10 per cent, according to jewelers, because the tariff on these luxuries was raised 10 per cent. The price of other jewelry will remain about the same, because labor is the largest item of cost, and the schedule of prices is fixed according to the workmanship and design, which are not affected by the tariff duties.

The effect of the new tariff on millinery goods is problematical, dealers say, because of the provision in the new law prohibiting the importation of some of the finest feathers used in the millinery trade. Not much reduction in general prices is looked for by the wholesale merchants.

The new law prohibits dealers from importing paradise, numidi, ghoura and aigrette feathers and the plumes of all wild birds. There is a slight reduction in several lines of the finery used in women's toilets, according to the dealers, but this reduction is expected to be offset by the larger demand for these articles because of the lack of the popular plumes, which are prohibited. This is expected to keep the price steady. A sufficient supply of the prohibited feathers is on hand to supply the trade until next winter, dealers say, and then the test of popular substitute trimmings and reduced prices will come.

The price of jewelry novelties will remain about the same, notwithstanding the reduced tariff, according to Oscar F. Uhl, president of the Furstenwerth-Uhl Jewelry Co., excepting in celluloid articles, which are known to the trade as Parisian ivory. These mirrors, combs and handy articles with celluloid trimmings will be reduced in price about 15 per cent by next winter, in his opinion. Most of this line is imported from France.

There will be hardly any reduction in the price of men's hats, according to Sidney Rothschild, president of Rothschild Bros. Hat Co. About 85 per cent of the hats worn in this country are made in the United States, he said, and the slight reduction of the tariff on articles used in hat making is not sufficient to stimulate competition from foreign makes to any large extent.

"Dolls and Christmas toys will not be reduced in price" said E. R. Schwerdtmann, president of the Schwerdtmann Toy Co. No change was made in the tariff duty on dolls and toys, he asserted, and the reduction of 5 per cent on certain lines of playthings will hardly stimulate enough competiton to reduce the retail price.

Little Reduction in Silks.

American manufacturers of silk goods can compete with foreign factories, and there will likely be little reductions in the silk used in millinery supplies, according to Leo Levis, president of the Levis-Zukoski Mercantile Co., wholesale dealers in millinery. Most of the articles of women's dress are made here, and the labor and expense account will be the same, regardless of the tariff duties on the goods used, he said.

The tariff reductions in this line will be offset, in his opinion, by the increased demand for trimmings to take the place of the important feathers prohibited from importation.

Woolen materials in the dry goods lines will be reduced in price from 10 to 17 per cent, and the finer grades of cotton fabrics will be decreased about 10 per cent, because of the new tariff rates, in the opinion of Forrest Ferguson, president of the Ferguson-McKinney Dry Goods Co. The reduction will not be felt to any large extent until next spring, he said, as the imported supplies for the winter season have been purchased and delivered.

Hosiery Already Increased Abroad.

The lowering of the tariff on hosiery and knit goods already has had a peculiar effect on those lines, Ferguson asserted, by causing the leading manufacturers in Germany to advance their prices to almost absorb the tariff reduction. The reason for this, he said, is that the reduction in the tariff created a new field for the foreign factories, and the sudden orders from the United States for goods which they are unable to make and deliver at once has caused an unexpected demand which justified them in raising prices.

He said he expects this advance to be temporary only, and in about two years, when the factories have caught up with the demand, the prices will be reduced automatically to conform to the lower tariff rates.

The foreign mills have no large stocks to dump into the United States market, Ferguson said, but on the contrary are sold in advance. Most of the ginghams, calico, percales and domestics are made in America, according to Ferguson, and competition will not reduce prices on these cheaper fabrics.

Ready-made clothing will remain at about the same price, but better fabrics will be used, giving the purchaser better values for the money, according to S. H. Curlee, president of the Curlee Clothing Co. The material in a suit is only a small part of the cost of the finished article, he said. A reduction in the price of the fabrics does not reduce the price of the labor necessary to manufacture the suit.

The man who usually pays $25 for a suit cannot figure that a reduction in the tariff of 10 per cent will mean that he can buy his suit $2.50 cheaper, because of the decrease, he said. The material in the suit may cost only $10, the balance being for labor and other expenses. The reduction due to the tariff must be figured only on the decrease in the cost of the material, which in this case would be perhaps $1.

Better Quality of Goods.

Instead of causing this $1 reduction, he expects the result to be that a better grade of fabrics will be used, giving the wearer a better value for the same money he has been paying, he said. This change, in his opinion, will not take place before next spring.

The price of shoes will show little change, according to Alanson C. Brown, president of the Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. Hides have been on the free list for some time, and the reductions in the minor articles used in making shoes will not be sufficient to reduce the price, in his opinion.

The price of perfect diamonds and other precious stones will increase 10 per cent in about three months, according to F. W. Drosten, president of the F. W. Drosten Jewelry Co. The increase will be felt, he says, as soon as the present stock on hand in this country is depleted.

The shoe market is open to the world, and the competition of all other markets would not have the effect of reducing the price of shoes, according to Jackson Johnson, president of the International Shoe Co. America is a larger exporter than importer of shoes, he said, and with hides coming into the country free of tariff duty, no foreign market can compete here with American made goods.

The tariff on precious stones was increased 10 per cent in the new bill on the ground that the jewels are luxuries and that the duty will be paid by the wealthy. This is a fallacy, Drosten asserted, because about 80 per cent of the diamonds sold nowadays are purchased by salaried persons and those in the so-called middle class. Not more than 20 per cent of precious stones sold are bought by the wealthy class, he said. The additional duty, in his opinion, will result in a larger amount of smuggling of diamonds into this country.

Importers Feared Smuggling.

Importers urged the members of Congress not to increase the duty on precious stones on the ground that the increase would furnish an additional incentive to smuggling, according to George J. Hess, president of the Hess & Culbertson Jewelry Co. This was refused by the leaders, he said, who told the importers that the Democratic party stands for cheap necessities and expensive luxuries, and that it was up to the Customs Department to collect the duties and punish smugglers.

Not more than 25 per cent of the diamonds now sold are bought by the wealthy class, he asserted. The very wealthy buy few diamonds, according to Hess, except when their wives and daughters are about to make a "sludge" in society.

Goodman King, president of the Mermod, Jaccard & King Jewelry Co., is of the opinion that jewelry, outside of diamonds and other precious stones, will show little fluctuation in price because of the tariff.

EIGHT NATIONS IN BALLOON RACE STARTING TODAY

H. E. Honeywell and R. H. Upson U. S. Representatives in Big Paris Event.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 11.—Rarely has such an assembly of seasoned and expert balloonists been seen as is formed by the 19 pilots who start tomorrow from the Tuilleries Gardens in the race for the International Aeronautic cup. Eight nations are represented, the competitors being:

The United States, Capt. H. E. Honeywell and Ralph H. Upson.

France, Alfred Leblanc, Maurice Bienaime and Rene Rumpelmeier.

Great Britain, John Dunville and J. Defrancia.

Italy, Signor Agostini and Signor Pastine.

Belgium, L. Gerard and E. de Muyter.

Austria, Herr Sigmund and Herr Lenhart.

Germany, Hans Kaulon, Lieut. Von Pahl and H. Berliner.

Switzerland, V. de Beauclaire, N. Armbruster and M. Palmarin.

The conditions today were favorable for a close race. The wind was blowing from the most favorable quarter, the south-southwest, and the Weather Bureau promised that it would continue from that point. Most of the competitors hope to get far into Russia and they are taking provisions for 15 days with them.

The United States is represented by only two contestants as Capt. Watts of Kansas City withdrew.

Watts withdrew because of the inability of the Kansas City Aero Club to obtain a suitable balloon. Watts was one of the three Americans who won the right to enter the race. The balloon he had been using, the Kansas City II, is not suited to a long race, and the Kansas City Aero Club was unable to get anything better than a French cotton balloon.

News and Features of the POULTRY WORLD

EDITED BY T. W. ORCUTT

Former Secretary St. Louis Poultry Association.

PREVENTION FAR BETTER THAN CURE FOR POULTRY ILLS

Cleanliness Comes First, Then Exercise, Quality of Food and Sunlight.

It is more important to the beginner in poultry raising to know how to prevent diseases than to know how to cure them. Most of the diseases of poultry can be prevented by good care and management and the exercise of common sense.

At this time of the year the poultryman's trouble with roup and kindred ailments begins and only those who take proper care of their premises and flocks will go through the fall season without a loss from sickness.

The best way to avoid a loss from illness is to remove the cause.

This can be done by correcting your management and inspecting your houses, your feed, etc. Clean up the premises, whitewash and disinfect the houses and yards and scald the drinking fountains. This will greatly assist in keeping the birds in good health. If any bird becomes seriously sick, unless it is very valuable, the best remedy is to kill the bird and burn the carcass.

There is one rule that should be adopted by all poultry keepers: Never allow a bird to die on your premises. Kill it and burn the carcass before it reaches that stage.

It is a mistake to keep too many chickens in one flock or in a small house. It does not pay to crowd them, young or old. Dampness and drouths should never be permitted in a poultry house. Never allow your birds to eat decaying meats. Filthy drinking vessels are the cause of serious ailments. They should be scalded every few days. The fight must be constant against vermin and do not under any circumstances let lice and mites get a start.

Keep Them From Breeding Pens.

Any fowl that has had a serious sickness never should be placed in the breeding pen, even though the specimen may appear to have fully recovered. Do not inbreed your birds.

Mismanagement, neglect, impure water, bad feed, lack of exercise, poorly ventilated houses, foul yards, etc., all tend to cause the worst diseases of poultry.

The use of inferior and immature breeding stock often gives opportunity for disease to gain a foothold in the flock. Ordinarily, if birds become seriously ill, it is because of inexperience or neglect.

Some poultrymen who pay little or no attention to the cleanliness of their houses, brooders, yards, etc., succeed for a time but in almost every case their prosperity is short. Everything on a poultry farm should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected at least twice a year and the dropping boards should be cleaned not less than three times a week.

The nests, roosts and other appliances in the poultry house should be arranegd so that they can be removed and thoroughly cleaned and disinfected. Nature's own remedy and preventive, sunlight and fresh air, should be made use of by every poultryman. The importance and value of sunlight and fresh air is recognized by all health authorities. Disease germs cannot survive long where these two exist.

Fowls should be given plenty of exercise. The best way to do this is to cover the feeding floor with clean, dry litter and to throw the grain food in this. The straw, or whatever kind of litter is used, should not be damp, dirty or moulded.

Most of the complaints of diseases among fowls come from damp houses. The poultry house should be located on a well drained site and should have sufficient foundation to raise the floor higher than the ground.

Be Careful About Feeds.

Feeding has much to do with the health. The feed should be clean and wholesome. Avoid decayed vegetables, tainted meat, musty or moldy grain. Do not overfeed the breeding stock and provide plenty of green feed. Make sure the fowls have all the fresh, clean drinking water they desire. Colds and kindred diseases can be avoided by using potassium permanganate in the drinking water.

Health of poultry is greatly improved by forcing impurities from their systems. Half teaspoon of epsom salts to each bird in the mash once every two weeks is helpful.

A cured chicken is a menace to any flock and its weakness is sure to appear in the offspring. One of the greatest troubles among poultrymen is their inability to detect disease. Anyone can tell that something is wrong when a bird is unable to walk or its eyes are closed. The real poultryman will have discovered these troubles and checked them long before the birds reach this unfortunate condition and will have removed the birds from the flock before they have had an opportunity to spread the illness.

It is significant that nearly all breeders who rear large numbers of birds have come to the conclusion that, except in special cases with valuable birds, the most economical treatment of serious diseases occurring in a yard is execution.

A field of corn possesses a maximum of feeding value for either ensilage or shock corn when the lower leaves have begun to turn and when husks here and there show the yellow color, but with the stalk still green—that is, under normal ripening con[illegible]ions. The ears should be den[illegible] and a majority of them hard.

POULTRY PROBLEMS SOLVED

Chicken Pox.

Kindly let me know what to do for my chickens? Small sores have appeared on their combs. Jno. W., St. Louis. Your birds have the chicken pox. Remove the affected birds from the others and give them a dose of epsom salts, one ounce of salts to a quart of drinking water. Disinfect the premises, bathe the heads of the sick birds two or three times a day with dioxogen and anoint the affected parts of the head with carbolated oil.

Round Worms.

Will you kindly give me a remedy for round worms that is easy to give? G. L. A., St. Louis.

Dissolve in the drinking water two grains of santanine for each bird. Mix a small amount of mash and add one-half teaspoon of castor oil for each bird. Diseased birds should always be isolated and confined.

Liver Diseases.

Will you kindly tell me what to do for a cockerel whose comb has become discolored? He seems well otherwise. Have given him red pepper several times, but he gets no better. Is quinine good for birds with colds? F. E. L.

Your cockerel has liver trouble. Stop feeding him all heavy, fattening food. Give him a tablespoonful of castor oil, then feed him all the green feed he will eat, letting him get all the exercise possible. Quinine is often given for colds and, in mild cases, with good results. Any of the advertised roup remedies, given as directed, will rid your birds of the roup.

Control of Sexes.

I keep chickens for the eggs and would like to know if it is possible to mate my breeding pens to produce more females than males. I raised more males than females, and I have heard that properly mated pens will produce a larger per cent of males or females as desired. D. R. G., Memphis, Tenn.

The experiment stations have found that a strong active cockerel mated to hens that are from 3 to 5 years of age, using 25 or 30 females to the male, will produce from 75 to 90 per cent of cockerels. To raise nearly all pullets, use an old male bird mated to 25 or 30 pullets. You will not have a good average of fertility by using so many females with one male, but the chicks hatched will be of the sex desired. You will get the best results from pens so mated if the birds are allowed to have free range.

Egg Eating.

I notice some of my hens have the habit of eating the eggs in the nests and very often I see one of them running through the yard with part of an egg in her mouth, with the others following her. How can I prevent this?—H. T. F., Maplewood.

Place a few china eggs in the nests and on the floor of the chicken house and yard. The hens will pick at these and it will discourage them from attempting to eat the eggs in the nests. Keep your nests away from the light. Hens are not so likely to eat the eggs if the nest is dark. Nests also should be above the floor. Supply the hens with plenty of oyster shell and some meat food. If they persist in this bad habit, trim the points of their beaks until they bleed. Keep the hens as busy as possible and avoid broken eggs in their quarters, as this is usually the start of egg-eating trouble.

Chicken Pox.

I have a White Leghorn cockerel whose ear lobes have hard, scabby lumps and blisters on them. I have been using zinc ointment, but it does not seem to do any good. Will you please advise me? E. B. S.

Your bird evidently has the chicken pox. See answer to John W.

It is surprising how rapidly young chicks will develop if properly cared for. In an incredibly short time they will be flying about on stock racks and fences. This indicates a vigorous constitution and perfect health. It also indicates a hardy ancestry, which is a very strong feature in poultry rearing. Yet, no matter how hardy the ancestry, if the surroundings of the progeny be unfavorable to the strongest development, they will not grow and thrive as they should.

LIGHT EXHIBIT IN POULTRY CLASSES AT STATE FAIR

The poultry exhibit at the Missouri State Fair at Sedalia had a very light entry in almost all classes. The exhibit of turkeys was fairly good both in numbers and quality.

In the American class the barred Plymouth Rocks were few in number and showed little quality, except in the first and second cockerels, exhibited by Mrs. P. A. Tombs of Bowling Green, Mo.

The White Plymouth Rocks showed exceptional quality. Every first prize offered was won by Dr. Le Gear of Kirkwood.

There was a fairly good class of Rhode Island Reds. The entry of Virgil Blakemore of Fayette, Mo., won most of the prizes in this class. The classes in all other varieties were small and in most of them there was no competition.

The poultry was judged by C. A. Emery of Carthage, Mo.

The Missouri Experiment Station exhibited the results of the work at Mountain Grove, Mo., and had an interesting display of poultry appliances and graded eggs. Secretary Quisenberry and his assistants were busy throughout the week explaining the methods used at the station to the many visitors who were attracted by the exhibit.

If you are planning to enter a pen in one of the laying contests this fall it is a good time now to make preparations for it and to select promising specimens from which the contest flock will be chosen.

Some men will feed five grains of corn to six hens and then wonder why they don't lay at least one egg every day.

INDIANS TO BE HIRED TO PICK COTTON IN ARIZONA

First Experiment to Be Made With 500 From Papago Reservation.

MESA, Ariz., Oct. 11.—An interesting experiment with Indians that have become accustomed to the pursuits of agriculture in Arizona is to be made here this fall when 500 Papago Indians are employed to pick cotton in the Mesa district. Since Indians have never tried their hands at a pursuit of this kind, there is a serious question among cotton growers as to whether the redskins will be willing to do this kind of labor.

Camps are being arranged for the Indians near the cotton farms and they will be given entertainment in keeping with their desires and the camps will be properly policed.

Other pickers are being imported here from Oklahoma and Texas. Until recently little cotton was gathered because of excessive heat. Picking, however, is now well under way and the yield promises to be good.

Pictures of Chickens to Be Displayed at Webster Groves.

Webster Groves is to have a poultry show in connection with the Village Fair to be held next Friday and Saturday. There will be a variety of prizes.

Quisenberry will have the State Experiment Station exhibit of models and pictures, and will give demonstrations to suburbanites who prefer home-grown eggs and fried chicken. On Saturday night he will deliver an illustrated lecture on the poultry industry all over the United States and in Missouri especially, using the two reels of motion pictures recently made for the State Poultry Board.

MONUMENT TO JAHN UNVEILED IN PARK; THOUSANDS ATTEND

Cheers Mingle With Music of Band as Miss Marie Stifel Uncovers Statue.

The acclamations of thousands of voices, the playing of the German and American national airs, and the detonations of a 25-gun salte greeted the unveiling of a monument to Friedrich Ludwig Jahn, the father of sytematic physical education, in Forest Park, at 3:45 p. m. yesterday. Turners of this city and representatives of turner societies throughout the country witnessed the unveiling.

The parade to the monument formed at Lindell boulevard and King's highway and at 2:30 p. m. moved through the park toward the monument. Four thousand marchers were in line, including a thousand students from the five high schools and members of the various turner societies of the city. Marching past the monument, they formed in a circle about it. Then at a given signal, little Miss Marie Stifel pulled a cord uncovering the monument and revealing the majestic statue of Friedrich Jahn.

Stifel Delivers Address.

Otto F. Stifel, her father, delivered the presentation speech, and said that the monument should serve as an inspiration to the younger generation to develop robust constitutions and become healthy citizens, capable of performing their duties to the State.

Mayor Kiel was given an enthusiastic reception. He eulogized Jahn.

"This monument," he said, "will teach the same thought that Jahn taught a hundred years ago, with this difference, that Jahn taught directly that the health of citizens should be preserved in order to save the country, while this country is fighting to preserve the health of its citizens. St. Louis is indebted to Jahn to as great an extent as his own town is."

The United Singers of St. Louis, under the leadership of Hugo Anscheutz, drew a hearty response.

Theodore Stempfel, president of the North American Gymnastic Union, emphasized the spirit of the day in an address.

Inspired Spirit of Liberty.

"Jahn's idea to make the youth of the land, by systematic physical training, 'arms-bearing and truth-bearing,' has taken root in all civilized countries," he said. "The spirit of liberty which inspired Jahn and his followers, after the battle of Jena, to action, is still embodied in the North American Turnerbund."

Adolph Timm, national secretary of the National German-American Alliance, paid homage to Jahn in his speech. Other speakers were J. S. Collins, Assistant Superintendent of Public Schools, and Otto Kallmeyer, president of the St Louis District of the North American Gymnastic Union.

The Jahn monument was built by Robert Cauer of Kreuznach, Germany and cost $14,000. The city has promised to build a boulevard around the monument.

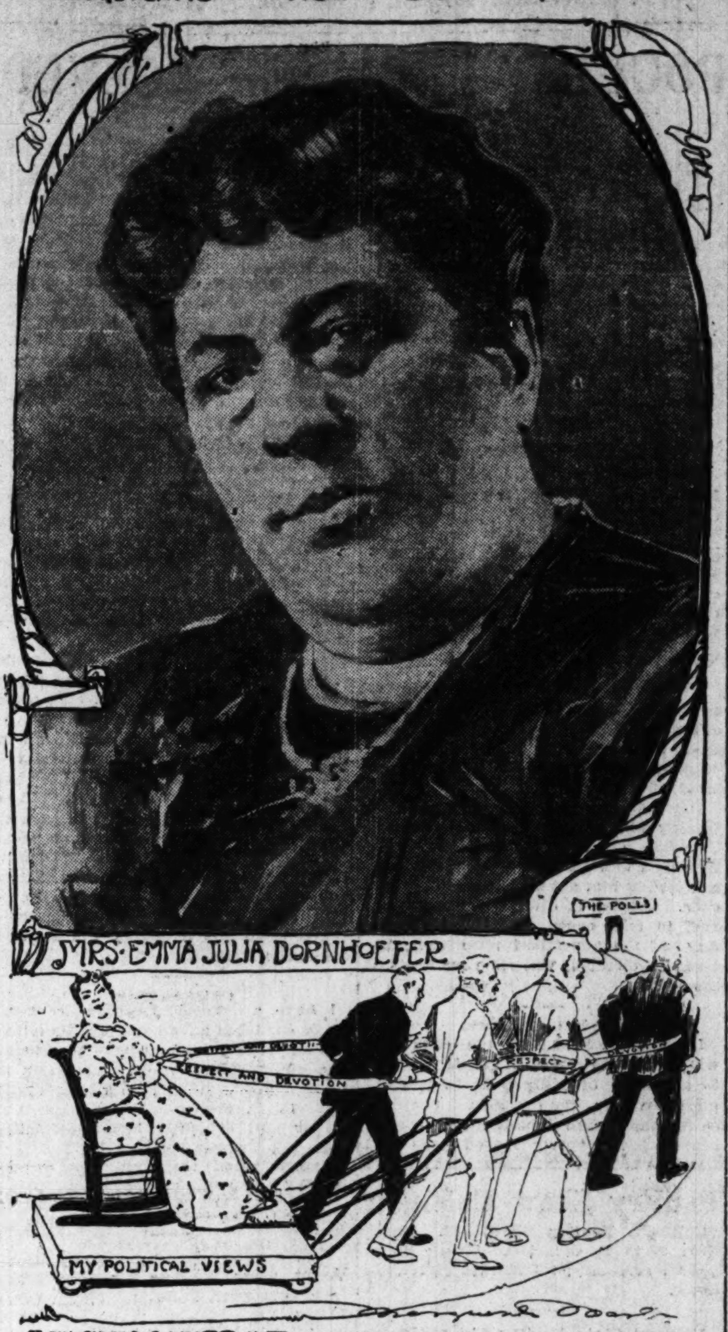
Most German-American Women Cling to Ideal of Church, Children, Kitchen, Says Leader

Mrs. Dornhoefner Explains Their Suffrage Views

President of Woman's Society of German-American Alliance Tells Marguerite Martyn There Is Civic and Public Work That Can Be Done Without Voting.

By Marguerite Martyn



"WHY SHOULD I WANT TO VOTE WHEN I HAVE THREE SONS AND A HUSBAND WHO GO TO THE POLLS AND VOTE AS I WANT THEM TO?"

THROUGH their president and spokesman, Mrs. Emma Julia Dornhoefner, the impression went abroad during the recent convention here that the Woman's Society of the National German-American Alliance, is opposed to equal suffrage.

Considering Tammany's advanced position in movements for larger religious and political freedom, such an attitude on the part of a presumably Progressive body of 30,000 German women, was puzzling. So I went down to 7310 Michigan avenue, where Mrs. Dornhoefner, who resides in New York, was visiting the family of Dr. E. Richter.

"I did not say our society takes a stand opposed to suffrage. On the contrary, we are careful to state that as an organization we are neutral upon that subject.

"There are many suffragists among us, although I do believe the majority of our women, in fostering the ideal woman in the Fatherland—church, children, kitchen—shirk from entering, don't want to seem interested in anything else.

"What I did say in my speech before the alliance was that I personally was opposed to suffrage."

Mrs. Dornhoefner Is Impressive and Forceful.

IT is readily understood when one meets Mrs. Dornhoefner face to face how her own opinions might dominate the observer, submerge the views of all the other women behind her in a society of which she is head. She is a most impressive, not to say imposing-looking, woman. And she is strong of voice and forceful of expression. She is so large that she did not attempt to rise from a close-fitting arm chair while I was in her presence.

Her head and shoulders are massive and I could imagine the impression she must make as a woman orator.

Explains Her Position.

"I always take pains to explain that I am not a suffragist because it is my duty to get new members for the woman's society," continued Mrs Dornhoefner. "If I don't explain my position on that matter the men hang back suspicious that I am going to take our society into a suffrage organization.

"When I do explain I am not a suffragist, that I am very violently opposed to both suffrage and prohibition, then the men come forward and say, 'You can have our wives for members.'

"There are 2,060,000 German men in their alliance to be appealed to in that way and I have raised the membership of the woman's society from 400 members in 1908 to 30,000 members now, so you see the success of my arguments.

"Of course, then your political stand is justified," I agreed. "You cannot afford to take any chances. But isn't it true that the German women, like German husbands, are opposed to women in government?" I asked.

Suffrage Movement Is Growing in Fatherland.

"THE German women in this country are as a rule descendents of another generation of German women, the housefrau with no other thought than her children and kitchen and church. But I have been back to the Fatherland several times in recent years and I am surprised more and more at how much the suffrage movement is growing there. They have a much stronger organization there than here. The Empress herself is in favor of woman suffrage. My good friends there tried hard to convert me. Upon my last visit I went with 20 other women who had won the trip in a popularity contest conducted by a New York German newspaper. I received 1,000,000 votes. I had to do most of the speech making for the party and in Berlin the lady highest in the suffrage organization and closest to the Empress, told me I would be a valued speaker for this cause if I would join them.

"And in New York some of my nearest associates are suffragists. I do a great deal of philanthropic work and many of the women on committees with me are suffragists."

"You do not find these women neglectful of their kitchen, children and church?" I inquired.

"Oh, no; no, indeed. I am not at all a fanatic in favor of the home-keeping women.

Opposed to Women Being Household Drudges.

"I ALWAYS tell my women members we are intended for something more than household drudgery. We do a great deal of civic and public work in our society.

"We were instrumental in restraining the movement to take the German teaching out of the public schools in New York; and that was quite an achievement in itself."

"Don't you think you would find your philanthropic work much simpler if you had the power of voting and putting the right men in office?"

"I have a husband and three sons to do that for me," said Mrs. Dorndorfer. "Voting myself would mean opposing my husband many times at the polls. Having their respect, I have always controlled their votes with my influence. I would forfeit that respect if I went out to the polls myself.

"My married son, who comes to see me every Saturday, was very late in arriving one Saturday last spring. It was the day of the big suffrage parade in New York. He had stopped to watch it from beginning to end. Then he came to me and said: 'Mother, I am so glad my mother was not marching in that crowd.'

"You see," added Mrs. Dorndorfer, "a man may like to watch other women do the things he would not have his mother and sister do.

"I do not worry about voting, so long as I have three sons and a husband to do my voting for me."

STATEMENT AS TO CANAL POLICY "UNAUTHORIZED"

White House Does Not Discuss Further Report of Plan to Repeal Toll Exemption.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Reports published in London that President Wilson soon would ask Congress to repeal the exemption of American shipping from tolls in the Panama Canal, brought from the White House today the brief statement that any announcement of the administration's policy on that subject at this time was unauthorized. Officials declined to amplify that statement.

In other administration quarters, however, the belief was expressed that later such a repeal would be recommended to Congress, but those who spoke disclaimed any official knowledge of President Wilson's intention.

KANSAS CITY CLOSES ALL DISORDERLY HOUSES

400 Women Made Homeless, Reject Offers of Employment by Welfare Officials.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 11.—As the result of the enforcement today of an order of the Board of Police Commissioners that every disorderly house be closed, 400 women were turned into the street and the doors of nearly a hundred resorts were closed.

Most of the women made homeless have, according to the police, left the city, many for St. Joseph, Mo., others to Phoenix, Ariz., or other Western cities. It was said a number of the women had moved into flats in suburban residence districts here. Representatives of the Board of Public Welfare, which has undertaken the task of providing homes or employment for the dispossessed women, spent the day in the district proffering aid which in most instances was declined.

WORKCAR SPLITS A SWITCH, MAN IS KILLED, 4 HURT

Car Whirls Upside Down at Delmar and Euclid, Burying Workmen Under It.

One man was killed, another was injured so severely that his physicians say he will die and three others were hurt when a work car, running swiftly west on the Delmar line, split the switch at Euclid avenue at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. By the split the switch phrase street car men mean that the front trucks continued west on Delmar avenue, while the rear wheels ran south on the Taylor line tracks.

The heavy car whirled upside down, burying beneath it the men who were riding on it.

Gaetarlo Tarlo Sparicio, 30 years old, 914 North Eighteenth street, died at 9 o'clock at the city hospital, after his right leg, which was crushed, was amputated at the knee. He suffered internal injuries also.

Vincenzo Ricutio, 32 years old, 721 Wash street; three ribs broken and chest crushed; will die.

The others injured are:

Michael Maffi, 26, 1413 Biddle street, foot and leg crushed.

John Torey, 49, 731 Franklin avenue, both legs broken.

James Nuccio, 30, 831 North Eighth street; contused back.

Maffi's injured leg was amputated at the knee at the Deaconess Hospital, where Ricutio also is a patient. Torey and Nuccio were sent to the city hospital.

In Maffi's pockets was found $136; in Torey's, $85, and in Muccio's, $65.

The accident tied up traffic on the Delmar and Taylor lines nearly an hour.

UNIDENTIFIED MAN DIES

Benker, Mo., Mayor Asks Post-Dispatch to Find Relatives.

Mayor J. B. Gordon of Benker, Mo., has written to the Post-Dispatch in an effort to find relatives of a man whose name is believed to be Harges or Hartis, who was found dead at that place Sept 17.

The man wore blue serge pants, a blue-gray hat, No. 8 patent leather shoes, with cloth tops, had light brown hair, two gold teeth in upper jaw, was 5 feet 8 inches in height, wore a gold ring, had a bunch of keys, and had in his pocket a $20 gold piece, $2 in currency and small change.

Cuts Himself in Throat; Saved.

Goddard Redgrove, 52 years old, tried to commit suicide last night by cutting his throat with a pocketknife, in a room at 402 South Third street. Rudolph Stofel, proprietor of the place, took the knife away from him before he could seriously injure himself. He was taken to the city hospital. He would give no reason for wishing to kill himself.

Fat Is Ridiculous

Overfat men and women, mortified and humiliated by the publicity of conspicuous rolls and billows of fat, are gradually learning that through the discovery of an eminent physician the burden of overfatness is taken from them, leaving the figure attractively proportioned, the flesh firm, the skin smooth and the general health vastly improved, without dieting, exercise or resulting wrinkles or flabbiness. There is no equal and no substitute for the famous Marmola Prescription, but there is a new and more convenient form—a tablet form of this safe fat remover. Marmola Prescription Tablets contain the same harmless, effective ingredients as the original prescription that has enabled so many thousands of uncomfortable men and women to reduce their weight evenly and steadily at the rate of a pound or more a day. An exceptionally large case of these Marmola Prescription Tablets is sold by all druggists at 75c or sent you direct by the Marmola Co., Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., on receipt of price.—ADV.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

BANKERS' FIGHT ON THE CURRENCY BILL IS NOT LIKED BY WALL STREET

Prices Show Rather Wide Declines on the Week's Speculation.

LONDON TRADE MIXED

Continued Demands Made on Capital Make Foreign Investors Cautious.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review today, says:

"The virtually unanimous adoption by the 'Bankers' Convention of the resolutions calling for changes in the Currency and Banking bill, create a peculiar situation.

"Whether the requested amendments are to be regarded as indispensable or not, in the interest of a successful banking system, the co-operation of the national banks in the organizing of the system is indispensable.

"The most perfect plan of organization in the world would fail if the banks were conceivably to refuse to join it, and this for the simple reasons that the new plan would not begin work at all unless its capital were subscribed, and that subscriptions, by the terms of the bill, are to be received only from national banks.

"Since national banks cannot be organized over night, and since the accumulation of capital and deposits sufficient to help in forming the regional central banks are a process of years, last Wednesday's action, by the delegates of so large a part of the country's banking institutions, was a matter for very practical consideration.

"But on the other hand, the banks have abundant reason not to press such an advantage unduly far. In the first place, they could hardly expect to hold in line the constituency which voted for the Boston resolutions, if the controversy came to an outright breach between the banks and the Government.

Legislation Is Wanted.

"It is a well-known fact that the great body of banking institutions in this country wants legislation of this character, and would be willing to make considerable sacrifices to obtain it.

"It is probably true also, that the majority of such institutions consider the pending bill in its main provisions (outside of the points specifically objected to in the Convention's vote) to be as good as the Aldrich bill, if not better. And, even if there were not to be a break in the present line of opposition the bankers are well aware that the establishment of some system of the sort was the one sure way to head off the Money Trust agitation, whose clamorous voices have been quieted with sufficient difficulty, in this session of Congress, by the urgent plea that the success of the new banking plan must not be jeopardized by anything of the sort.

"The conclusion to which all this leads, is that both parties to the present controversy have strong reasons for reaching as amicable a settlement of their differences as is possible.

"Each party is in some respect to blame for the present more or less tense situation.

"The Washington authorities have been needlessly dictatorial in their statements of purpose, and unwarrantably free in imputing sinister motives to people who disagreed with them on the banking plan, and who may have done so wholly because of their economic convictions.

Bankers Are Unfair.

"The bankers on the other hand, have been extremely unfair to the new bill and its authors, in their stubborn refusal to give recognition to certain incontestable merits in it.

"The altogether admirable provision to ensure prompt redemption of the proposed new notes—an innovation of this bill, for instance—was incorporated by the Chicago Bankers' Conference in the text of their substitute for the general note issue section, but neither in the Chicago report nor in the Boston resolutions was there recognition of the work of the House Committee on incorporating such a provision with the bill.

"These are possibly minor considerations, but they are of the sort which embitter a controversy and which, in public matters, lead to unhappy results.

"Such results can be avoided in the present case by a spirit of mutual compromise on details, even though the compromise stops short of conceding principle.

"As a matter of fact many of the differences between the Government and the Bankers' Convention have to do with details, some have to do with principles of banking machinery, while two only have to do with broad general principles of public policy.

"Those two are the question of exclusive political membership in a national board, with sweeping and unrestricted powers, and the question of styling the note circulation issues of the United States Government or issues of the banks.

"The first may be approached either with a view to giving larger representation on the national board to the banking constituency, or with a view to restricting the powers of that board through an advisory council with larger powers than are now proposed for such a body.

"It is difficult to say what is feasible in the matter of the section regarding notes, which, with all its exceptional merits, was bedeviled from the start by someone who tried the old expedient of American legislation on financial subjects, of using language which, without establishing fiat money, would impress a shallow-minded fiat money man as a concession to his doctrine.

"The stock market closed the week showing declines of 3 to 7 points from last Saturday's finals. Union Pacific lead the decline, on official denials of an early 'melon' to stockholders."

DEMAND FOR MONEY URGENT IN LONDON

New Stock and Bond Issues Absorb Nearly All the Offerings.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—The most unfavorable feature of the present situation, from our own immediate point of view, lies in the fact that loans running into millions sterling are still competed for by hungry smaller financial houses.

So long as applicants can get their loans underwritten, they naturally go on with their flotations. Yet the underwriters are having to keep from 70 to 90 per cent of such issues, and are, therefore, compelled to sacrifice other stocks to pay for the new issues. These troubles coincide with a disturbed position in France.

There is more money awaiting investment there than here, but confidence is still checked by continuance of trouble in the Balkans, and French bids for gold in other markets are urgent. Then too, a severe economic crisis in Brazil is a threatening possibility and the continued strain in Mexico naturally adds to the complications.

Many New Stock Issues.

Our investing public, which is increasingly intelligent in its views, perfectly realizes the position, and withdraws support; hence, while the Stock Exchange position is still described as sound, in the sense that no unwieldy speculative account exists, it is weak because of the difficulty of unloading securities easily.

The problem is, whether the situation will result in some sort of crisis, or whether it will be rectified through the ordinary machinery of drastic liquidation, with reaction in trade and return to national and personal economy and retrenchment, and ultimate revival of interest in sound investment stocks. The prevailent great financial caution favors the latter outcome.

During the next six months, however, foreign borrowing must necessarily continue for the financing of the Balkan war and other necessities.

The Bank of England will avoid a 6 per cent rate if possible, but the fact that France and Russia continue to buy bar gold, though aware of the danger of a 6 per cent bank rate here, is suggestive regarding the continent's general position.

In this rather unpleasant position there is nothing mysterious at any rate, all the cards are on the table. But the particular reason for the atmosphere of depression lies mainly in the number and complexity of factors operating—among them the continued depreciation of Consols, and of other securities which have formed the basis of extensive credit engagements.

Capital Placed Outside.

This, and the great number of new foreign loan applications, are more or less linked together, for the reason that, at a time when such loan creations would in any case have been large, English capital, partly because of political reasons, has been driven from sound home securities into foreign ventures.

Thus the main ingredient in the present awkward situation is the deadlock in the market for new loan issues.

High finance has rigidly shut down on all unnecessary undertakings of the kind, but it is impossible to stop many of the proposed flotations, because the money is imperatively needed by the issues to meet maturing short-term obligations.

SENTIMENT TURNS TO MUCH LARGER YIELD OF COTTON

Talk Throughout Trading Centers at Present Is of a 15,000,000-Bale Crop.

Sentiment seems to have changed in the cotton market and prices are on the downturn. Crop estimates are becoming larger and estimates of a crop of 14,500,000 to 15,000,000 of bales are shouted now, where they were whispered a week ago. The effect is felt in the price. The general opinion is that the frost date will determine whether the crop is of moderate size or a large one, probably second only to the "big crop."

There remain some very persistent bulls. These men say that this general increase in crop estimates will not affect the price of cotton adversely for any great length of time, as the highest estimate promises no more than enough to satisfy the world's need for American cotton and that this need will be rather augmented than decreased by enlarged crop estimates because manufacturers will not exercise so much caution in making their forward sales.

Reconciled to Tariff.

The textile trade seems to be reconciled to the new tariff schedule, at least to the point of admitting that bankruptcy proceedings will not be necessary for a little while and, according to their statements, that a few measures of mill economy probably will overcome any loss of protection.

Domestic business is very good and jobbers and wholesalers find that their stocks do not accumulate. The great difficulty seems to be in keeping stocked up, and there is no difficulty in getting rid of goods at remunerative prices. Spinners, too, find business good, although they have made large advances in price.

Export trade shows some signs of a reawakening, but is somewhat hampered by the continual upward readjustment of prices. Spinners in this country have not been eager buyers of cotton, but the demand from abroad has been good. Exports so far this season are 150,000 bales more than for the same period last season.

The movement to Savannah is surprisingly large, more than might be expected from the small ginning returns from that section as reported by the Census Bureau. Receipts at the port of Savannah for the season to Oct. 3 were 349,413 bales, compared with 191,856 bales last season; at Charleston, 133,080 bales, compared with 54,009 last season; Brunswick, 66,200, compared with 44,250 last season; Mobile, 49,977 bales, compared with 26,425 last season.

In the interior markets receipts are under last season's receipts in about the same proportion that port receipts are larger. Heavy rains and consequent bad roads have affected receipts at the smaller interior towns, as well as interfered with picking and hauling cotton to the gins.

The weather has improved generally and the map indicates a return to fair weather, but in some localities heavy rains have fallen in the past few days. The Charleston district has been in the grip of a storm that bids fair to turn into a hurricane for a time, the rainfall there being very heavy, and fear is that the storm will work inland and do much damage to the open cotton.

The spot markets have enjoyed a very good demand where cotton has moved in sufficient volume to attract buyers. Prices up to the last few days have been steady at the highest figures of the year, but the demand has fallen off sharply, as buyers have been unwilling to make offers in the face of the declining market. Apparently cotton has been overbought. There have been too many outsiders buying for speculation and the penalty is being exacted of the price. There is a great quantity of low grade cotton that is slow to move and this hangs over the market depressingly. Until spinners begin to experience difficulty in obtaining the better grades the low grades will not be taken except at considerable discount.

CATTLE RECEIPTS MODERATE AND THE PRICES IRREGULAR

Best Steers Steady, Medium Grade Lower, but Heifers and Cows Are Strong.

Receipts National Stock Yards.

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	25,000	34,250	41,803
Hogs	40,000	48,884	48,485
Sheep	14,000	18,679	22,974
Horses and mules	3,500	4,819	3,126

Receipts during the past week were very moderate. Beef steers, however, made up a good proportion of each day's aggregate and, with the exception of the opening day, the supply of beeves was generous. One of the lightest of Monday runs of steers arrived to open the week, less than a dozen loads being received and all of these were on the medium grade order. However, as the week wore on the supply became more generous and prime beeves made up a good part of the week's supply. Yearlings were favorites with the packers at all stages and a load of these reached $9.40, the week's top. Two loads of weighty steers on the prime order brought $9@9.25, respectively. Prime steers held a steady basis of prices all week, but medium to good grades were about 10@15c lower late in the week, an early advance being lost as the week aged.

The supply of butcher cattle was of liberal proportions all week. Heifers enjoyed a much better trade than they did the preceding period and a stronger demand came from the packers. The showing ran mostly to medium grade heifers, as there were few choice and no prime ones on sale. Market was firm and active each day and prices anywhere from 15@25c higher than the previous week. Bulk of the heifers sold in a range of $6.75@7.75 at all stages of the week.

Cows Are Higher.

The supply of cows was liberal but with a strong demand from the packers advanced 15@25c. Canners and cutters showed little change. A few good cows sold as high as $7@7.25 and bulk of the better grades went at $6.25@7, medium to good kinds at $5.25@6, cutters at $4.75@5.25, and canners generally at $4.35@4.65.

Bulls were in rather moderate showing and a strong to a dime higher market moved the bulk.

Vealers opened steady, but closed 25@50c higher, with the prime kinds hitting a summit of $11.50.

There was a rather quiet demand for stockers and feeders all week, but the supply was moderate and the market firm each day. Feeders sold at $6.75@7.15, stockers mostly at $5.75@6.60.

Quarantine receipts were moderate and bulk of the showing came from canner territory. There was only a moderate supply of steers on sale and all of these were contributed by Oklahoma. The market opened on a strong basis but later in the week packers eased up and as order buyers were only indifferent purchasers, the close was dull and weak, with a 10@15c decline moving the bulk. Oklahoma grassers sold as high as $7 with the bulk clearing at $6.35@6.80

Mississippi, Arkansas, Alabama, Louisiana and Florida contributed a good share of cattle. There was a strong demand for grown canners all week and prices were generally 10@15c higher. Bulk cleared in a range of $4.40@4.85. Yearlings and heretics were generally unchanged.

Hogs Lose Heavily.

The supply of hogs was very small each day and the total for the week is but about half as large as it should be. Although the runs were small all week the market was on a lower basis and reached the lowest point it has been on for several weeks. All weights suffered heavily but the pigs and lights lost more than the heavier hogs. Plain mixed and heavy hogs were hit pretty hard.

At the outset of the week, which was the highest part, the top was $8.85 and the bulk sold at $8.50@8.75 but later the top was down to $8.45 and the bulk at $8.20@8.40 with the decline in the general trade. The middle and latter part of the week lots of good packing hogs sold at $8.20@8.40 and hogs above $8.40 were strictly good and went to the shippers and butchers as a rule.

On account of the small order demand, the pigs and lights suffered as towards the end of the week good lights were going at $8.25@8.40, fair grades $7.75@8.10, best grade of pigs weighing less than 165 lbs. $7.35@7.85, fair to medium grades $6.50@7.25 and the common ones $4.50@6.00. Packers fought the market hard all week.

Sheep Quarter Higher.

A small supply of sheep and lambs was received each day, as the total for the week figures only around 13,000 head, which is not as many as has been received in the past in a single day. At the opening of the week prices advanced 25c on both sheep and lambs, but later in the week the advance on lambs was lost, but sheep sold at the higher prices until the close of the week.

At the high time the best lambs sold at $7.35@7.60, but later the top was but $7.25 and a good grade of killing lambs went at $7@7.20, fair to medium offerings $6.35@6.85 and the culls and other poor grades $5@6.25. It was an uneven market for lambs most of the week. City butchers were willing to give good prices, but the packers were not inclined to fight very much for them.

Most of the sheep that went to the slaughterers brought $4.50, which is 25c better than they sold week before last, or, for that matter, it has been several weeks since they sold on that basis. Others went at $4.25@4.40, good stockers and choppers brought $3.25@3.65, plain stockers $2.50@3.15, old cull sheep and canners $2@2.40 and bucks $3.25. There was no change in bucks.

There was a liberal supply of horse auction material on hand and buyers were plentiful. The East and the South furnished a good supply of purchasers and they were active and they took hold of the desirable kinds and paid the good prices for them. The Southern states furnished the largest supply of buyers. The Eastern buyers found a good supply of desirable material from which to pick. Good big work horses with quality were good sellers and sold at good prices. Good chunks were in demand and were on a satisfactory basis. Good quality drafters were included among the good sellers and all went at prices that were capable of making the shippers money.

There was a good mule trade and all classes of good quality animals sold at good prices. Big mules with quality were good sellers, and miners with good bone and quality were included among those that were in good demand. Cotton mules were the best sellers all the way through and these went at the right prices.

Without exception, the financial institutions that are making the greatest progress are the ones which advertise. This is emphatically true, locally as well as nationally. Traders Monday talked the bearish effect of the tariff bill and sold all grains. The liquidation was rather violent at times and represented weakly margined holdings from tired longs and short sellers.

Statistical news was all bearish and the weather was fine for late pastures and light stock feeding.

A rather severe break in the stock market called attention to the uncertainties of the business outlook under the new tariff schedules. Later in the week the market was irregular, but showed only slight rallying power.

At the moment there is an uncertain feeling in all markets. Grains, cotton, securities and provisions all reflect selling.

This has often happened in years when business depression was not talked of and feared, but it receives more attention now, owing to the present administration being Democratic, and the fact that a panic developed the last time the same party was in power.

Until this uneasiness is dissipated there seems little likelihood of a material advance in grain prices, especially with corn selling 20c higher than a year ago and the wheat trade facing not only the largest domestic crop on record, but a record-breaking world's yield as well.

Best traders still assert that the stock market is the cue to the situation, as a big break there would foreshadow less active business generally, and commodity prices seldom advance during times of industrial or financial stress.

The acreage sown to wheat in Argentine this year is officially placed at 16,364,000 acres, against 17,095,000 acres last year. The acreage sown to oats is placed at 3,090,000 acres, against 2,945,000 acres last year.

Wheat Crop Is Large.

The Orange Judd Farmer's report for Oct. 1, based upon threshing returns, makes a final definite estimate of 524,149,000 bu, or 17.1 per acre for winter wheat, and 257,760,000 bu, or 13.9 bu per acre for spring wheat, a total wheat crop of 781,909,000 bu, against 741,856,000 bu last year. General reports indicate a relatively late seeding of the new crop, but with reasonably favorable soil the weather conditions and the probability of an increased acreage. Final threshing returns for oats show a yield of 28.6 bu and a total crop of 1,079,000,000 bu.

The Ohio report makes corn prospect, compared with normal yield, 83, against 96 a year ago. Wheat yield per acre 17 bu, against 10 a year ago. Quality 96, against 76 last year. Crop 27,250,000 bu. Ten per cent of 1912 crop still in farmers' hands. Oats crop 45,000,000 bu; quality 90, last year 92.

Michigan report makes October corn yield 32 bu, against 31 a year ago; oats yield, 32 bu. Wheat acreage sown, 98 per cent of last year; rye, 98. Farmers marketed 284,000 bu wheat in September, against 750,000 a year ago.

Bradstreet's detailed report showed: Wheat—United States and east of Rockies, increase 2,826,000 bu; United States and west of Rockies, increase 447,000; Canadian, increase 8,344,000; United States and Canada, increase 11,617,000; afloat and in Europe, increase 3,400,000; Total, increase 15,017,000. Corn, increase 729,000; oats, increase 1,137,000.

An increase in the European wheat visible, brought the total up to 74,864,000 bu, against 71,408,000 last week and 77,900,000 bu last year.

Foreign Crops Good.

The Liverpool Weekly Review said:

"Dullness has characterized the trading during the week, with price changes small. Prices for reds are 6d per quarter lower, while whites hold unchanged. Continental markets are very irregular and tending higher. Striking features, undoubtedly, are the big Canadian and Russian offers and shipments. Against these continued good purchases by the Continent and ex-Europe, shipments reported for France and Mediterranean countries Tuesday were roundly 4,000,000 bu, leaving nothing burdensome for other Continental countries.

"It is expected that shipments will continue heavy as the movement in the United States, Canada and Russia is now in full swing. But should France and the Mediterranean countries continue to purchase with any particular freedom, as during the past, markets will not be overburdened with supplies, and certainly the United Kingdom now is not getting its full supply, but the heavy weekly totals will undoubtedly exert a weakening influence on values, unless requirements prove larger than hitherto reckoned.

"The outlook in Argentine has improved; India still drouthy, and Pacific Coast Crop is claimed to be decidedly smaller than officially estimated, while Danubian crop is not improved, with the movement very slow, and it is thought that the bulk of the surplus of this country is being reserved until spring."

Domestic wheat visible increased 2,0[illegible]000 bu for the week. Corn increased [illegible]000 bu. Oats decreased 630,000 [illegible]. Total visible supply grain:

the Glass bill (new currency) becomes a national law it will enable banks to obtain an issue of bank notes on the security of discounts, acceptances and all forms of commercial credit. In this event, $1 of [illegible] money will equal $3 of credit. This method is proposed as a plan to release a vast amount of money now hoarded in vaults, and, therefore, will bring to brokers a large investment clientele heretofore unknown. While this currency bill is pending passage at Washington there is no better time for St. Louis brokers to advertise stock and bond bargains, and there is no better medium than the Post-Dispatch, the one newspaper in every home—the only newspaper in many homes.

PAYS $20 BRIBE TO PROSECUTOR'S AGENT; ARRESTED

Slot Machine Operator Held After Handing Money to Reporter, Acting for Webb.

WITNESSES UNDER COUCH

John Peters Jr. Sought Immunity From Gambling Prosecution.

John Peters Jr., proprietor of Cahokia Budweiser Park, five miles south of East St. Louis, was arrested yesterday afternoon in the office of State's Attorney Charles Webb in East St. Louis on a charge of attempting to bribe Webb. The arrest was made a few minutes after Peters, in the hearing of two hidden witnesses, had paid an agent of Webb $20 to gain immunity from prosecution on a charge of operating an illegal slot machine.

After Peters, yesterday, for the third time, had approached Webb in an East St. Louis restaurant with a request that he be permitted to "fix things" in the matter of his prosecution on the slot machine charge, Webb laid a trap which would enable Peters' offer to be overheard by witnesses.

The prosecutor outlined his plan to Curtis A. Betts, a Post-Dispatch reporter, who, with Webb, received the bribery confession of Alderman Joseph A. Fansler in June, and requested that Betts act as his agent in receiving the bribe money.

Slot Machine Confiscated.

In telling of his plans, Webb stated that Peters had approached him in a restaurant at noon with a request that they "get together" and arrange a way by which Peters could escape prosecution. Peters was under bond in Justice Healy's Court on a charge of having a slot machine in his saloon. The machine was confiscated by Webb in a raid of St. Clair County resorts a week ago. Webb recalled to Betts that in his presence a few weeks ago Peters had asked Webb to "fix it in the easiest way."

It had been arranged by Webb that Peters should call at his office in the Arcade Building at 3 p. m. Meantime Webb summoned his nephew, Charles Webb, and young Webb's friend, George Schenk. Beneath a couch in an inner room of the suite of offices, the young men were hidden a few minutes before 3 o'clock, a coverlet being draped to hide them.

Peters appeared at the appointed time, and was taken into the inner room by Webb. Young Webb and Schenk afterward told of the conversation.

Webb, they said, opened it with a remark about the raid, and for several minutes the two men discussed the raid and gambling conditions in the county. Webb then asked:

"What was it you wanted to see me about, Peters?"

The witnesses said that Peters immediately replied that he did not want to have to face the court at Belleville on a charge of operating the slot machine.

"You Can Lose My Name."

"I know how it can be fixed," they report he said. "You needn't take the case before the grand jury. There are so many of the cases that you can just lose my name, and nobody will ever notice it. When the others who were raided ask me what it cost me, I will ask them what it cost them. They will tell me, and I will say that it cost me the same.

"It is a dollar for me and a dollar for you. We understand each other, all right."

Webb then asked what Peters' plan was, and Peters is said to have replied:

"I've just brought along a $20 bill for this purpose, and I'll pay that to you now, and fix everything up."

Webb urged that he ought to have $25, but Peters is said to have answered that he had only $20 in his pocket.

The minimum penalty for operating an illegal slot machine is a fine of $100.

When the conversation reached this point Webb said that personally he could not take money, but that he had an agent whom he trusted and to whom the money could be paid. Peters agreed to this.

Webb then called in Betts and retired from the room. As soon as the door was closed Peters took a $20 bill from his pocket and handed it to Betts.

"What is this for?" Betts asked.

"You know as well as I do," replied Peters. "Just give me a piece of paper, a sort of memorandum of the matter."

"Do you want a receipt?"

"Yes," replied Peters.

Receipt for $20 Given.

A receipt reading, "Received from John Peters Jr. $20 to be delivered to Charles Webb, State's Attorney," was then prepared. As Betts handed it to Peters, he said: "This is for the carrying out of the agreement you just entered into here with Mr. Webb?"

Peters replied, "Yes."

Betts then called Webb into the room, and after Betts had retired, Peters, the witnesses state, discussed with Webb a plan to enable him to conduct gambling in a saloon he expected to purchase. He is said to have told Webb that he would pay $25 or $30 every few weeks to gain immunity from prosecution.

Webb then opened the door and called Constable Edwards, who had been waiting. As Edwards entered the room, Webb lifted the covering, revealing the two witnesses.

Peters exclaimed, "Oh, my God."

"Arrest that man," Webb told the Constable and Peters was taken into custody.

When he was searched the receipt was taken from his pocket. The $20 bill was shown to Peters and he was asked if he had given it to Betts.

"I gave him one just like it," Peters replied.

Peters was arraigned before Justice Healy on a charge of attempted bribery. His bond was fixed at $200.

DRIVER'S SKULL BROKEN WHEN CAR HITS WAGON

Brewery Truck Is Overturned and Barrels of Beer Scattered About.

A four-horse brewery wagon driven by Henry Held of 1041 Graham street was struck by a south-bound Vandeventer car as it was crossing the track on McPherson avenue, yesterday morning, and overturned. Held's skull was fractured. He was taken to the city hospital, where his condition was pronounced serious.

Barrels of beer were sent rolling in all directions. The double team ran away with the front wheels, dragging Policeman Jorns who tried to stop them. He turned them into a fence. Passengers on the car were thrown from their seats and bruised.

LIVE DEER LEAPS INTO AUDIENCE AT THEATER

Animal Almost Reaches Safety Before Being Captured by Paris Stage Hands.

PARIS, Oct. 11.—The theatrical honors of the week were carried off by the Moulin Rouge by virtue of an unrehearsed effect during the performance of a new revue, when a live deer, chased by mounted hunters on the stage, became terrified and leaped over the footlights into the orchestra, where it then jumped the barrier into the first row of spectators and ran down the side of the theater toward the corridor leading to the exit.

The terror-stricken beast almost had gained its freedom before being captured by the pursuing stagehands, while the master of the hounds had to toss raw meat to the dogs to keep them from following the deer into the audience.

"Beautiful View" Graves.

MELBOURNE, Oct. 11.—An advertisement in a Sydney newspaper recommends a local cemetery as possessing "graves finely situated and commanding so beautiful a view of the bay that people who have tried them cannot be persuaded to go elsewhere."

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my dear daughter and our dear sister, Laura Froehlich (nee Richter), who departed this life Oct. 7, 1912.

Silently the shades of evening
Gather around our lonely door;
Silently they bring before us
That dear face we see no more.
One long year has passed,
Still we are grieving for you;
Happy without you we cannot be,
So we go often to your grave,
Lingering there trying to be brave;
But oh, 'tis hard to bear,
To go away and leave you there.

Sadly missed by MOTHER AND SISTERS.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear daughter, Margaret Antonett Weber, of 7435 Manchester avenue, who was suddenly called from us Oct. 11, 1912

One year has passed since you left us. Little did we think that evening when you came home from work and was sent for on an errand you would be brought back in pain and sorrow.

We miss your coming footsteps,
We miss your loving voice,
Home is not what it used to be
Since you have left us, that sad day.
You are gone, but not forgotten,
Never shall your sweet memory fade,
Sweetest thoughts shall ever linger
Around the grave where dear Margrett Antonett Weber is laid.

Sadly missed by father, mother, sisters and brothers, sweetheart and friends of Famous & Barr.

FARMS FOR SALE

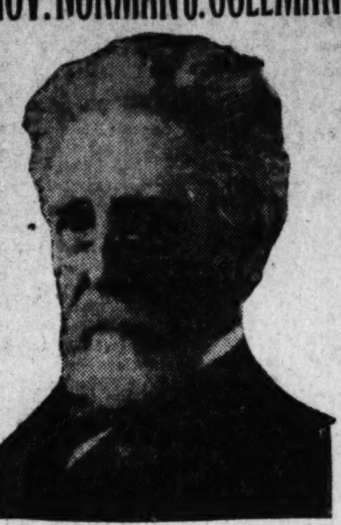
GOV. NORMAN J. COLEMAN



Spent the last 30 years of his life in building up and improving what he claimed to be the "Best Stock Farm" in the entire State of Missouri.

212 acres of splendid, rich, fertile ground, rolling, but not broken, 12 miles from St. Louis on the Olive Street and Mill Creek road, near Creve Coeur Lake, and overlooking the Missouri River, and its famous bottom lands for miles. Good house and all necessary outbuildings; family orchard of miscellaneous fruit and plenty of fine water. This is a splendid farm, situated in the richest and most picturesque part of the county, on fine roads, with good transportation. The Creve Coeur branch of the Missouri Pacific R. R. runs through the place, and Coleman station is only a short distance from the residence.

This must be sold. Parties looking for a bargain should waste no time in seeing this. For price, terms and other information, see

Is It Land You Want?

Have you an ideal homestead in your mind's eye? Do you want a combination of rich land, accessibility, glorious climate? —a place where 40 acres means a bank account; where the wind blows cool, sweet and pure; 1000 to 1200 feet above the sea level—a country of wonderfully productive land, lying at the very door of big markets—do you? Then listen to the call of the Ozarks—to the call of the rich plateau country down along the line of the Kansas City Southern Railway. Let us give you all the facts about this land that is producing a 5,000,000-a-year crop in commercial apples alone; that has 15,000 acres in peaches, where hens lay regularly when eggs are nigh—the home of $200 to $400-per-acre strawberry, raspberry and blackberry yields—a manufacturing site, whose advantages for the production of almost anything are second to none on earth. Free Ozark book—write for it—make the acquaintance of the Ozark region before you make your land purchase. Just sit right down and drop a line of inquiry to Wm. Nicholson, Img. Agt., Kansas City Southern Ry., 501 Thayer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. (c99)

GET BUSY RAISING STOCK, U. S. BUREAU ADVISES FARMERS

South and Eastern States Urged to Ward Off Meat Shortage.

PRODUCTION DECREASING

Argentina and Australia Can't Be Depended on, Bulletin States.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Shortage of meat in the United States and the way to increase the supply are discussed by experts in the Department of Agriculture in a special bulletin issued today to farmers. That there is a decided meat shortage is discussed by James M. Pickens, of the Bureau of Animal Industry, while George M. Rommel, chief of the Animal Husbandry Division, urged maintenance and increase in the meat supply by revival of beef cattle raising in the corn belt, its extension in the eastern states and increasing the protection of beef cattle and hogs in the South.

"The high cost of meat is a serious reality," says Pickens, "and it is now obvious that the rise in prices in recent years is the natural result of an actual shortage in production. The condition is reflected in the per capita consumption of meat in the United States, which is estimated to have fallen off 10 pounds in four years, or from 162 pounds in 1909 to 152 pounds in the fiscal year 1913. It is evident that the country is facing an era of short production of meat and that some constructive means must be adopted if the American appetite in this class of food is to be supplied."

Cattle Decreased 30 Per Cent.

The bulletin points out that in the last six years the number of beef cattle in the country apparently has fallen off over 30 per cent, while the population has increased.

Department estimates show that the number of beef cattle in the country on Jan. 1, 1907, was 51,566,000 and at the beginning of the present year only 36,030,000, while the number of dairy cows remains virtually stationary.

The slaughter of beef, it is set forth, has fallen off approximately 780,000,000 pounds from 1910 to 1913. Meanwhile the country's export trade has greatly fallen off and Pickens offers little hope for imports from Argentina and Australia because of their great drain by European markets. Argentina, he asserts, already [illegible] drawing on its livestock reserve.

The department makes the assertion that the farms of this country have almost unlimited possibilities for livestock production and that all the meat needed co[illegible] furnished if the farmers would [illegible] how to produce it and [illegible] market.

HAT FIRM OBTAINS 15-YEAR LEASE ON 8-STORY BUILDING

Washington Avenue Concern Gets Control of Property Worth More Than Half Million on Twelfth and Washington Avenue.

OLIVE STREET REALTY FILLED WITH ACTIVITY

Opening of Famous-Barr's New Store in Railway Exchange Building Has Given Impetus to Real Estate in This Section.

Announcements indicate that activity in realty circles is increasing in scope. Besides leases of great import, the leading agencies report as completed, or in negotiation, a worthy number of larger operations.

The transcendent feature of the week was the transaction by which the No Name Hat Co. acquired a 15-year lease of the modern eight-story building at the southwest corner of Washington avenue and Twelfth street. The Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co., which made the announcement, declined to disclose the terms of the lease.

The building, with its site, was acquired by Leo Moser, the former hotel proprietor, more than a decade ago for $500,000. The rental provided for in the lease to the No Name Hat Co., it is understood, establishes a much higher valuation of the property.

The site has a frontage on Washington avenue of 45 feet by a depth on Twelfth street of 150 feet.

The concern, which makes fur felt hats, and which is now at Washington avenue and Tenth street, will move to its new quarters about Jan. 3.

The growth of the No Name Co., which is now in its thirtieth year, only reflects that of the city.

Washington avenue, according to stories, just now is the stronghold of the downtown section of the market. As well as heavy investments, Washington avenue negotiations, it is said, involve numerous plans for larger buildings.

Eight-Story Building Assured.

While the documents in connection with it have not been signed and sealed, negotiations virtually assure the erection of an eight-story fire proof commercial building at the northeast corner of Washington avenue and Fifteenth street. Other corners mentioned as under consideration for larger improvements are the southeast corners of Fourteenth and Fifteenth street and Washington avenue. These sites are owned by the Missouri Botanical Association, A. D. Cunningham, secretary, and the King Realty Co., J. V. S. Barrett, president.

The erection at the northeast corner of Fifteenth street and Washington avenue of the new 10-story building of the Robert, Johnson & Rand Shoe Co., has established its location, as a commercial stronghold.

An important lease of Olive street property was also reported, but details were not forthcoming.

General attention has been attracted by the announcement of the special commissioner's sale, set for Thursday, Oct. 30, at which the real estate of the late Christian Peper is to be auctioned. The sale will take place at noon of the day named, in the Real Estate Exchange. Charles Cummings Collins, whose office is in the Third National Bank Building, is special commissioner, and Henry L. Sutton will be auctioneer.

This is a forced sale, made by order of court, to settle the estate. It includes the southeast corner of Twelfth and Market streets, the northeast corner of Twelfth and Walnut streets, the southwest corner of Eleventh and Market streets, the southwest and southeast corner of Sixth and Wash streets, the southwest corner of Twelfth street and Park avenue, 1422-24 Morgan street, and two unimproved residence tracts.

Hotel Project Falls Through.

A few days since, the northeast corner of Olive and Twelfth streets, 100x125, was advertised for sale in the Post-Dispatch. This would indicate that the 18-story hotel project, for this site, and the adjoining ground on the east on Olive street, had collapsed. A short time ago, at the instance of Harry Blodgett, an attorney, an ordinance providing for the vacation of the alley separating these two sites and extending from Olive to Locust streets, was passed. The project, it was reported, was to provide St. Louis quarters for the Ritz-Carleton Hotel Co., of New York.

Notwithstanding adverse reports as to its more ambitious projects, Olive street, with the advent of the Railway Exchange Building (Famous-Barr) has been infused with new life.

Several large transactions, the details of which are withheld, it is understood, were virtually concluded in the week. The heaviest, it is understood, was swung by the Rutledge & Kilpatrick Realty Co. The Mississippi Valley Trust and the Mercantile Trust companies, are both working on big things, but George Kingsland, head of the former, and C. H. McMillan, of the latter, are reticent.

Big Transaction Under Way.

A husky transaction, involving the control of a variety of holdings, is being manipulated by Richard F. Goodnow of the Goodnow Realty and Investment Co., and Charles Daly, but it has so many angles that it will probably move slowly.

Strong symptoms of the last week were the cash offers for property, according to James Dockery of John Dockery & Son. Activity for a long time, he declares, has been restricted more or less to trading. Accordingly, he says, the clink of a dollar or two is music to the ears.

Absorption of vacancies, which has given property a substantial basis, is diverting attention in this direction.

Paying a high percentage on the investment, apartments are attracting larger capital. The increasing demand for investments of this character, presages an unprecedented volume of transactions in this field in 1914.

Purchases at the Hillcrest auction are being rapidly completed, according to James Rohan, vice-president of the Title Guaranty Trust Co., which was behind this proposition.

Assignment of contracts indicate that purchase of lots in this addition were acquired either for speculation or by agents acting for clients.

A salient feature as regards Hillcrest is that the demand for this property is greater now than it was prior to the auction. The lots are now being disposed of at good profits to parties who will build or hold them as investments.

Will Build $25,000 House.

A woman who did not have the temerity to bid at the auction, was casting about on Chestnut street for 100 feet for a site for a $25,000 house. She showed a preference for the section between Skinker road and Demun avenue. This is a section adjoining Forest Park and the most attractive part of the subdivision.

All the top knots bought on Aberdeen and Arundel avenues, between the above mentioned thoroughfares, indicate that the upbuilding of these blocks will be of a higher character. The car tracks on Demun—this is a lateral or north-south thoroughfare—separating the section between Skinker and Demun from that on the west, renders it more select.

A. R. Schollmeyer, formerly president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, who had a major interest in the subdivision, is still weeping over this auction, which, as indicated from resales of the lots, was a carnival.

Rosy predictions for the future of Hillcrest were heard throughout St. Louis realty sections.

Eight New Bungalows on Magnolia.

Eight bungalows have been completed in the 6200 block on Magnolia avenue. The builder is the Jennings Investment Co., with headquarters in the Fullerton Building. Six of the bungalows have been sold.

MORTGAGE TRUST CO. TO MOVE FIRST OF YEAR

Alterations Will Be Made in Basement of New Bank of Commerce.

The Mortgage Trust Co., now at Fourth and Pine streets, will move into the basement of the new National Bank of Commerce Building, Broadway and Pine streets, as soon as the space is altered to meet the company's requirements, which will be about the first of next year.

James Stewart & Co., the builders of the National Bank of Commerce structures, have obtained a building permit to carry out the proposed alterations under plans drawn by Mauran, Russell & Crowell. The work will involve an enlargement of the windows, the erection of a large ornamental entrance about the middle of the building on the Broadway side, an entrance from the east corridor and the construction of a floor.

The Lilburn Realty Co. negotiated the lease. The Mortgage Guaranty Co., which is closely affiliated with the Mortgage Trust Co., will occupy a portion of the basement space. The safe deposit business of the Commerce Safe Deposit and Investment Co. will be taken over and operated by the Mortgage Trust Co.

The alterations will cost about $40,000.

NEWSPAPER ADS BRING SUCCESS TO REALTY FIRM

Dealer Declares That Recent Profitable Sales Were Made Through Advertising.

The Goodnow Realty and Investment Co., which in the past six months has surprised realty row on account of its rapid rise to fame in the real estate field, is now out with a statement that newspaper advertising is, in a large measure, responsible for the success attained by them.

A piece of property advertised in the daily newspapers only a few times was sold yesterday for I. S. Thurman, president of the Thurman Compressed Air Cleaning Co., to James T. Addis, by Fred W. Curl, salesman for the Goodnow agency. This sale was traced directly to newspaper advertising, according to Mr. Goodnow.

The property sold is 308 by 138 feet, between Lafayette and Geyer avenues, with a frontage of 27 feet on Jefferson avenue. The price paid for the property is withheld for the present.

Stebbins, a member of the faculty of the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons, has purchased the O'Bar Sanitarium property at Grand avenue and Palm street, and is conducting there a training school for nurses and a clinic where demonstrations are given the students of the college.

The deal was negotiated through the Flegle-Hein Realty Co. and the price paid was $45,000. The real estate company took in exchange for the property a 1460 acre ranch in Texas, 12 miles from Texarkana, which was owned by Dr. Stebbins and valued at $45,000.

EIGHT FLATS ON JUNIATA AND GUSTINE ARE SOLD

Owner Refuses to Sell Part of Property, But Soon Finds Two Different Buyers.

The Wolff-Borders Realty Co. reports the sale of eight flats at the northwest corner of Juniata and Gustine, valued at $22,000, to two different owners. The former owner, James R. Gray of San Diego, Cal., formerly clerk of the United States Circuit Court for this district, would not consider dividing the property when an offer was submitted to him for the four flats on Gustine avenue unless he was assured of the sale of the Juniata flats. Within 17 days from the time of the offer on the Gustine flats, a buyer was found for the Juniata property.

The flat on Gustine, number 3155-57-59-61, was sold to Mrs. Annie E. Carroll, a non-resident. The flat on Juniata, number 3901-03-05-07, was sold to a St. Louisan. Both purchasers bought the properties for investment. Each building contains four flats of four and five rooms, built on the bungalow style, two rooms in front and two in rear. They contain tile bath, brick fireplace, built-in book cases, china cabinets, Dutch dining room, combination fixtures, separate furnaces and all other conveniences. Each building rents for $1260 per annum.

The Wolff-Borders Realty Co. represented all of the interested parties.

The above sale disposes of all property interest that Mr. Gray had in St. Louis, the Wolff-Borders Realty Co. having sold flats at the northwest corner of Cleveland and Klemm for his account several months ago.

The Wolff-Borders Realty Co. made a loan of $6000 at 6 per cent on the Gustine avenue property, and a loan of $3600 at 5 per cent on the Juniata property.

STATE UNIVERSITY BOYS TOLD OF OBLIGATIONS

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 11.—"Freshmen of the University of Illinois have on their shoulders the responsibilities of a King," said President E. J. James of that institution. "The most contemptible cur in the world is the college man who sacrifices the money of the people of the State in not taking advantage of the opportunities he gets at the State University.

"It costs the taxpayers $300 each to pay the tuition of every youth in the State University. The amount he pays out of his own pocket is less than one-fourth of that amount. Washerwomen, widowed and hardly able to support their own children, coal miners, laborers and others in the State are helping to contribute for the education of the youths at the State University."

LOTS ON KING'S HIGHWAY SOLD FOR HOME SITES

Property on Berthold Avenue Changes Hands and Bungalows Will Be Sold.

Seven lots on King's highway, at the northwest corner of Bertholdt avenue, representing a total frontage of 235 feet, were sold by Mercantile Trust Co. during the week to Charles Hogg, the well-known builder. The property was sold for the account of the Boulevard and Park Land Co.

Mr. Hogg has been very successful in building a modified type of brick bungalow suitable for city homes, and will erect several houses of this character on the ground purchased, as he regards the location as desirable for such homes, being within a half block of Forest Park and lots are very deep, affording extra large front yards for landscape effect.

The trust company also sold eight lots in this same subdivision of Forest Lawn the past week on Lawn avenue, the first street west of King's highway, and seven new houses have already been commenced on these lots.

The high location and proximity to both boulevard and park have contributed to the popularity of this small subdivision and have been the means of having it build up so rapidly with an attractive class of homes.

The entire subdivision excepting seven lots has been closed out and the majority of the sales have been made in the last 30 days, showing an increased demand for good building sites in the more central portions of the city.

TOLMAN, JAILED USURER, A MASTER AT CHEATING LAW

Money Lender Under Sentence of Six Months, Originator of Note-Buying Idea.

D. H. Tolman, who has been sentenced to serve six months in prison for violating the New York State law against usury, is known in St. Louis as a most prominent member of a group of Eastern capitalists who are financing money-lending establishments in the large cities of the United States.

Three months ago, Tolman, who had been considered one of the largest dealers in loans to St. Louis wage-earners, was paroled from the payment of a heavy fine imposed by the United States Court in New Jersey on condition that he would sever his connection with the "loan shark" business.

A few days later his name was removed from the sign on his office door in the Houser Building here and the name "Fisher & Co." substituted. Tolman's name is still on the office safe, and the two women in charge of the office say they never have met "Fisher" and know nothing of his whereabouts except that he is supposed to live in the East.

Pretty Women an Asset.

Tolman, according to attaches of St. Louis Justice of the Peace courts, is the originator of the "note buying" system, the latest of a long series of schemes to evade the usury laws. He also is credited with having conceived the idea of installing attractive women in money lenders' offices as a valuable asset of the business.

He began business here in 1905 and since that time had financed small loans aggregating a big fortune. His business methods have varied in keeping with the enactment of laws against usury and these changes were calculated to keep him from being charged with criminal offense.

In 1911 the State Legislature passed a law invalidating the assignment of unearned wages by the makers of notes to money lenders. This was considered a serious handicap by the loan sharks, as the only security they had been receiving for money lent to wage earners was the assignment of future wages.

To Tolman is given credit for the birth of a new system to get around the 1911 statute. The method, while simple, is said to be effective to the extent that victims of usurers cannot prosecute a criminal charge against those using the system.

Borrower Indorses Note.

Under the plan, the money lender does not advance money to the maker of a note, but compels the borrower to indorse a note made payable to himself. The borrower, thereby, is not the maker of the note, and as indorser he can assign his future earnings without conflicting with the law.

If a man wishes to borrow $25 he is told by the money lender that his own note will not be accepted as security, but that a note bearing his endorsement will be taken. The note, however, must be for $40, the clerk is told, the $15 surplus to be deducted by the money lender as his commission for negotiating the loan and in lieu of interest.

The borrower is told that no investigation will be made of the maker of the note so long as it bears his endorsement. His credit is the only consideration because he is the one with whom the lender is dealing.

Accordingly, the borrower obtains a fictitious note. He can have it made out to himself or make it out himself, for that matter, just so it has the appearance of a genuine note. He can sign to it "John Smith," "Jim Jones" or any other common name, just so it calls for $40 to be paid within a certain period and is indorsed by him over to the money lender.

Under this system, the money lender becomes the purchaser of a note and can accept an assignment of wages as security because under the law the borrower is not the maker of the note. Even if the borrower were to admit that he had made a fraudulent note the money lender could not be convicted for the reason that the State would be unable to prove that he knew the paper was not genuine.

The idea of employing attractive young women to conduct his business in various cities was for the purpose of embarrassing delinquent creditors and is said to have been effective.

How to Grow Long Beautiful Hair

By a Hair Specialist.

It is not hard to stop the hair from falling out and promote its growth if the right means are used. There is no hope for the scalp where the hair roots are dead and the scalp is shiny. However, to those who have not reached this condition, immediate steps should be taken to stop it before it is too late. Here is a simple recipe which you can make at home, that will stop the hair from falling out, promote its growth and eradicate scalp eruptions and scalp humors. I know of cases where hair has grown from four to five inches in a few months after using this simple recipe: To a half pint of water add 1 oz. bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine, and apply to the hair, rubbing with the finger tips, two or three times a week. These ingredients can be obtained at any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home. This recipe not only promotes the growth of the hair but darkens streaked, faded gray hair and makes it soft and glossy."—ADV.

OUT-OF-THE-ORDINARY STORIES OF SUCCESS—No. 1

The Man Who Made a Large Fortune by Always Going Contrary to Everyone's Advice

William T. Kemper, Champion Handshaker of Kansas City, Left Farm for City Against Parents' Protest, Put Savings Into Country Store Against Counsel of Friends, Entered Grain Business Though Assured He Would Fail, and Started Bank Despite "There Are Too Many Banks Now"—Acting on Own Judgment He Succeeded in Every Enterprise and Is Now Wealthy.

WILLIAM T. KEMPER,
President of the Commerce Trust Co., Kansas City, Mo.

WILLIAM T. KEMPER succeeded in life and became the wealthy president of a bank because he always followed his own judgment and went contrary to the advice of his friends and of other successful business men.

And he gives this recipe for success to others:

"Be sure you know yourself and your limitations and possibilities; then work out your own plans for success and follow them, taking advice from no one; and have your soul always filled with sunshine."

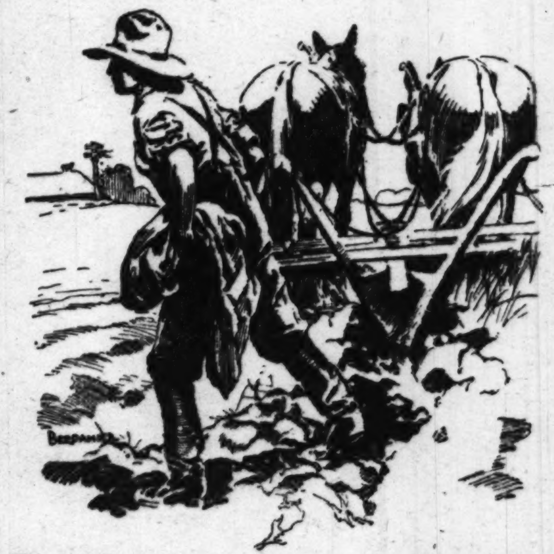
The sunshine part of the recipe is important. Kemper is the champion handshaker of Kansas City. He is known personally to more men and women in Kansas City than any other man. His chief occupation now is to be in the lobby of his bank during banking hours and give a smile, a word of good cheer and a pat on the back to several thousands of his depositors each day. Other bankers, jealous of Kemper's popularity, assert that this is all "soft sawder." But Kemper says:

"A man is handicapped in business unless he has sunshine in his soul; and it must be the real thing. If it's counterfeit he can't pass it."

Kemper's smile and handshake have added $10,000,000 in deposits in his bank in seven years. That's considerably more than a million dollars a year.

Kemper branched out for himself when he was a boy on a farm near Gallatin, Mo. He wanted to go to the city. His folks advised him to stay on the farm and refused to give permission for him to go to town. One day, when he was plowing corn, Kemper made his decision, and he did not delay to act upon it. He dropped the reins over the plowhandle and struck off by a short cut across the fields for the railway station.

The city he went to was St. Joseph. He got a job with a mercantile house, and within two years was a traveling salesman. He saved $1600 and decided to open a country store in Valley Falls, Kan.



"His relatives advised him to stay on the farm, but he ran away to the city and won his first success."

Everybody he knew advised him not to do it. They told him the day for making money at country store keeping was gone. The mail order houses had killed the business. And besides, Valley Falls was a mighty poor place for another store; it had too many already.

Kemper started his store. In seven years he had cleared $25,000 and had it in cash in the bank.

Then he decided that Valley Falls was too small for him and that he would go to Kansas City. Again his friends advised him not to do it, and as he departed from the town they prophesied that within a year he'd be back and living on his wife's farm.

In Kansas City Kemper decided to go into the grain business.

"Good heavens!" exclaimed every business man he talked with. "The grain business is overdone in Kansas City. Hundreds have gone broke in it, and hundreds more are starving in it. Leave it alone."

Kemper put all of his money into the grain commission business and within three years he was doing the largest business on the Board of Trade. He bought a big office building and changed its name to the "Kemper Building." The Democrats took him up and ran him for Mayor, but it was an off year for the Democrats and he was defeated by a few votes.

When he announced in 1907 that he was going into the banking business his friends hastened to advise him against it.

"There are twice too many banks now in Kansas City; the business is overdone; you'll go broke if you try it," they told him.

Kemper went right ahead with the organization of the Commerce Trust Co. Today it has 12,000 depositors and is one of the most successful banks in Kansas City, and Kemper is one of the rich men in that city, and one of the most popular, too.

One of Kemper's hobbies is in helping young business men to get along, if they deserve it, and in advising them against extravagance.

"One of the prime requisites of success is hard work, but a man can work his head off, and if he doesn't economize he can't succeed," he says.

One of Kemper's proteges was a young Swede carpenter who had started in the contracting business in a small way through Kemper's help and had saved $15,000. One day Kemper met him in the bank. The Swede was wearing a pink shirt and a bright red necktie.

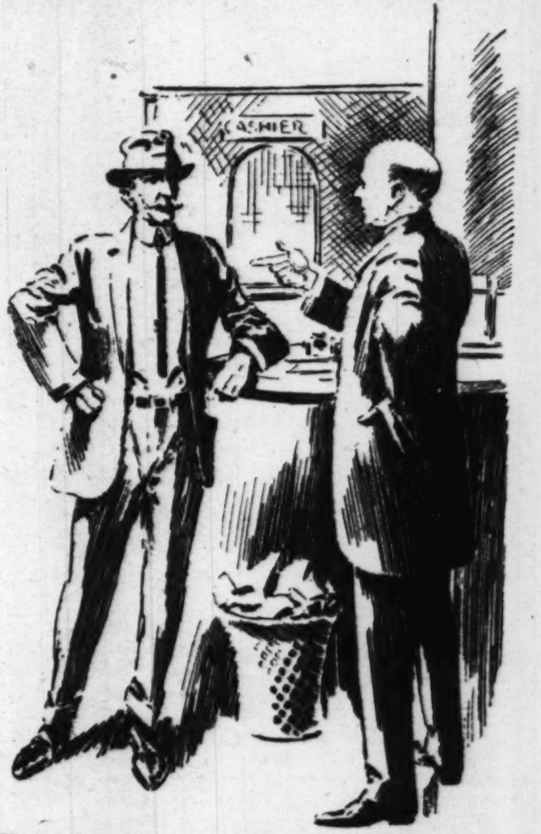
"Ole," said Kemper, "that red necktie and pink shirt will break you."

And sure enough, within a year Ole was a bankrupt.

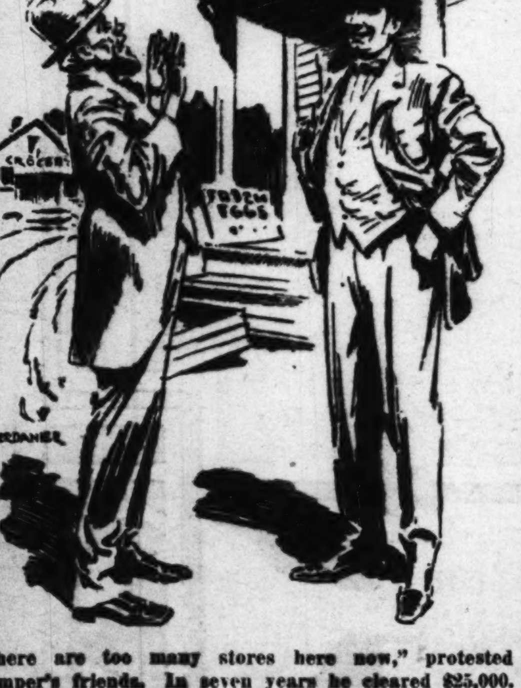
"He was one of the many thousands who can't stand prosperity," said Kemper. "When he was rising out of drudgery and poverty, overalls and a cotton shirt were good enough. When he got a few thousand dollars ahead he became extravagant, starting with fine clothes and ending with an automobile and a $10,000 house in Hyde Park. The red necktie was just a symptom. When I saw it I knew Ole was gone. There are more failures through extravagance than from any other cause. Next comes the inability of men to know their capacity. They succeed in one thing and branch out, taking on more responsibilities, and fail."

Kemper's two boys are in the University of Missouri. When they departed for that school he gave them this advice:

"Get this firmly into your heads—that the fellow you'll have to cope with in school, and afterward in business, is not the one whose father sends him all the money he wants, but the fellow who is washing dishes or waiting on table to get through."



"That red necktie will ruin you," said Kemper. In a year the Swede failed because of extravagance.



"There are too many stores here now," protested Kemper's friends. In seven years he cleared $25,000.

Stepping Stones of Neglected Advice

WHEN William T. Kemper was a boy his relatives advised him to stay on the farm. He ran away to St. Joseph, and in a few years was a traveling salesman with $1600 in the bank.

He decided to open a store in Valley Falls, Kan., although his friends told him the town had too many stores already. In seven years he cleared $25,000.

He resolved to enter the grain business in Kansas City. "Hundreds of men are starving in it," protested his friends. In three years he was doing the biggest business on the Board of Trade.

In 1907 he announced that he was going to be a banker. "There are twice too many banks in Kansas City now," objected his advisers. Today Kemper's bank has 12,000 depositors and is one of the richest institutions of the city.

Kemper's Recipe for Success

"DON'T be advised by other people. If you haven't sense enough to map out your own plans you haven't sense enough to succeed anyway, even with the best advice in the world.

"Be sure of your own limitations and capacity; then decide upon a course and follow your own judgment, regardless of what anyone says.

"When you have started, don't switch and flop about from one side to the other. Walk straight for your goal and never halt nor give up.

"Give the best that is in you to your business. Work, work, work, and then work some more. Hard work has got genius bested at all stages of the game.

"Economize. Study the art of saving. A man can work his head off and fail if he doesn't economize. Keep on economizing until your business is on such a firm footing, and your savings so large that you can afford luxuries. Then it will be time enough for a motor car, a new house and branching out into the social swim.

"Keep your soul full of sunshine always. A man is handicapped who hasn't a pleasant smile and a cheery word for all he meets. If you are sour by nature, cultivate a sweet, amiable disposition. You can say 'No' with a smille as well as with a gruff scowl, and it's easier on the other fellow, too."

Germany's Misothorium Fad.

ALL Germany is obsessed with the idea of procuring misothorium as a panacea for cancer. It is stated to have the power of emanating rays similar to but much more effective than those of radium. Its cost seems almost as great. The substance is derived from thorium. It is used in tiny portions inclosed in a silver covering, in which extremely small holes are pierced. The silver box is then placed upon the part affected with cancerous growth, and it is said slowly but effectually to remove traces of the disease.

There is hardly an important town in the country which has not voted a large sum from the public funds for the purpose of purchasing some of the costly material. Where public funds are not forthcoming, concerts, bazars, and such like means are adopted for the raising of money for the purpose.

Woman's Love Defined as F-E-A-R

By Prof. Munsterberg's Daughter

"Psychologically Correct," Says Noted Harvard Authority, of New Novel In Which Heroine Refuses to Marry Suitor Because She Can Never Be Afraid of Him—Psychology and Sociology Mingled in Unique Romance.

Miss Margarete Munsterberg, at right, taking tea with her sister, Miss Ella Munsterberg, to whom the novel is dedicated.

NOW comes Miss Margarete Munsterberg, Boston-bred, psychology-nurtured, with a new and terrible definition of love. She defines love, or at any rate the sort of feeling that draws a woman to a man as his mate, as fear. That is Miss Munsterberg's pronouncement in a psychological study of human emotions, just published in the form of a novel, her first book; and the author is a daughter of Prof. Hugo Munsterberg of Harvard, world-renowned psychologist. Prof. Munsterberg has read his daughter's book. He pronounces it "very interesting," and, what is more, "psychologically correct.' From its every pore the story drips and oozes psychology, tinctured with sociology and other ologies that breed and brew in Boston atmosphere.

Miss Munsterberg has written a love story, but it is not to be classed with the conventional tale. Being correctly psychological, it is a fear story. "Anna Borden's Career" is the title. The book is published by D. Appleton & Co.

The heroine is a young woman reared in luxury. But she has a mind of her own. She is no passive accepter of things as they are. Like many young women of her environment, she yearns for thrills such as pink teas and polite palaver fail to supply.

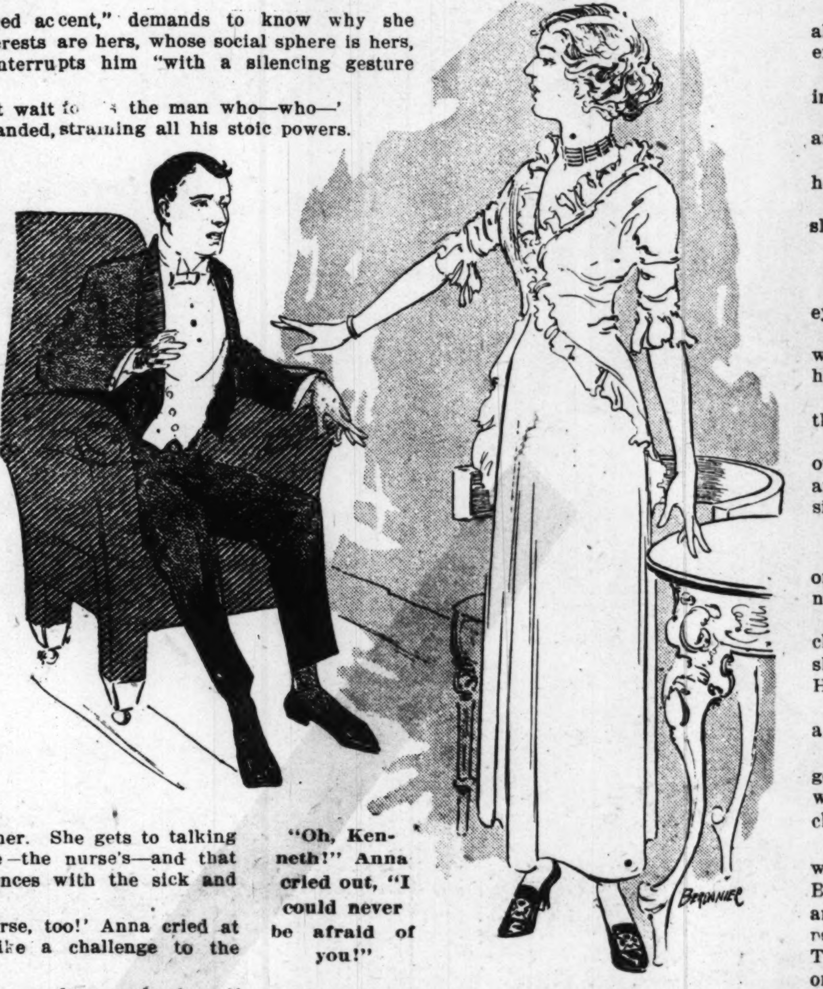
There is a young man in the diplomatic service who has before him a dazzling career. Anna admits it herself and Kenneth Holcombe makes no secret of it. He loves Anna—that is, after the conventional fashion of entertaining a feeling of affection that makes her the world's one only woman. Anna respects him, but she does not love him—that is, she has no fear of him. She has known him long and knows his nature so well that she could not hope for the development in him of any quality that would make her afraid of him.

Holcombe, "in a heavy, forced accent," demands to know why she cannot accept a man whose interests are hers, whose social sphere is hers, whose tastes are hers. She interrupts him "with a silencing gesture and a look of pity," and says:

"'But the man whom I must wait for is the man who—who—'

"'Who what?' Kenneth demanded, straining all his stoic powers.

"'Oh, Kenneth,' Anna cried out, rising impetuously and standing opposite him with a wild, adventurous light in her black eyes. 'I COULD NEVER BE AFRAID OF YOU!'"



"Oh, Kenneth!" Anna cried out, "I could never be afraid of you!"

When Kenneth's ship sails she tells him that he has been an exquisite experience to her. Kenneth, who is no psychologist, just an under-secretary with brilliant prospects and a man's old-fashioned love for a woman, tells her bitterly that she has been the ruin of his life. 'Twas ever thus in the conventional love story, and that's about the only conventional flash in the book.

Anna goes to her father's beautiful summer cottage by the sea, where she sprains her ankle. This is unintentional, but it opens up an avenue of thrill for the heroine. A trained nurse comes to attend her. She gets to talking with the nurse about her life—the nurse's—and that person tells about her experiences with the sick and maimed. Read on:

"'I want to be a trained nurse, too!' Anna cried at last, passionately, violently, like a challenge to the sea."

So she becomes a trained nurse, and persuades herself that she is a martyr when there is no other means of overcoming the loathing she feels at times for the disagreeable aspects of her duties. Waiting on the sick and making their beds grows too tiresome even for a martyr, and when an opportunity to go upon the stage presents itself Anna clutches at the opportunity. Papa Borden rages terribly, but Daughter Anna must have her thrills. Her father is no psychologist and of course cannot understand. For a time Miss Borden, as "Lily Spangle," dazzles the world across the footlights, but when the manager takes to drink and clutches at her shoulders she quits him and the stage. Though there is a man she could be afraid of, and is, he is not the man for whom she waits. That individual comes later, after Anna has taken a job in an East Side garment factory in New York at $6 a week, to study conditions amongst the poor.

Anna Borden, it appears, is a considerable challenger. When a girl who knows the life tells her she couldn't stand the work for a day, she is piqued

"'I could stand it!' she cried out in a challenge, 'and I shall stand it! I'll show you that I can! I am going to enter your factory as an unskilled worker and study the work and the life from the inside. Then I shall know how it should be bettered.'"

Now comes the man for whom she has waited. He is John Bruce, a big, uneducated, earnest State organizer for union workers. He comes to help the garment workers plan a strike. Anna hears him speak:

"Her eyes still hung on the lips of the orator, as if she were waiting for a prophecy of her own life. And it was so. Anna knew, in her delirium, that her life would pass from now on along the footsteps of this master. She had set out to help the poor and he was pointing out the way—not the winding path on which philanthropists hopped timidly from stepping stone to stepping stone, but the broad army road of the Toilers' Brotherhood."

Anna Borden tells John Bruce she is afraid of him. According to Miss Munsterberg, that is the real test of the love of a woman for a man. The love-fear story proceds swiftly:

'They had turned into a little dark alley, away from the crowd. There John Bruce, the master, drew Anna powerfully into his arms. The silence is broken and Anna's future lay before her, clear, wonderful, fierce."

They are married, of course—she feared him too much to refuse him. She cooks his meals and helps him in his labor agitation work. She writes Socialistic articles and makes speeches. But when Bruce refuses to take her along on one of his trips to organize a mill strike she is miffed. She abandons Socialism and syndicalism and gets back to the reading of best-seller stories. John calls them "stuff" and stalks away. While he is absent she reads that Kenneth Holcombe has come to New York. Having a private income, she buys some costly costumes and goes to see the man she couldn't fear enough to marry.

One evening she returns home from the theater, arrayed in her fine clothes, and finds Bruce waiting. There is a scene—just as in nonpsychological novels.

It appears that Bruce has wired her to join him in organizing a strike, after the refusal to take her along when she wanted to go, and she has ignored his summons.

Also, the neighbors, Mrs. Jennings and Mrs. Rasowitch, have been gossiping. They can't understand how the labor leader's wife can afford such fine raiment as she acquired in her husband's absence. They, of course, don't know the real Anna Borden and her history; they know only John Bruce's wife, and accordingly there is something of a neighborhood scandal already brewing when Bruce comes home.

Here is the scene as depicted by Miss Munsterberg:

"She opened the kitchen door and John stood before her, pale and awful in his rage. He said not a word when she entered, but closed the door behind her and turned the key. Never before had she been so afraid of her husband.

"'Anna!' said John Bruce, with subdued anger and the masterful air of a righteous judge. 'Why didn't you come to Jamestown when I called you?'

"'Because I thought I couldn't be of any use—I couldn't make speeches and lead strikes any more. Besides, you didn't want me at the time when I offered to come, why should I'——

"'Enough!' he cut her short with a snarl. 'Why did you stop writing for the Brotherhood?'

"Anna was all indignation and desperate fear. What did it matter now what she said?

"'Because I loathe the Brotherhood and the cause and all your rubbish!' she cried wildly, and recoiled as if she expected John to strike.

"But her husband stood immobile; only hate gleamed in his dark eyes, like the terrible flash of swords.

"'Traitor!' he said hoarsely. 'Traitor to your cause, and traitor to your husband!'

(And Bruce refuses to understand her explanation of her friend Kenneth.)

"'Who bought you those clothes?" he said at last, slowly and hoarsely, in words charged with hate.

"That was too much.

"'You brute!' Anna screamed. 'I bought them myself.'

"'Liar!' said John grimly. 'You haven't got the money—it's that fellow —— ——."

"'Oh—oh!' Anna groaned, and staggered against a wall. 'I'm innocent,' she whispered, but her voice made hardly a sound.

"'Go out of my house!' he commanded, and unlocked the door.

"All at once, like a wild creature set free, Anna panted out of the room, down the stairs, out into the dark street and ran and ran, till her husband's house was out of sight.

"'Free! Free!' voices were clamoring within her."

Sociologically, if not psychologically, John Bruce dies on the soldiers' bayonets, fighting for his cause. Anna now is doubly free, being a widow.

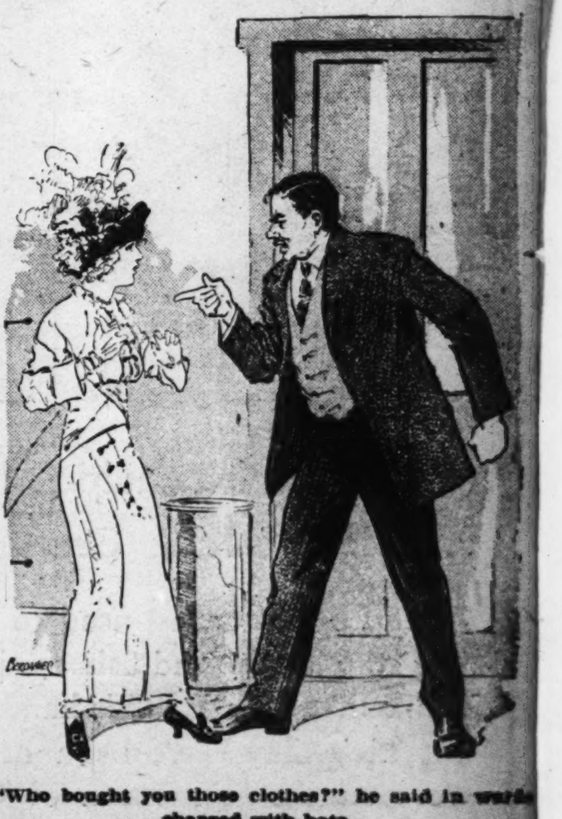
The Widow Bruce, still young and beautiful and psychological, turns to Kenneth Holcombe. Perhaps now she fears him.. At any rate she recalls the past, but Holcombe dismays her with this:

"'I have my career—I could not—marry—the widow of a labor leader.'"

The Widow Bruce is stunned, but not stricken. She goes back to her father, who, she finds, has married a widow and has a stepdaughter installed in Anna's blue chintz room.

Conventional love stories, reaching this situation, would end with vows in a nunnery, but not so Anna Borden's career. Anna still clings to life in the active and the open. Prof. Munsterberg says that is the psychologically correct attitude under the circumstances. The heroine of his daughter's fear story hears all at once a hopeful voice crying out within her;

"I will find my salvation in the sunlight!"



"Who bought you those clothes?" he said in words charged with hate.

There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes. (John VI: 9; Genesis XIX: 3; Genesis XXVII: 17; Exodus XIII: 39; I. Samuel XXV: 18.)

THE bread Christ used to feed the hungry multitude on that occasion of the miracle of the loaves and fishes was in the form of thin, flat cakes, like those which this modern Galilean lad holds in his hand. The fish were probably dried and salted, not freshly caught; but they may have been of the same species as these in this boy's possession which were caught in the sea of Galilee, only a short distance from this hillside pasture

HELEN D. JENKINS.

FATE has recoiled on Mrs. Helen Dwelle Jenkins.

The superb dwelling on the Chicago lake front is no longer hers.

The house of mystery in New York is no longer hers.

Such of her jewels as have not gone for good sparkle only through legal papers.

Her livery is no longer seen on the Drive.

Someone has got the $5000 mahogany bed upon which she slept.

Someone has got her framed motto, "Happy Is the House That Shelters a Friend," and someone has got the $3000 pale blue Aubusson rug upon which she received.

Someone has got the unique metal desk piece with the "Engagements" for 1911, and someone has got the antique hammered silver casket in which she kept her rare jewels.

Someone has got the costly piano player with the four-score records, and someone has got the rare ivory box wherein she kept her complexion powder.

For the catalogues said that all the belongings of Mrs. Helen Dwelle Jenkins of New York—all of the $250,000 worth of home finery, including the false-bottom faro box, the poker chips and the gold traced Napoleon wine glasses—everything—should go to the highest bidder; and there's no sentiment in the auctioneer's hammer.

To the shrewd bargain hunters seeking Florentine miniatures, Louis XVI cabinets, Du Barry draperies, Japanese ivories and all the rest, Mrs. Jenkins was only a name. Here, not being a catalogue, it is different. Here the woman herself figures—a woman who, along a triangle reaching from New Orleans, to Memphis, to Chicago and back again, held men of large affairs in leash as if they were poodles, capitalizing their fascination into riches and in the end turning their reputations for probity and sobriety topsy-turvy.

It is the story of a woman with an early setting in an East Side New York tenement; with another moving like a picture reel, first on a transatlantic liner and thereafter more leisurely wherever fancy pleased throughout Europe; with still another, a bijou setting in which she sparkled today with diamonds or pearls, tomorrow with sapphires or emeralds, and always with baubles of infinite variety at command.

Helen Fuld, for whose hand the First avenue butcher boy and the baker's son were honest rivals, and Mrs. Helen Dwelle Jenkins, called by some the Duchess of Diamonds, and by others the harsher name Adventuress, are one and the same.

How much is bid for the bronze bust, "The Flirt," and how much for the silver pail in which the champagne was iced?

An incident—a temporary embarrassment, which seems surprising when it is remembered that the strings upon which she played touched millions—opened the hidden chapters of her life. A well-wisher, knowing her need, sought to arrange a money loan in her behalf, and with a fatuity which may not be accounted for he presented the matter to the one man in all New York who could consider it with real interest.

The man was Deputy Surveyor of the Port Richard Parr, the Government agent who had exposed the Sugar Trust crookedness and profited thereby to the extent of $100,000. Parr was not at that time and is not now a commercial money lender. He had never heard of Mrs. Jenkins and was obviously not concerned about her affairs. But persistence on the part of her well-wisher finally resulted in Parr's acceptance of an invitation to visit her apartments, which were then in the Wellsmore, and inspect the works of art with a view to making a loan upon them. It was a morning appointment. They arrived at 11 o'clock, the woman's breakfast hour.

Mrs. Helen Dwelle Jenkins, young, vivacious, brown-haired and black-eyed, short of neck and dumpy, and by accepted standards neither handsome nor brilliant, gowned in silk and fully jeweled, breakfasted in part on champagne that particular morning. With the first bubble rising in her glass she entered upon a spirited narrative of her experiences while abroad, the incidents relating for the most part to the purchases of finery, such, for example, as the exquisite gown which she wore and the rare laces caught up with a gem at her throat.

Pleased, perhaps flattered, by the interest which Mr. Parr seemed to take in her story, she did not hesitate, when casually questioned, to mention the date of her return from abroad, and the steamship.

Enough for a starter for the Deputy Surveyor. Examination of the records on file in the custom house showed that her trunks had been declared for $200 in value. Another visit to the Wellsmore became imperative. This time Mr. Parr came in his official capacity. This time Mrs. Jenkins was flushed with indignation and on the defensive, until it became the part of wisdom to be tearful and frankly penitent.

She confessed first to a knowledge of the main fact of the smuggling; and then, but placing the blame where it belonged, opened the chapters of a story in which the central theme was the strange power one woman may exercise over towering figures of men to bring them to a condition of almost pathetic frailty and make of them mere agents for the gratification of her wishes.

The two particular men in the incident here recorded were John R. Collins of Memphis, a shrewd operator in industrials, who unified great mining properties into the Southern Coal Co.; and Nathan Allen, a rugged six-footer from the Northwest, who, prospering for years in his Kenosha tanneries, had become a vitally important factor in the formation of the Leather Trust, adding thereby to his already large fortune a number of consolidation millions. These two men are of the type that personifies force, yet they were readily plastic in the hands of a not over-clever woman young enough to be to either a daughter, for she is not yet 25.

This episode in the life of Mrs. Helen Dwelle Jenkins occurred shortly after her return home from abroad. Her companions on that sight-seeing European tour were her sister, Collins and Allen. They had seen London as only those with unlimited money may. They had toured the continent in an automobile, and wherever they stopped the Allen purse had been opened to purchase whatever took the fancy of the woman in whose interest the tour had been organized—the finest gowns of the Paris modistes, rare furs, jewels, bronzes, paintings, vases, fully a third of a million dollars' worth.

And by a connivance which the Government has not yet fathomed to its finality, this great amount of dutiable goods paid not a penny at the seat of customs.

As usually happens in such cases, Allen, once ashore, returned to his family and his consin tanneries. Collins had back to Memphis and his bitu ous deposits. No longer assisted

She knew of this; it could not otherwise. There is a study in Helen Dwelle Jenkins as she fo herself at this period of her care a study, a moral and a warning.

In her teens she had met a p

One familiar with the facts and knowing how gr suit to determine their civil liabilities, Allen compromi with the Government by paying $100,000 in cash, a

Collins a sum less than $1000.

Once the woman had ceased to enjoy the liberal p ronage of the rugged six-footer with millions, who ca out of the West, she became the prey of money sha and the quarry of some others who, knowing the p she had played in the social drama, proceeded on theory that she was undeserving of sympathy.

At one crucial stage her jewels, valued then at $3 000, were stolen. It was a strange robbery. The pol called it a myth and it became known as the "Arab Nights' Robbery." Detectives were hired to trace jewels. Other detectives were hired to follow her mo ments. Months passed. Finally some of the jewels w recovered in Chicago, and with their return she was p vailed upon to sign a release in the interest of her fo er patron, Allen. A cash consideration of seventy-thousand dollars went with this release. The disbu ments growing out of the joint transaction—fees, wards, counsel, etc., cut this sum in half, and she to pay.

They say that Helen Dwelle Jenkins is in retirem
now. Certain it is she is no longer environed by sp
dor. She has found it advantageous to dispose of so of her gowns and to obtain loans on others.

CHAPTER I.

The Dome.

HE awakened from a charming dream, in which the hat had played a conspicuous part.

"I shouldn't mind having that hat," he murmured.

A darkness which no eye could penetrate surrounded him as a lay in bed. Absolute obscurity was essential to the repose of that singular brain, and he had perfected arrangements for supplying the deficiencies of nature's night.

He touched a switch, and in front of him, at a distance of 30 feet, the ivory dial of a clock became momentarily visible under the soft yellow of a shaded electric globe.

It was 15 minutes past six. At the same moment a bell sounded the quarter in delicate tones, which fell on the ear as lightly as dew.

In the upper gloom could be discerned the contour of vast dome, decorated in turquoise-blue and gold.

He pressed a button near the switch. A portiere rustled, and a young man approached his bed—a short, thin, pale, fair young man, active and deferential.

"My tea, Shawn. Draw the curtains and open the windows."

"Yes, sir," said Simon Shawn.

In an instant the room was brilliantly revealed as a great circular apartment, magnificently furnished, with 12 windows running round the circumference beneath the dome.

The virginal zephyrs of a July morning wandered in. The sun, although fierce, slanted his rays through the six eastern windows, printing a new pattern on the Tripoli carpet.

Between the windows were bookcases full of precious and extraordinary volumes, and over the bookcases hung pictures of the Barbizon school. These books and these pictures were the elegant monument of hobbies which their owner had outlived.

His present hobby happened to be music. A Steinway grand piano was prominent in the chamber, and before the ebony stood a mechanical pianoforte player.

"I must have that hat."

He paused reflectively, leaning on one elbow, as he made the tea which Simon Shawn had brought and left on the night table. And again, at the third cup, he repeated to himself that he must possess the hat.

He had a passion for tea. His servants had received the strictest orders to supply him at early morn with materials sufficient only for two cups.

Nevertheless, they were always a little generous, and, by cheating himself slightly in the first and the second cup, the votary could often, to his intense joy, conjure a third out of the pot.

After glancing through the newspaper which accompanied the tea, he jumped vivaciously out of bed, veiled the splendor of his pajamas beneath a quilted toga, and disappeared into a dressing room, whistling.

"Shawn!" he cried out from his bath, when he heard the rattle of the tea tray.

"Yes, sir."

"Play me the 'Chopin Fantasie,' will you? I feel like it."

"Certainly sir," said Simon, and paused. "Which particular one do you desire me to render, sir?"

"There is only one, Shawn, for piano solo."

"I beg pardon, sir."

The gentle plashing of water mingled with the strains of one of the greatest of all musical compositions, as interpreted by Simon Shawn with the aid of an ingenious contrivance, the patentees of which had spent £20,000 in advertising it.

"Very good, Shawn," said Shawn's master, coming forward in his shirtsleeves as the last echoes of a mighty cord expired under the dome. He meditatively stroked his chin while the pianist returned to the tea tray. "And, Shawn"——

"Yes, sir?"

"I want a hat."

"A hat, sir?"

"A lady's hat."

"Yes, sir."

"Run down into Department 42, there's a good fellow, and see if you can find me a lady's hat of dark-blue straw, wide brim, trimmed chiefly with a garland of pinkish rosebuds."

"A lady's hat of dark-blue straw, wide brim, trimmed chiefly with pinkish rosebuds, sir?"

"Precisely. Here, you forget the token."

He detached a gold medallion from his watch chain and handed it to Shawn, who departed with it and with the tea tray.

Two minutes later, having climbed the staircase between the inner and outer domes, he stood, fully clad in a light-gray suit, on the highest platform of the immense building, whose occidental facade is the glory of Sloane street and one of the marvels of the metropolis.

Far above him a gigantic flag spread its dazzling folds to the sun and the breeze.

On the white ground of the flag, in purple letters seven feet high, was traced the single word "Hugo."

From his aerie he could see half the West End of London. Sloane street stretched north and south like a ruled line, and along that line two hurrying processions of black dots approached each other, and met and vanished below him; they constituted the first division of his army of 3500 employes.

He leaned over the balustrade and sniffed the pure air with exultant, eager nostrils.

He was 46. He did not feel 46, however. In common with every man of 46, and especially every bachelor of 46, he regarded 46 as a mere meaningless number, as a futile and even misleading symbol of chronology.

He felt that time had made a mistake—that he was not really in the fifth decade, and that his true, practical, working age was about thirty.

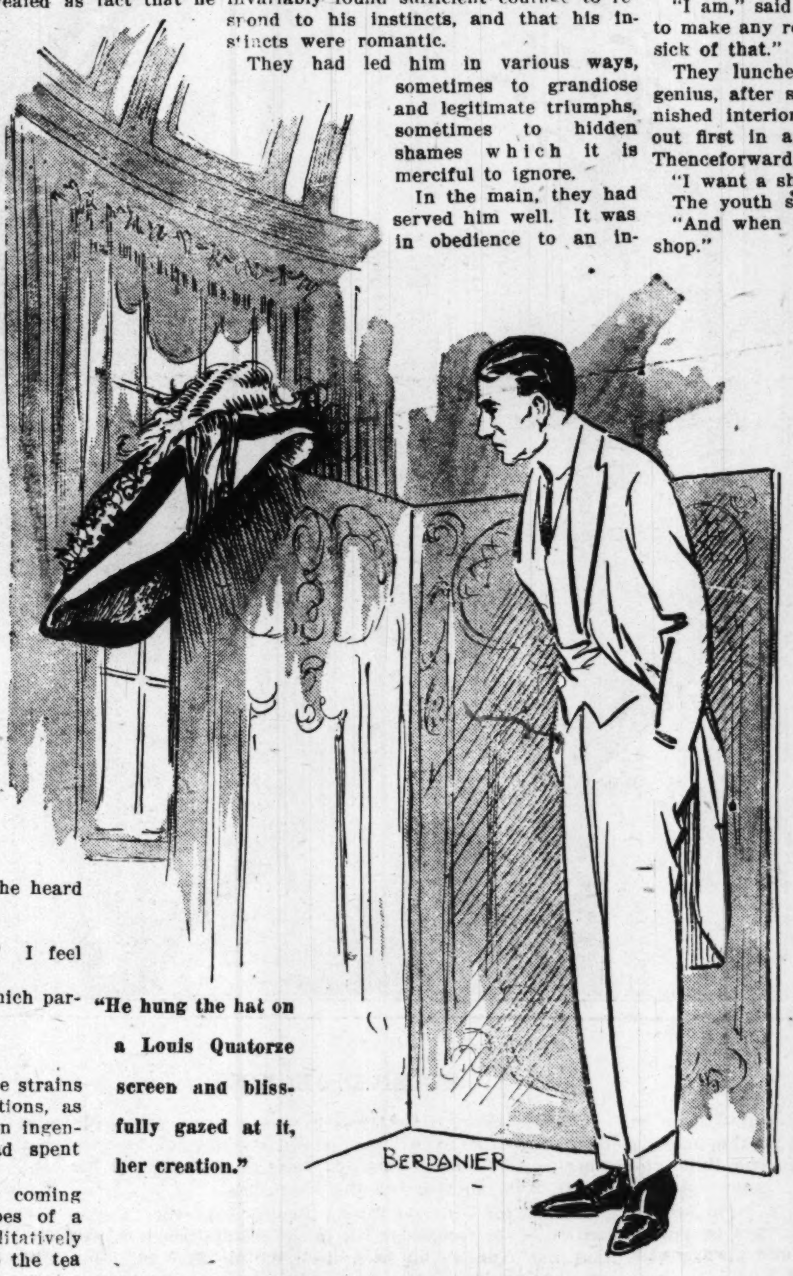
Moreover, he was in love, for the first time in his life. Like all men and all women, he had, throughout the whole of his adult existence, been ever secretly preoccupied with thoughts, hopes, aspirations, desires, concerning the other sex, but the fundamental inexperience of his heart was such that he imagined he was going to be happy because he had fallen in love.

"I'm glad I sent for that hat," he said, smiling absently at the Great Wheel over a mile and a half of roofs.

The key to his character and his career lay in the fact that he invariably found sufficient courage to respond to his instincts, and that his instincts were romantic.

They had led him in various ways, sometimes to grandiose and legitimate triumphs, sometimes to hidden shames which it is merciful to ignore.

In the main, they had served him well. It was in obedience to an instinct that he had capped the nine stories of the Hugo building with a dome and had made his bed under the dome. It was in obedience to another instinct that he had sent for the hat.



"He hung the hat on a Louis Quatorze screen and blissfully gazed at it, her creation."

"Very pretty, isn't it?" he observed to Shawn, when Simon handed him the unsubstantial and gay object and restored the gold token. They were at a window in the circular room; the couch had magically melted away.

"I admire it, sir," said Shawn, and withdrew.

"Dolt!" he cried out upon Shawn in his heart. "You didn't see her at work on it. As if you could appreciate her exquisite taste and the amazing skill of her blanched fingers! I alone can appreciate these things!"

He hung the hat on a Louis Quatorze screen and blissfully gazed at it, her creation.

"I must be careful," he muttered—"I must be careful."

A clerk entered with his personal letters.

It was scarcely 7 o'clock, but these fifteen or twenty envelopes had already been sorted from the 3000 missives that constituted his first post; he had his own arrangment with the postoffice.

"So it's coming at last," he said to himself, as he opened an envelope marked "Private and Confidential" in red ink.

The autograph note within was from Senior Polycarp, principal partner in Polycarp's, the famous firm of company-promoting solicitors, and it heralded a personal visit from the august lawyer at 11:30 that day.

In the midst of dictating instructions to the clerk, Mr. Hugo stopped and rang for Shawn.

"Take that back," he commanded, indicating the hat. "I've done with it."

"Yes, sir."

The hat went.

"I may just as well be discreet," his thought ran.

But her image, the image of the artist in hats, illumined more brightly than ever his soul.

CHAPTER II.

The Establishment.

SEVEN years before, when, having unostentatiously acquired the necessary land, and an acre or two over, Hugo determined to rebuild his premises and to burst into full blossom, he visited America and Paris, and among other establishments inspected Wanamaker's, the Bon Marche and the Magasins du Louvre.

The result disappointed him. He had expected to pick up ideas, but he picked up nothing save the Bon Marche system of vouchers, by which a customer buying in several departments is spared the trouble of paying separately in each department.

He came to the conclusion that the art of flinging money away, in order that it may return tenfold was yet quite in its infancy. He said to himself: "I will build a shop."

Traveling home by an indirect route, he stopped at a busy English seaport, and saw a great town hall majestically rising in the midst of a park. The beautiful building did not appeal to him in vain. At the gates of the park he encountered a youth, who was staring at the town hall with a fixed and fascinated stare.

"A fine structure," Hugo commented to the youth

"I think so," was the reply.

"Can you tell me who is the architect?" asked Hugo

"I am," said the youth. "And let me beg of you no to make any remarks on my juvenile appearance. I am sick of that."

They lunched together, and Hugo learned that th genius, after several years spent in designing the varnished interiors of public houses, had suddenly come out first in an open competition for the town hall. Thenceforward he had thought in town halls.

"I want a shop put up," said Hugo.

The youth showed no interest.

"And when I say a shop," Hugo pursued, "I mean a shop."

"Oh, a shop you mean!" ejaculated the youth, faintly stirred. They both spoke in italics.

"A real shop. Sloane street. A hundred and eighty thousand superficial feet. Cost a quarter of a million. The finest shop in the world!"

The youth started to his feet.

"I've never had any luck," said he, gazing at Hugo. "But I believe you really do understand what a shop ought to be."

"I believe I do," Hugo concurred. "And I want one."

"You shall have it!" said the youth.

And Hugo had it, though not for anything like the sum he named.

The four frontages of his land exceeded in all a quarter of a mile. The frontage on Sloane street alone was 500 feet. It was a glorious stretch of expensive earth which inflamed the architect's imagination.

"But we must set back the facade 20 feet at least," he said; and added. "that will give you a good pavement."

"Young man," cried Hugo, "do you know how much this land has stood me in a foot?'

"I neither know nor care," answered the youth. "All I say is, what's the use of putting up a decent building unless people can see it?"

Hugo yielded. He felt as though, having given the genius something to play with, he must not spoil the game.

The game included £12,000 paid to budding sculptors for monumental groups of a symbolic tendency; it included forests of onyx pillars and pillars of Carrara marble; it included ceilings painted by artists who ought to have been R. A.'s, but were not; and it included a central court of vast dimensions and many fountains whose sole purpose was to charm the eye and lure the feet of customers who wanted a rest from spending money.

Whenever Hugo found the game over-exciting, he soothed himself by dwelling upon the wonderful plan which the artist had produced, of his extraordinary grasp of practical needs, and his masterly solution of the various complicated problems which continually presented themselves.

After the last bit of scaffolding was removed and the machine in full working order, Hugo beheld it, and said emphatically: "This will do."

All London stood amazed, but not at the auster beauty of the whole, for only a few connoisseurs could appreciate that.

What amazed London was the fabulous richness, the absurd spaciousness, the extravagant perfection of every part of the immense organism.

You could stroll across 20 feet of private tessellated pavement, enter jeweled portals with the assistance of jeweled commissionaires, traverse furlong after furlong of vistas where naught but man was vile, sojourn by the way in the concert hall, the reading room or the picture gallery, smoke a cigarette in the court of fountains write a letter in the lounge, and finally ask to be directed to the statonery department, where, seated on a specially designed chair and surrounded by the most precious manifestations of applied art, you could select a threepenny box of J pens and have them sent home in a pair-horse van.

The unobservant visitor wondered how Hugo made it pay. The observant visitor did not fail to note that there were more than a hundred cash desks in the place, and that all the cashiers had the air of being overworked.

Once the entire army of c[illegible]iers, driven to defensive action, had combined in order to demand from Hugo not only higher pay, but an increase in their numbers. Hugo had immediately consented, expressing regret that their desperate plight had escaped his attention.

The registered telegraphic address of the establishment was "Complete, London."

This address indicated the ideal which Hugo had turned into a reality. His imperial palace was far more than a universal bazar. He boasted that you could do everything there, except get into debt. (His dictionary was an expurgated edition, and did not contain the word "credit.")

Throughout life's fitful fever, Hugo undertook to meet all your demands. Your mother could buy your layette from him and your cradle, soothing syrup, perambulator and toys; she could hire your nurse at Hugo's. Your schoolmaster could purchase canes there.

Hugo sold the material for every known game; also sweets, cigarettes, penknives, walking sticks, mustache forcers, neckties and trousers stretchers. He shaved you and kept the latest in scents and kit bags. He was unsurpassed for fishing rods, motor cars, Swinburne's poems, buttonholes, elaborate bouquets, fans and photographs.

His restaurant was full of discreet corners, with tables for two, under rose-shaded lights. He booked seats for theaters, trains, steamers, grand stands and the Empire. He dealt in stocks and shares. He was a banker. He acted as agent for all insurance companies.

He would insert advertisements in the agony column, or any other column of any newspaper. If you wanted a flat, a house, a shooting box, a castle, a yacht or a salmon river, Hugo could sell, or Hugo could let the very thing.

He provided strong rooms for your savings and summer quarters for your wife's furs; conjurers to amuse your guests after dinner, and all the requisites for your daughter's wedding, from the cake and the silk petticoat to the Viennese band.

His wine cellars and his specific for the gout were alike famous; so also was his hair dye. And, lastly, when the riddle of existence had become too much for your curiosity, Hugo would sell you a pistol by means of which you could solve it. And he would bury you in a manner first class, second class or third class, according to your deserts.

And all these feats Hugo managed to organize within the compass of four floors, a basement and a sub-basement. Above were five floors of furnished and unfurnished flats. "Will people of wealth consent to live over a shop?" he had asked himself in considering the possibilities of his palace, and he had replied: "Yes, if the shop is large enough and the rents are high enough."

He was right. His flats were the most sumptuous and the most preposterously expensive in London; and they were never tenantless. One man paid £2000 a year for a furnished suite. But what a furnished suite!

The flats had a separate and spectacular entrance on the eastern facade of the building, with a foyer that was always brilliantly lighted, and elevators that rose and sank without intermission day or night.

And on the ninth floor was a special restaurant, with prices to match the rents, and a roof garden, where one of Hugo's orchestras played every fine summer evening, except Sundays. (The County Council, mistrusting this aerial combination of music and moonbeams, had granted its license only on the condition that customers should have one night in which to recover from the doubtful influences of the other six.)

The restaurant and the roof garden were a resort excessively fashionable during the season. The garden gave an excellent view of the dome, where Hugo lived. But few persons knew that he lived there; in some matters he was very secretive.

That very sultry morning Hugo brooded over the face of his establishment like a spirit doomed to perpetual motion. For more than two hours he threaded ceaselessly the long galleries where the usual daily crowds of customers, salespeople, shopwalkers, inspectors, submanagers, managers and private detectives of both sexes moved with a strange and unaccustomed langour in a drowsy atmosphere which no system of ventilation could keep below 75 degrees Fahrenheit.

None but the chiefs of departments had the right to address him as he passed; such was the rule. He deviated into the counting house, where 200 typewriters made their music, and into the annex containing the stables and coach houses, where scores of vans and automobiles and those elegant coupes, gratuitously provided by Hugo for the use of important clients, were continually arriving and leaving.

Then he trudged to the purchasing multitudes, and plunged therein as into a sea. At intervals a customer, recognizing him, would nudge a friend and point eagerly.

"That's Hugo. See him in the gray suit?"

"What? That chap?"

And they would both probably remark at lunch: "I saw Hugo himself today at Hugo's."

He took an oath in his secret heart that he would not go near Department 42, the only department which had the slightest interest for him. He knew that he could not be too discreet.

And yet, eventually, without knowing how or why, he perceived of a sudden that his legs carried him thither.

He stopped, at a loss what to do, and then, by the direct interposition of kindly fate, a manager spoke to him. He gazed out of the corner of his eye. Yes, she was there. He could see her through a half-drawn portiere in one of the trying-on rooms.

She was sitting limp on a chair, overcome by the tropic warmth of Sloane street, with her noble head thrown back, her fine eyes half shut, and her beautiful hands lying slackly on her black apron.

What an impeachment of civilization that a creature so fair and so divine should be forced to such a martyrdom! He desired ardently to run to her and to set her free for the day, for the whole summer, and on full wages.

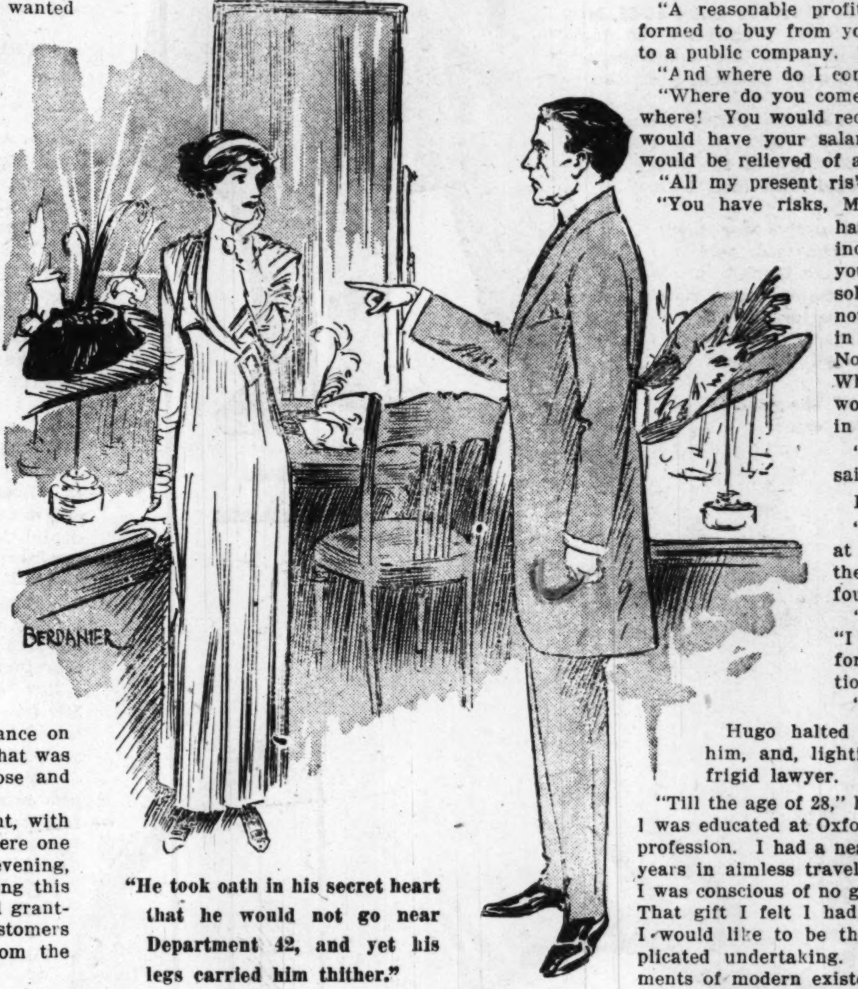
He wondered if he could trust the manager with instructions to alleviate her lot. The next instant she sprang up, giving the indispensable smile of welcome to some customer who had evidently entered the trying-on room from the other side. The phenomenon distressed him.

She disappeared from view behind the portiere, and reappeared, but only for a moment, talking to a foppish old man with a white mustache. It was Senior Polycarp, the lawyer.

Hugo flushed and, abandoning the manager in the middle of a sentence, fled to his central office. He had no confidence in his self-command. Could this be jealousy? Was it possible that he, Hugo, should be so far gone? Nay!

But what was Polycarp, that old and desiccated widower, doing in the millinery department?

He said he must form some definite plan, and begin by giving her a private room.



"He took oath in his secret heart that he would not go near Department 42, and yet his legs carried him thither."

CHAPTER III.

Hugo Explains Himself.

"AND what," asked Hugo, smiling faintly at Mr. Senior Polycarp—"what is your client's idea of price?"

For half an hour they had been talking in the luxurious calm of Hugo's central office, which was like an island refuge in the middle of that tossing ocean of business. It overlooked the court of fountains from the second story, and the highest jet of water threw a few jeweled drops to the level of its windows.

Mr. Polycarp stroked his beautiful white mustache.

"We would give," he said in his mincing, passionless voice, "the cost of premises, stock and fixtures, and for good will seven times your net annual profits. In addition, we should be anxious to secure your services as managing director for 10 years at 5000 a year, plus a percentage of the profits."

"Hum!"

"And, of course, if you wished part of the purchase money in shares"——

"Have you formed any sort of estimate of my annual profits?" Hugo demanded.

"Yes—a sort of estimate."

"You have looked carefully around, eh?"

"My clients have. I myself, too, a little. This morning, for example. Very healthy, Mr. Hugo."

"What departments did you visit this morning? Each has its busy days."

"Grocery, electrical, and—let me see—yes, furniture."

"Not a good day for that—too hot! Anything else?"

"No," said Mr. Polycarp.

"Ah! Well, and what is your clients' estimate?"

"Naturally, I cannot pretend"——

"Listen, Mr. Polycarp," said Hugo interrupting. "I will be open with you."

The lawyer nodded, appreciatively benign. As usual, he kept his thoughts to himself, but he had the air of adding Hugo to the vast collection of human curiosities which he had made during a prolonged professional career.

"My net trading profits last year were £106,000. You are surprised?"

"Somewhat."

"You expected a higher figure?"

"We did."

"I knew it. And the figures might be higher if I chose. Only I do things in rather a royal way, you see. I pay my staff five hundred a week more than I need. And I allow myself to be cheated."

He laughed suddenly.

"Costume department, for instance. I send charming costumes out on approval, and fetch them back in two days. And the pretty girls who have taken off the tickets and worn the garments, and carefully restored the tickets, and lied to my carmen—the pretty girls imagine they have deceived me. They have merely amused me. My detective reports are excellent reading. And, moreover, I like to think that I have helped a pretty girl to make the best of herself."

"Immoral and unbusinesslike, Mr. Hugo."

"Admitted. I have no doubt that if I put the screw on all round I could quite justifiably increase my profits by 50 per cent."

"That shows what splendid prospect a limited company would have."

"Yes, doesn't it?" said Hugo joyously. "But why are your clients so anxious to turn me into a limited company?"

"They see in your undertaking," replied Polycarp, folding his thin hands, "a legitimate opening for the joint stock enterprise which has had such a beneficial effect on England's prosperity."

"They would make a profit?"

"A reasonable profit. A small syndicate would be formed to buy from you, and that syndicate would sell to a public company. The usual thing."

"And where do I come in?"

"Where do you come in, my dear Mr. Hugo? Everywhere! You would receive over a million in cash. You would have your salary and your percentage and you would be relieved of all your present risks."

"All my present risks?"

"You have risks, Mr. Hugo, because your business has increased so rapidly that your income is out of all proportion to your capital, which consists almost solely of buildings which you could not sell at anything like their cost in open market, and of good will. Now, I ask you, what is good will? What is it? Under our scheme you would at once become a millionaire in actual fact."

"Decidedly an inviting prospect," said Hugo.

He walked about the room.

"Then I may take it that you are at any rate prepared to negotiate?" the lawyer ventured, staring at the fountain.

"Mr. Polycarp," answered Hugo, "I must first give you a little information and ask you a few questions."

"Certainly."

Hugo halted in front of Polycarp, close to him, and, lighting a cigar, gazed down at the frigid lawyer.

"Till the age of 28," he began, "I had no object in life. I was educated at Oxford. I narrowly escaped the legal profession. I had a near shave of the church. I wasted years in aimless travel, waiting for destiny to turn up. I was conscious of no gift except a power for organizing. That gift I felt I had, and gradually I perceived that I would like to be the head of some large and complicated undertaking. I examined the latest developments of modern existence, and came to the conclusion that the direction of a thoroughly up-to-date store would amuse me as well as anything. So I bought this concern—a flourishing little drapery and furnishing it was then. I had exactly £50,000—not a cent more. I paid twenty-five thousand for the business. It was too much, but when an idea takes me, it takes me. I required a fine-sounding name, and I chose Hugo. It was an inspiration."

"Then Hugo is not your"——

"It is not. My real name is Owen. But think of 'Owen' on a flag, and then think of 'Hugo' on a flag."

"Exactly."

"I began. And because I had everything to learn, I lost money at first. I took lessons in my own shop, and the course cost me a hundred a week for some months. But in two years I had proved that my theory of myself was correct. In 10 I had made nearly a quarter of a million. Everyone knows the history of my growth."

Polycarp nodded.

"In the eleventh year I determined to emerge from the chrysalis. I dreamed a dream of my second incarnation as universal tradesman. And the fabric of my dream, Mr. Polycarp, you behold around you." He waved the cigar. "It is the most colossal thing of its kind ever known."

Polycarp nodded again.

"Some people regard it as extravagant. It is. It is meant to be. Hugo's store is only my fun, my device for amusing myself. We have glorious times here, I and my ten managers—my council of ten. They know me; I know them. They are well paid; they are artists. A trade spirit must, of course, actuate a trade concern! but above that, controlling that, is another spirit—the spirit which has made this undoubtedly the greatest shop in the world. I cannot describe it, but it exists. All my managers, and even many of the rank and file, feel it."

"Very interesting," said the lawyer.

"Mr. Polycarp," Hugo announced solemnly, "the direction of this establishment is my life. In the midst of this lovely and interesting organism I enjoy every hour of the day. What else can I want?"

Polycarp raised his eyebrows.

"Do you suppose it would add to my fun to have a million in the bank—I, with an income of two thousand a week? Do you suppose I should find it diverting to be at the beck and call of a board of directors—I, the supreme fount of authority? Do you suppose it would be my delight to consider eternally the interests of a pack of shareholders—I, who consider nothing but my fancy? And, finally, do you suppose it would amuse

TWO WORLD CHAMPIONS

Mrs. Bertha M. Rose,
Denver's woman athlete.

AT 63

Denver's Great Woman Athlete Learned to Swim at 45 and Dance at 55—Is Now 64 and Expects to Be Still Young at 100—Keep Young Inside, [illegible] ys, and Be a Sport.

THE athletic world must take off its hat en masse to Mrs. Bertha M. Rose, 64, of Denver.

Learning to swim at 45 and to dance at 55, Mrs. Rose is now the envy and admiration of the younger generation in both accomplishments, and is a general all-around athlete of the turner school.

"I was always afraid to let my children go swimming alone," she said when asked to explain her athletic career. "They enjoyed themselves so much in the water that I made up my mind that I would learn too. I did and I've never been sorry.

"What I love most," she said, "is to dive way down deep to the bottom of the water, then grab hold of something and see how long I can stay there."

Mrs. Rose organized the first class of women turners in Denver 15 years ago. She performs on the bars, does the ladder exercise, swings Indian clubs and takes her part in the wand and dumb-bell drills as expertly as any of the girls.

"I feel just as young as they do," she said. "That keeps me young and the exercise keeps me healthy. Do I expect to live to be one hundred? Of course."

Mrs. Rose was born in Zuelenroda, Saxony, Oct. 18, 1849. She has lived in Denver 43 years. She is 5 feet 2 inches in height and weighs 164 1-2 pounds. This is her advice to women:

"Live outdoors.

"Learn to dance.

"Devote yourself to sports—walking, running, jumping, horseback riding and swimming.

"Practice club swinging, wand drilling, pole vaulting and plain bodily exercise daily.

"Never think you are too old to learn. Keep young inside. Be happy.

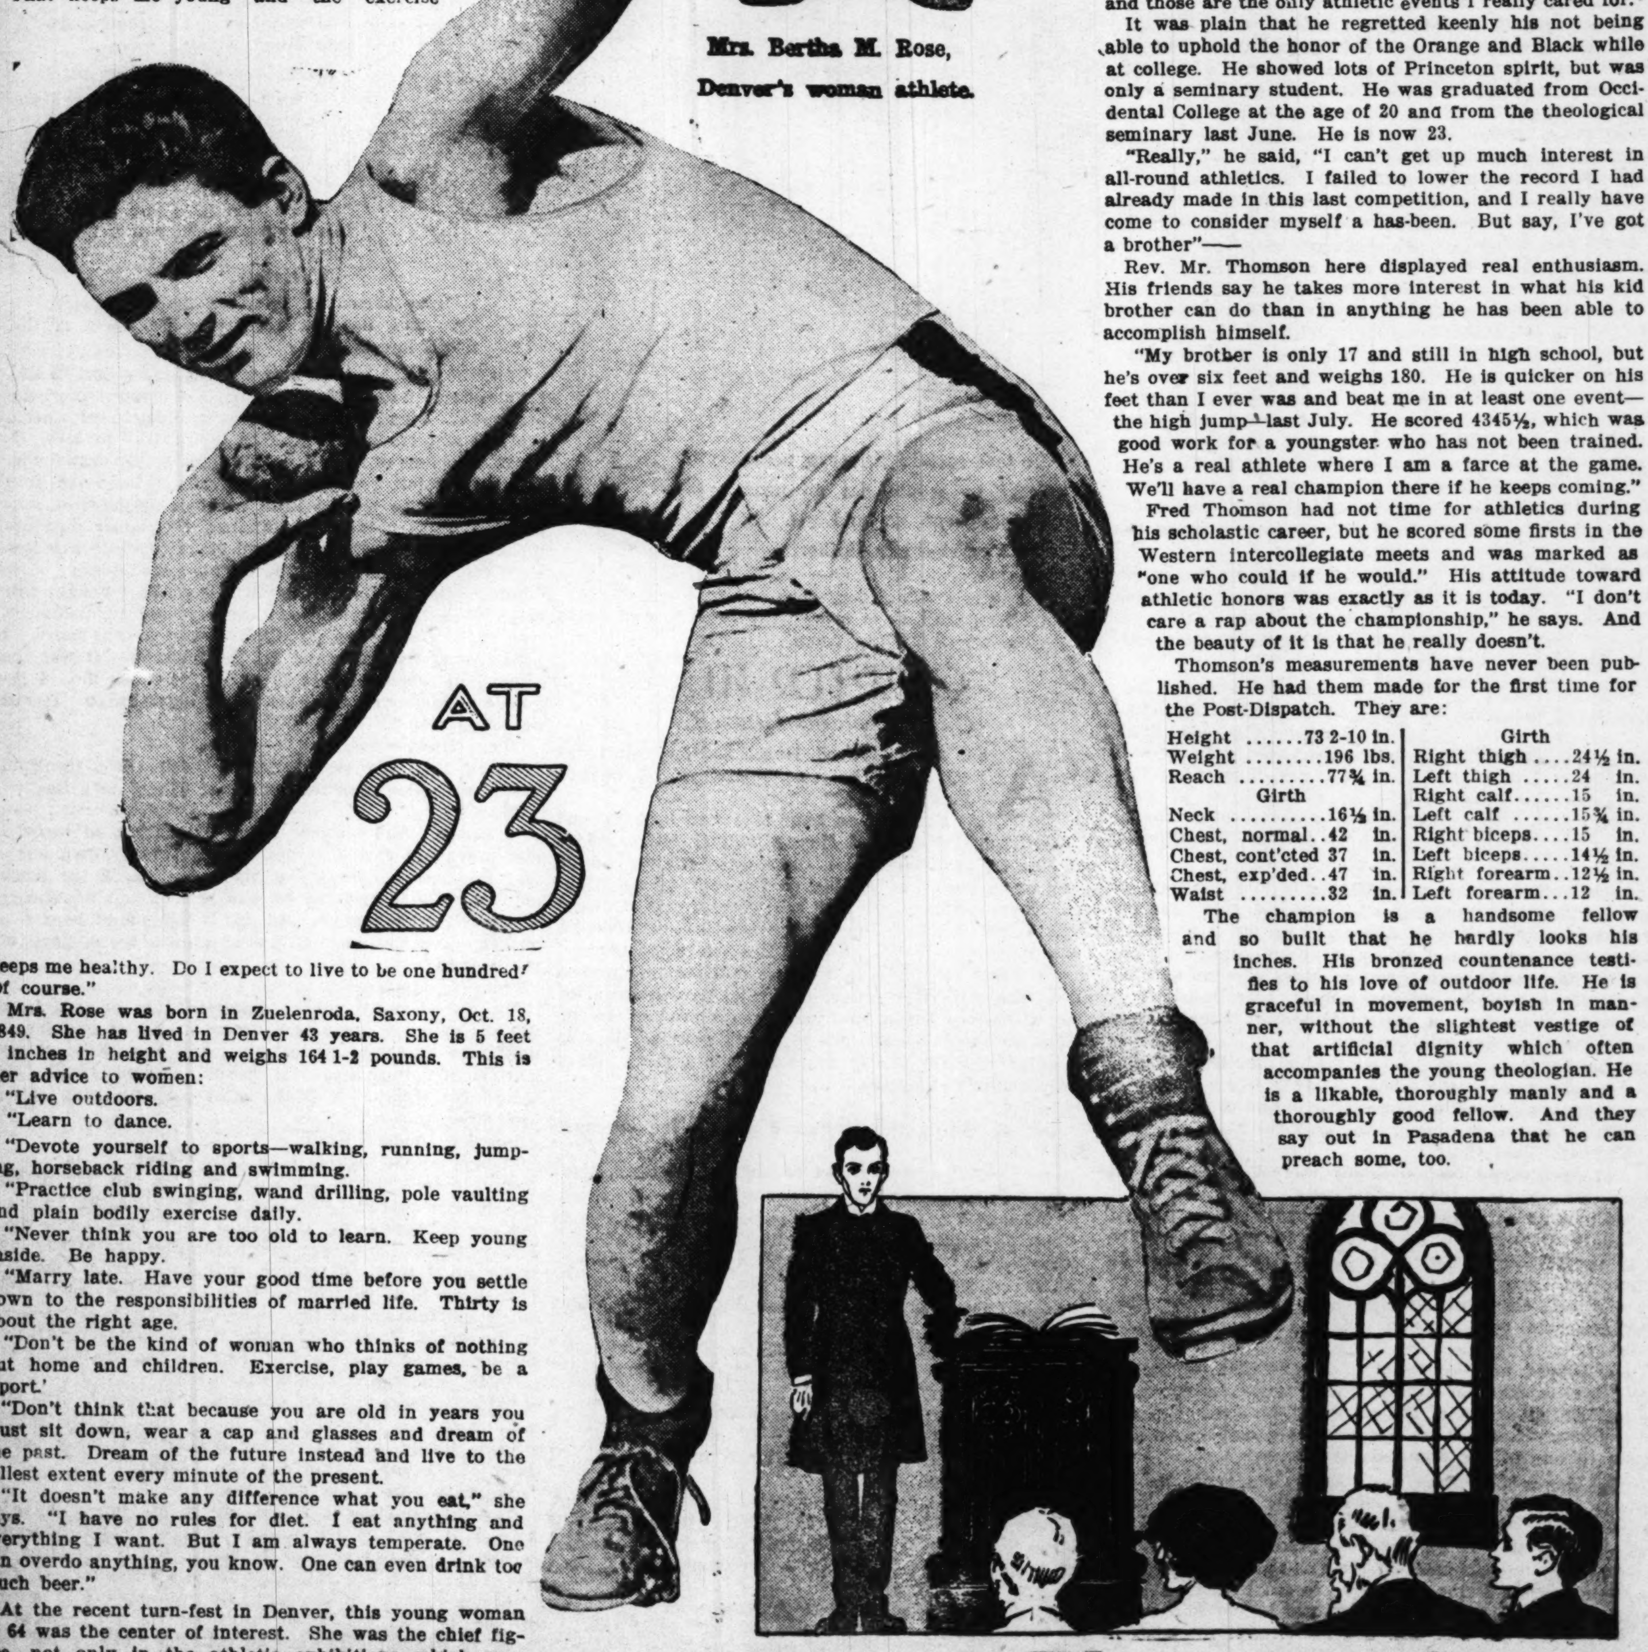
"Marry late. Have your good time before you settle down to the responsibilities of married life. Thirty is about the right age.

"Don't be the kind of woman who thinks of nothing but home and children. Exercise, play games, be a 'sport.'

"Don't think that because you are old in years you must sit down, wear a cap and glasses and dream of the past. Dream of the future instead and live to the fullest extent every minute of the present.

"It doesn't make any difference what you eat," she says. "I have no rules for diet. I eat anything and everything I want. But I am always temperate. One can overdo anything, you know. One can even drink too much beer."

At the recent turn-fest in Denver, this young woman of 64 was the center of interest. She was the chief figure, not only in the athletic exhibitions which proclaimed her a world's champion, but in the social gatherings as well, where her graceful dancing won universal popularity.



Fred C. Thomson, the world's all-round amateur champion, is now a Presbyterian minister.

AT 23

World's Champion Athlete Is a Modest Presbyterian Minister, Who at 23 Calls Himself a Has-Been and Hopes His Kid Brother Will Eclipse Him—Doesn't Care a Rap for the Championship.

FRED C. THOMSON, all-round national amateur champion and the world's premier athlete, is now ordained to the Presbyterian ministry and is to be pastor of Hope Church in Eagle Rock Valley, a suburb of Los Angeles. That he is the foremost athlete, regarded by many as greater than the dethroned Jim Thorpe, has never been regarded as a matter of import by the big, boyish young preacher.

"I cannot say that I have ever followed athletics at all," he said to a Post-Dispatch correspondent. "What I have done has only been for exercise. Followed for any other purpose it is aimless. Why, I never really trained for anything in my life except for four days previous to the Los Angeles meet in July, and for a week or two in a desultory fashion before I won the championship. At Princeton I was more of a pacemaker than anything else. I was not eligible for the intercollegiate events, and those are the only athletic events I really cared for."

It was plain that he regretted keenly his not being able to uphold the honor of the Orange and Black while at college. He showed lots of Princeton spirit, but was only a seminary student. He was graduated from Occidental College at the age of 20 and from the theological seminary last June. He is now 23.

"Really," he said, "I can't get up much interest in all-round athletics. I failed to lower the record I had already made in this last competition, and I really have come to consider myself a has-been. But say, I've got a brother"——

Rev. Mr. Thomson here displayed real enthusiasm. His friends say he takes more interest in what his kid brother can do than in anything he has been able to accomplish himself.

"My brother is only 17 and still in high school, but he's over six feet and weighs 180. He is quicker on his feet than I ever was and beat me in at least one event—the high jump—last July. He scored 4345½, which was good work for a youngster who has not been trained. He's a real athlete where I am a farce at the game. We'll have a real champion there if he keeps coming."

Fred Thomson had not time for athletics during his scholastic career, but he scored some firsts in the Western intercollegiate meets and was marked as "one who could if he would." His attitude toward athletic honors was exactly as it is today. "I don't care a rap about the championship," he says. And the beauty of it is that he really doesn't.

Thomson's measurements have never been published. He had them made for the first time for the Post-Dispatch. They are:

Height	73 2-10 in.		Girth
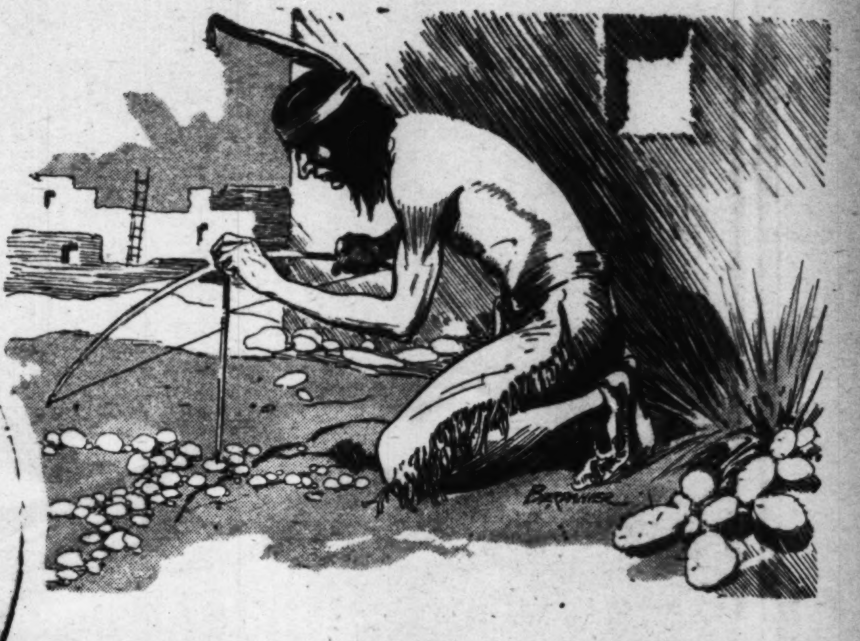
Weight	196 lbs.	Right thigh	24½ in.
Reach	77¾ in.	Left thigh	24 in.
	Girth	Right calf	15 in.
Neck	16½ in.	Left calf	15¾ in.
Chest, normal	42 in.	Right biceps	15 in.
Chest, cont'cted	37 in.	Left biceps	14½ in.
Chest, exp'ded	47 in.	Right forearm	12½ in.
Waist	32 in.	Left forearm	12 in.

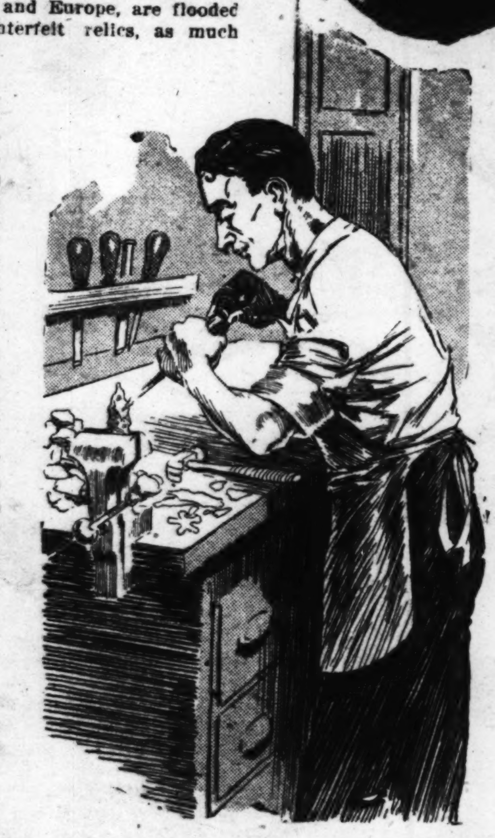
The champion is a handsome fellow and so built that he hardly looks his inches. His bronzed countenance testifies to his love of outdoor life. He is graceful in movement, boyish in manner, without the slightest vestige of that artificial dignity which often accompanies the young theologian. He is a likable, thoroughly manly and a thoroughly good fellow. And they say out in Pasadena that he can preach some, too.

Forging Antiquities a Thriving Missouri Industry

Detective of Archeological Society Asserts St. Charles County Is Noted for Output of Fake "Hematite" Axes and Arrow Heads of Glass, Which Indians Could Not Manufacture—Finds Stone Ax in St. Louis for Which Expert Paid $65 and Which Counterfeiter Carved With Steel Tools—Bogus Relics, Made of Cement and Aged by Ingenious Methods, Flood Museums of American Antiquities.



Walter L. Griffin, "fraud detector" of the International Society of Archeologists.



THAT thousands of collections of Indian antiquities in private and public museums, both in the United States and Europe, are flooded with counterfeit relics, as much as half of some collections being spurious, was asserted at a recent meeting of the International Society of Archeologists in St. Louis by Walter Lee Griffin of Somerset, Ky. The amazing prevalence of bogus relics has caused the organization to create for him the new office of "fraud detector."

So skillful are the counterfeiters, according to Griffin, that in the cases of the Smithsonian Institution he found rare forms of pipes and arrow heads which were treasured as genuine, but which were recently manufactured in Virginia. These were the subject of a learned and illustrated monograph in the reports of the Bureau of American Ethnology.

In a two-volume work on Indian antiquities which was written by a college professor and which is accepted as the authority on the subject, Griffin discovered a section, copiously illustrated, upon certain unprecedented forms of banner stones and other relics "unearthed in Pennsylvania." These, the fraud detector declares, were made not many years ago in Allentown.

The market in which the counterfeiters peddle their wares is an immense one. In the United States there are 7500 private collectors. In addition, there are thousands of historical societies, public libraries, university and public museums, city halls and state houses which have collections of Indian relics ranging from a few pieces to hundreds of thousands of specimens. Moreover, the great museums of Europe are continually adding to their collections of Indian antiquities.

Griffin estimates that 150 persons are engaged in the manufacture of bogus relics in the United States, nearly every state having its representatives. But the chief centers of supply, he declares, are in Missouri, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Indiana, Minnesota and California. The chief "fence" of the industry is in Dayton, O., although St. Louis, to a lesser extent, has served as a distributing point for examples of the Missouri counterfeiter's art.

St. Charles County, Missouri, according to Griffin, is noted for its output of spurious hematite ax heads, the genuine ones being so extremely rare that he has known a collector to pay $650 for a single specimen. The imitation axes are made of cement mixed with fine steel filings, molded with the hands while plastic, and baked in an oven. To his personal knowledge, Griffin says, one of the cement axes was sold to a collector as a "bargain" for $65.

Missouri also has the distinction, he says, of having palmed off on a collector an arrow head chipped from window glass, although the manufacture of glass was unknown to the Indians. The specimen was represented as quartz crystal. If genuine, Griffin asserts, the specimen would have been almost priceless.

In the museum of a St. Louis archeologist, Griffin found what at first glance would have seemed a valuable example of a calumet, or peace pipe. It was supposed to have been dug up in Tennessee, and was sold for $50. The fraud detector calculated, from its elaborate workmanship, that an Indian, with his primitive tools, working six hours a day, would have required six months to complete it. On the bowl was carved the head and beak of a bird.

It was the bird's eye which attracted Griffin's suspicion. It had obviously been bored with a modern steel bit. He placed the specimen under a high-powered microscope, which revealed the scratches of chisel and file, to which still clung tiny particles of steel. With modern tools, Griffin calculated, the calumet could have been made in two days.

Not long ago an archeologist of high standing wrote to Griffin with great pride concerning a pipe bowl of [illegible] which he had picked up for the ridiculously low [illegible] of $10. He dilated upon the lizard's head and claws with which it was ornamented and the polished finish of the stone. He inclosed a photograph of the specimen.

Griffin, recognizing the type, advised the savant to bore a hole in the bottom of the bowl. Within a few days he received the specimen itself, with a disgusted note advising him to add it to his museum of fakes in Somerset. The bowl was moulded of plaster of paris, painted brown to imitate jasper and ballasted with lead shot to give it the weight of stone.

The country's most extensive traffic in fraudulent relics, says Griffin, was conducted unsuspected for nearly a quarter of a century by a Virginia family, consisting of father, mother and two sons. From their little workshop poured out during these years a flood of counterfeits, which found their way into the best museums here and abroad. Griffin estimates that their profits could not have been less than $50,000.

The fraud detector, after a personal investigation, obtained a detailed report on the methods used by the family. He found that they made two sorts of counterfeits. The first was the manufacture of larger pieces from cement or from stone, carved with steel tools. The second was the rechipping of genuine flint arrow and spear heads into fantastic shapes, which, after 30 minutes' work, would increase their value by 1500 to 3000 per cent.

By manipulating cement with admixtures of various coloring matters, sand, powdered iron, etc., they were able to make close imitations of slate, sandstone, limestone, jasper and quartzite, materials much used by the Indians. The cement was poured into plaster of paris molds and then shaped and polished with dull knives and files. By this method an article which cost perhaps 5 cents and half an hour's work, found a ready market at $2.50 to $5.

For their more ambitious pieces, the Virginians used genuine stone, but carved it with steel tools. According to Griffin, $50 was the average price for these products, which consisted mostly of rare pipes, axes and "ceremonials," as those relics are called which were used as ornaments or implements in dances and medicine charms.

This spurious calumet pipe was found by Griffin in a St. Louis collection; it had been sold for $50.

It was necessary to give these articles an appearance of age. This was done by various methods. Sometimes the ax heads and pipes were allowed to soak for two or three months in the springs abounding in iron, which are plentiful in the vicinity. Often stones containing limestone were immersed in a weak solution of hydrochloric acid, which would eat out the particles of lime, leaving an appearance of naturally disintegrated rock. Sometimes the specimens were boiled in solutions of various ochres. In every case, mud and clay were rubbed into the grooves and depressions to make it appear the articles had recently been dug from the earth. Sometimes a sharp scratch was cut across the bowl of a pipe, for example, to show how a ploughshare had "accidentally" turned it up.

Ordinarily flint arrow and spear heads are so plentiful that genuine ones can be bought for 5 or 10 cents. But to connoisseurs the articles are greatly multiplied in value if they have any peculiarity of form; for instance, if the edges of the arrow are notched or curves are chipped in the sides. Genuine relics of these peculiar forms are found in cemeteries near Nashville, but are comparatively rare.

By taking a few minutes to chip notches in a 5-cent arrow head, Griffin found, the counterfeiters raised its value to 75 cents. For this work they used the same tools employed by the Indians—a chipper made of bone and a piece of bone notched at one end into a kind of pincers.

The microscope gives conclusive evidence against both these styles of fraud. Upon the products of both cement and stone appear scratches to which adhere minute bits of steel, mementoes of the modern tools which carved them.

Flint, when exposed to the elements, like many other stones, becomes coated with a thin film called patina, which penetrates into the stone for a slight depth, and which cannot be artificially imitated. Rechipping the stone destroys the patina so that the fresh flakes, although rubbed with sand or grit to dull the sharpness of their edges, are easily distinguished.

One of the favorite devices of this family, says Griffin, was to chip fishhooks from old flint arrow heads. Now, according to the expert, there are not 200 genuine flint fishhooks in the United States, the Indians having made them almost exclusively of bone, shell and wood. There are collectors in St. Louis today, he asserts, who would not hesitate to pay $25 for an authentic flint fishhook.

In their correspondence, according to Griffin, the counterfeiters affected an appearance of illiteracy. Their letters were always printed with lead pencil, on coarse paper, and were usually signed by the mother, who represented herself as a poor widow in need of money. There was nearly always a rough sketch of the relic offered for sale.

But care was taken not to guarantee the genuineness of the article. The writer stated that she believed this was an ancient Indian relic, and that its price was such a sum. Judgment as to the authenticity of the article was thus left to the buyer, who, if he was bit, could always be told he had only himself to blame. Thus the statutes against using the mails to defraud were evaded.

The fakes which were kept for years in the cases of the Smithsonian Institution, according to Griffin, were made by a similar family in North Carolina, the members of which carved them from stealite, or soapstone, with steel tools. They were mostly pipes, and were ornamented with what were supposed to be rare examples of Indian sculpture—effigies of men, bears, wolves and other animals.

The college professor-author who wrote an elaborate two-volume work on American antiquities was taken in by a hoary old rogue in Allentown, Pa., according to Griffin, whose occupation it is to whittle from slate with a pocket knife bogus arrow and spear heads and banner stones, which he polishes with sandpaper and rubs with mud to give them an appearance of age.

He was detected by the extraordinarily clean-cut holes drilled through the banner stones, which the Indians used as an ornament at the top of their flag poles. The holes were clearly drilled with a modern brace and bit, and within them were found the tell-tale particles of steel.

A curious variation of the fraud, says Griffin, was practiced in Minnesota by a clergyman, a former United States Representative and a third man. They made slate and copper tablets which they buried under an artificial mound and which they permitted prospective customers to excavate for themselves.

On one of these plates, says Griffin, was engraved an exact copy of the hieroglyphics on the Egyptian obelisk in Central Park, New York. On others were etched pictures of the deluge, of Joseph and his brothers and other Old Testament scenes. The finder was persuaded that he had made the most astounding ethnological discovery of the age, in the form of proof that the American Indians were descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel.

A man in California, according to Griffin, for years maintained a shop in which a dozen Indians were engaged in chipping knives and arrow and spear points of obsidian, or volcanic glass, which were sold as authentic pre-Columbian relics. Examples of this fraud, says the detective, are to be found in nearly every museum of antiquities in the country.

Griffin comes by his detective abilities through inheritance. His father, T. R. Griffin, has been chief special agent of the Queen & Crescent Railroad since 1878

Forging Antiquities a Thriving Missouri Industry

Detective of Archeological Society Asserts St. Charles County Is Noted for Output of Fake "Hematite" Axes and Arrow Heads of Glass, Which Indians Could Not Manufacture—Finds Stone Ax in St. Louis for Which Expert Paid $65 and Which Counterfeiter Carved With Steel Tools—Bogus Relics, Made of Cement and Aged by Ingenious Methods, Flood Museums of American Antiquities.

Walter L. Griffin, "fraud detector" of the International Society of Archeologists.

THAT thousands of collections of Indian antiquities in private and public museums, both in the United States and Europe, are flooded with counterfeit relics, as much as half of some collections being spurious, was asserted at a recent meeting of the International Society of Archeologists in St. Louis by Walter Lee Griffin of Somerset, Ky. The amazing prevalence of bogus relics has caused the organization to create for him the new office of "fraud detector."

So skillful are the counterfeiters, according to Griffin, that in the cases of the Smithsonian Institution he found rare forms of pipes and arrow heads which were treasured as genuine, but which were recently manufactured in Virginia. These were the subject of a learned and illustrated monograph in the reports of the Bureau of American Ethnology.

In a two-volume work on Indian antiquities which was written by a college professor and which is accepted as the authority on the subject, Griffin discovered a section, copiously illustrated, upon certain unprecedented forms of banner stones and other relics "unearthed in Pennsylvania." These, the fraud detector declares, were made not many years ago in Allentown.

The market in which the counterfeiters peddle their wares is an immense one. In the United States there are 7500 private collectors. In addition, there are thousands of historical societies, public libraries, university and public museums, city halls and state houses which have collections of Indian relics ranging from a few pieces to hundreds of thousands of specimens. Moreover, the great museums of Europe are continually adding to their collections of Indian antiquities.

Griffin estimates that 150 persons are engaged in the manufacture of bogus relics in the United States, nearly every state having its representatives. But the chief centers of supply, he declares, are in Missouri, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Indiana, Minnesota and California. The chief "fence" of the industry is in Dayton, O., although St. Louis, to a lesser extent, has served as a distributing point for examples of the Missouri counterfeiter's art.

St. Charles County, Missouri, according to Griffin, is noted for its output of spurious hematite ax heads, the genuine ones being so extremely rare that he has known a collector to pay $650 for a single specimen. The imitation axes are made of cement mixed with fine steel filings, molded with the hands while plastic, and baked in an oven. To his personal knowledge, Griffin says, one of the cement axes was sold to a collector as a "bargain" for $65.

Missouri also has the distinction, he says, of having palmed off on a collector an arrow head chipped from window glass, although the manufacture of glass was unknown to the Indians. The specimen was represented as quartz crystal. If genuine, Griffin asserts, the specimen would have been almost priceless.

In the museum of a St. Louis archeologist, Griffin found what at first glance would have seemed a valuable example of a calumet, or peace pipe. It was supposed to have been dug up in Tennessee, and was sold for $50. The fraud detector calculated, from its elaborate workmanship, that an Indian, with his primitive tools, working six hours a day, would have required six months to complete it. On the bowl was carved the head and beak of a bird.

It was the bird's eye which attracted Griffin's suspicion. It had obviously been bored with a modern steel bit. He placed the specimen under a high-powered microscope, which revealed the scratches of chisel and file, to which still clung tiny particles of steel. With modern tools, Griffin calculated, the calumet could have been made in two days.

Not long ago an archeologist of high standing wrote to Griffin with great pride concerning a pipe bowl of [illegible]er which he had picked up for the ridiculously low [illegible] of $10. He dilated upon the lizard's head and claws with which it was ornamented and the polished finish of the stone. He inclosed a photograph of the specimen.

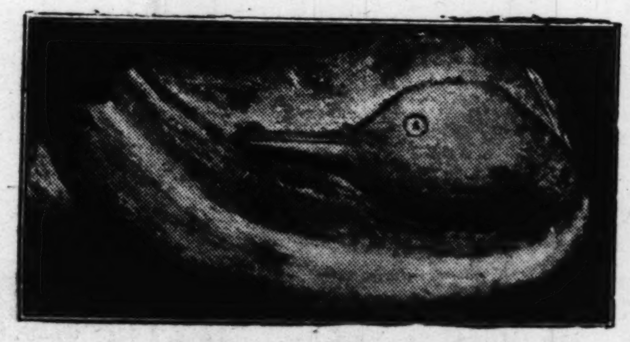
Griffin, recognizing the type, advised the savant to bore a hole in the bottom of the bowl. Within a few days he received the specimen itself, with a disgusted note advising him to add it to his museum of fakes in Somerset. The bowl was moulded of plaster of paris, painted brown to imitate jasper and ballasted with lead shot to give it the weight of stone.

The country's most extensive traffic in fraudulent relics, says Griffin, was conducted unsuspected for nearly a quarter of a century by a Virginia family, consisting of father, mother and two sons. From their little workshop poured out during these years a flood of counterfeits, which found their way into the best museums here and abroad. Griffin estimates that their profits could not have been less than $50,000.

The fraud detector, after a personal investigation, obtained a detailed report on the methods used by the family. He found that they made two sorts of counterfeits. The first was the manufacture of larger pieces from cement or from stone, carved with steel tools. The second was the rechipping of genuine flint arrow and spear heads into fantastic shapes, which, after 30 minutes' work, would increase their value by 1500 to 3000 per cent.

By manipulating cement with admixtures of various coloring matters, sand, powdered iron, etc., they were able to make close imitations of slate, sandstone, limestone, jasper and quartzite, materials much used by the Indians. The cement was poured into plaster of paris molds and then shaped and polished with dull knives and files. By this method an article which cost perhaps 5 cents and half an hour's work, found a ready market at $2.50 to $5.

For their more ambitious pieces, the Virginians used genuine stone, but carved it with steel tools. According to Griffin, $50 was the average price for these products, which consisted mostly of rare pipes, axes and "ceremonials," as those relics are called which were used as ornaments or implements in dances and medicine charms.



This spurious calumet pipe was found by Griffin in a St. Louis collection; it had been sold for $50.

It was necessary to give these articles an appearance of age. This was done by various methods. Sometimes the ax heads and pipes were allowed to soak for two or three months in the springs abounding in iron, which are plentiful in the vicinity. Often stones containing limestone were immersed in a weak solution of hydrochloric acid, which would eat out the particles of lime, leaving an appearance of naturally disintegrated rock. Sometimes the specimens were boiled in solutions of various ochres. In every case, mud and clay were rubbed into the grooves and depressions to make it appear the relics had recently been dug from the earth. Sometimes a sharp scratch was cut across the bowl of a pipe, for example, to show how a ploughshare had "accidentally" turned it up.

Ordinarily flint arrow and spear heads are so plentiful that genuine ones can be bought for 5 or 10 cents. But to connoisseurs the articles are greatly multiplied in value if they have any peculiarity of form; for instance, if the edges of the arrow are notched or curves are chipped in the sides. Genuine relics of these peculiar forms are found in cemeteries near Nashville, but are comparatively rare.

By taking a few minutes to chip notches in a 5-cent arrow head, Griffin found, the counterfeiters raised its value to 75 cents. For this work they used the same tools employed by the Indians—a chipper made of bone and a piece of bone notched at one end into a kind of pincers.

The microscope gives conclusive evidence against both these styles of fraud. Upon the products of both cement and stone appear scratches to which adhere minute bits of steel, mementoes of the modern tools which carved them.

Flint, when exposed to the elements, like many other stones, becomes coated with a thin film called patina, which penetrates into the stone for a slight depth, and which cannot be artificially imitated. Rechipping the stone destroys the patina so that the fresh flakes, although rubbed with sand or grit to dull the sharpness of their edges, are easily distinguished.

One of the favorite devices of this family, says Griffin, was to chip fishhooks from old flint arrow heads. Now, according to the expert, there are not 200 genuine flint fishhooks in the United States, the Indians having made them almost exclusively of bone, shell and wood. There are collectors in St. Louis today, he asserts, who would not hesitate to pay $25 for an authentic flint fishhook.

In their correspondence, according to Griffin, the counterfeiters affected an appearance of illiteracy. Their letters were always printed with lead pencil, on coarse paper, and were usually signed by the mother, who represented herself as a poor widow in need of money. There was nearly always a rough sketch of the relic offered for sale.

But care was taken not to guarantee the genuineness of the article. The writer stated that she believed this was an ancient Indian relic, and that its price was such a sum. Judgment as to the authenticity of the article was thus left to the buyer, who, if he was bit, could always be told he had only himself to blame. Thus the statutes against using the mails to defraud were evaded.

The fakes which were kept for years in the cases of the Smithsonian Institution, according to Griffin, were made by a similar family in North Carolina, the members of which carved them from stealite, or soapstone, with steel tools. They were mostly pipes, and were ornamented with what were supposed to be rare examples of Indian sculpture—effigies of men, bears, wolves and other animals.

The college professor-author who wrote an elaborate two-volume work on American antiquities was taken in by a hoary old rogue in Allentown, Pa., according to Griffin, whose occupation it is to whittle from slate with a pocket knife bogus arrow and spear heads and banner stones, which he polishes with sandpaper and rubs with mud to give them an appearance of age.

He was detected by the extraordinarily clean-cut holes drilled through the banner stones, which the Indians used as an ornament at the top of their flag poles. The holes were clearly drilled with a modern brace and bit, and within them were found the tell-tale particles of steel.

A curious variation of the fraud, says Griffin, was practiced in Minnesota by a clergyman, a former United States Representative and a third man. They made slate and copper tablets which they buried under an artificial mound and which they permitted prospective customers to excavate for themselves.

On one of these plates, says Griffin, was engraved an exact copy of the hieroglyphics on the Egyptian obelisk in Central Park, New York. On others were etched pictures of the deluge, of Joseph and his brothers and other Old Testament scenes. The finder was persuaded that he had made the most astounding ethnological discovery of the age, in the form of proof that the American Indians were descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel.

A man in California, according to Griffin, for years maintained a shop in which a dozen Indians were engaged in chipping knives and arrow and spear points of obsidian, or volcanic glass, which were sold as authentic pre-Columbian relics. Examples of this fraud, says the detective, are to be found in nearly every museum of antiquities in the country.

Griffin comes by his detective abilities through inheritance. His father, T. R. Griffin, has been chief special agent of the Queen & Crescent Railroad since 1878.

The making of a marvel and a career is engineered by Shorty who meets with base ingratitude . .

beat it for me life, clackin' through the town, over the bridge, across the Concession, down the Bund, on to the landin' and haidfoist into the last runnin' launch, just in time. "You're full, Shorty,' says Cox'n Carroll, as usual very severe, when I fell over him an' the wheel. 'I am, me dear,' says I, 'an' glad of it.' An' I kissed him on the fore'd an' sung 'The Voyage of Columbus' all the way out to the ship. * * * Well, waiter, do my woids int'rest you?"

It is a fad of Shorty's, when interrupted and refreshed in the midst of yarnspinning, to forget that an audience hangs on his discourse. With great nonchalance, therefore, he rolled a cigarette and interested himself in what was going on outside our alcove.

"GEORGE, you know, was due aboard?" I hinted.

"Ah, yes. But not till next mornin'. He was rowed out then, after foist call, in a sampan, very pale an' debilitated to see. He was some nine hours over his liberty an' Ol' Particilar was tearin' mad at anything. He'd heard officially the Isezak'cho was close to a ghastly ruin an' every sailorman ashore that day he was sure was in it. So at the mast that mornin' he lit on to our George an' heaved all the extra dooties on the ship at him, completin' the horror. But I'm ahead of meself.

"George comes aboard, ye see, draggin' himself along between decks; it was crammed wit' men there; we were just come in from scrubbin' canvas topside, the mess gear was down an' the marine country was full of undershoits an' half-cleaned rifles. The mixture appeared to annoy our George.

"'Hello,' says I, slappin' him on the back. 'Where was you last night?'

"'How should I know?' says he. 'I wisht you wouldn't slap me that way, it makes me head ache.'

"'I was lookin' for you everywhere,' I says.

"'Was you, though?' says he. 'Phew! Ain't that smell o' breakfast disgustin?'

"George's overshoit was a little loose at the neck. I says: 'Why, George! You ain't had yourself tattooed?'

"He makes a dab at his neck. 'Me?' he rattles in his throat. 'Where? Where?' An' when he'd tore his shoit half off his back, there all over his bosom was the saddest lookin' sketch I ever saw.

"It was a nice, female figger, out o' the ol' Black Crook, I should think. Vintage o' '70, when the Prof. was in his prime. She was up on one toe, an' as though kickin' George in the chin wit' the other. No, she wasn't prim, by no means—but the woik itself! Oh, what drawerin'! I think the Prof. must 'a' passed away over the last of it. We took an' sat George into a barber chair adjacent, an' he actu'lly bust into tears when he seen himself in the glass.

"'I'm ruined,' he moans. 'Whatever got into me to do it! I'll never be the same again!' It was a circus; the crowd ten deep an' more comin' all the time.

"'Don't take on so, George,' I says, soothin'ly. 'Why, it's a decoration.'

"'Oh!' says he, 'a decoration! Gawd forgive you, Shorty, for sayin' that!' I pushed out, quite hoit at havin' me taste questioned. Safe on the other side o' the deck, I did a few light steps—quite Black Crookish, an' stuck a friend's head into the dishwashin' machine.

"Well, from that very day, George begun to change. I noticed it in little things. Foist off, I didn't have no more pale-blue letters waggled in me face. An' George in the shower-baths was always tryin' to hide the Black Crook lady. He'd quite dropped off his ol' game, as a pose plasteek. He kept a little mirror in his ditty-box an' used to sneak off an' look at his embell'shments in it. * * * I learned several useful new woids by listenin' attentive to George at such times.

"'It's turrible,' he says one day, 'to think of goin' through life shovin' a sketch like that in front of you. If it was even something else!'

"'Why, I says, 'then why don't you have it covered up with something else? Something to fit over it, something artistic, reely Japanese—a souvenir, hey? Go to a good Jap tattooer an' tell him you want an ichi ban pitcher laid over that. You won't regret it.'

"'No?' says he, startin' up. 'You think I wouldn't? Could I truly get the misruble thing covered up that way? Shorty, I believe I could. You're all right, you are, ol' scout.' He was quite tickled; we were out of Yoko an' coastin' for Kobe, an' he could hardly wait to get there to try it on.

"AT Kobe George was in a poifect fever to get his liberty an' find a tattooer. An' when he did get ashore, it was the grief o' me life I couldn't go wit' him. 'If only I was goin' to be there to direct it,' I says to him, 'an' see the particulars.'

"'Never fear for me,' says he, almost fresh for the foist time in weeks. 'I shall do very nicely on me own.' An' he flounces down the gangway into the launch.

"'Oh,' says I to myself, 'almost his sweet self again, hey?'

"But that was only a very short relapse. He retoined wit' all the looks of a guy fresh from swallowin' a long drink an' suspectin' too late it's wood alcohol.

"'Shorty,' says he somewhat pale under the light, 'I'm goin' to ask you to look at this here.' He peels. Patrick seen it—he was there for one.

"Say, as George stood there, I couldn't see him at all. The only thing I could see was a red, blue and green geisha, about a foot an' a half high, trailin' all over George. Ye can imagine when I tell ye her fancy hairpins was ticklin' his neck and her skoits finished off under his belt. Seein' it all at once, it dazed me.

"'Well, well,' he snaps out. "How about it?"

"'Why, George,' I says, as though unwillin'ly; 'it's big.'

"'Helldammit!' he howls, goin' up in the air. 'That's what I told him! Too big? It's life-size.'

"'Oh, not quite,' I says gently, reprovin' Harah, an' Patrick here, wit' a glance, for laughin'. 'Not quite life-size. But it ruther shocked me, you see, comin' on it suddenly; it's so awful prominent. If you was off the len'th o' the ship, that's all I could see of you—that lady. An' I don't even think she's a geisha, George—look at that there sash tied in front. It's good you're no married man; it would hardly do for one, would it?'

"'No?' says he in a little weak voice, sittin' down on a box. 'You don't think so?'

"'I should hesitate,' I says. 'If I was goin' to get marrid, it's hardly that style pitcher I'd have punched into me. I'd select somethin' more—more perfessional, more heroyk.'

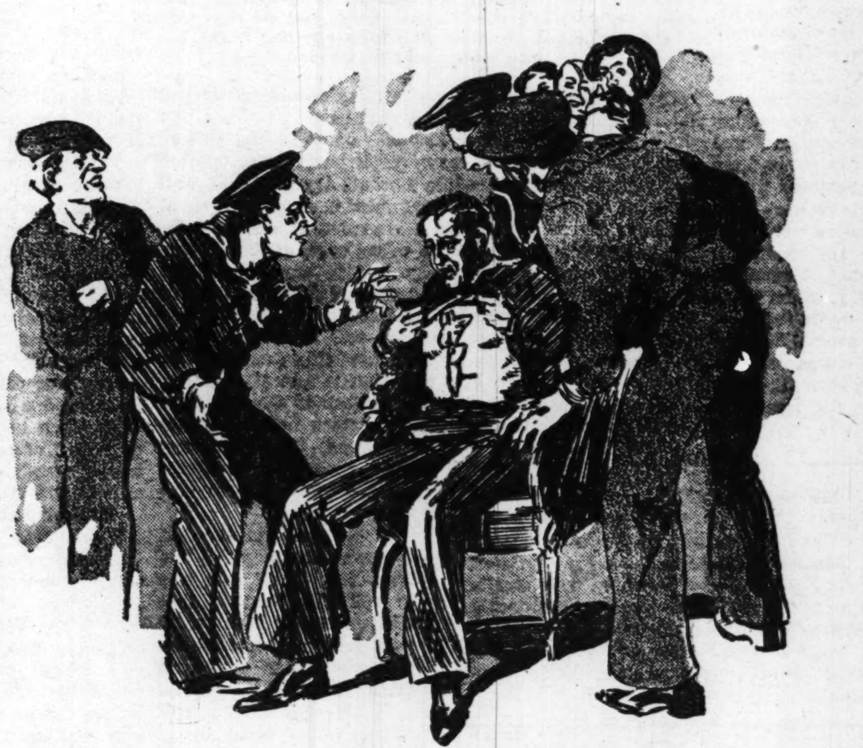
"'What would you have, Shorty?' he quavers holdin' his head. 'Tell me true, Shorty, for you're a sympathizin' friend at least, which some ain't'—wit' a look at Patrick an' Harah.

"'Well,' I says, quite cheerful an' ocktimistic, 'why not a naval battle?'

"He stares at me an' gives a ghastly laugh. 'Naval battle!' says he. 'You're out o' your head.'

"'A naval battle's thrilling an' appropriate,' I says foimly. 'Moreover, the details is confused, impresh'alistic. They can be as mixed as ye like an' none the wiser. You could almost, I think,' says I, eyin' him over like a doctor prescribin', 'have a naval battle yet over that.'

"He gets up an' faced me. 'You're a dope,' he says. 'An' I'm the bell pinhead o' the Asiastic Squadron.' An' draggin' his heels, he takes his Jap lady away wit' him.



"All over his bos'm was the saddest lookin' sketch I ever saw."

"George's tatooin' was the talk o' the ship next mornin'. It was just gettin' painful an' George consequently vury fretful an' everyone plaguin' him for a look. For 10 cents Amurican money I think George would 'a' chucked himself overboard.

"Patrick knowin' the particulars, says to me next day: 'I think he's gettin' a trifle nutty, Shorty, from worryin' over it. He acts vury queer at times an' goes around mutt'rin' to himself. He's a wild eye. You'd best cut it out.'

"'Cut what out?' says I, vury indignant an' properly so. 'What am I doin' now? I was done wit' Prof. McManus. Did I make him go to that Kobe Jap? No; a donkey engine couldn't 'a' held him back. An' that aint' all. When these picturesque guys get tinkerin' wit' themselves they never let up. He'll go on of himself, now he's got the habit. Wait till we're at Nangasawki; you'll see.' We were out o' Kobe then, an' runnin' south.

"George got a way of huntin' me up an' goin' into mournin' to me about himself. It was all about the tattoo lady. 'It's havin' an effeck on the ship, too, he says. 'Billy Spratt—you know how religious he is—he says the other day wasn't there some way o' tonin' it down an' makin' it less life-like? He says he thinks it almost ain't just nice; it's nearly as if there was ladies concealed aboard—Heaven help us!'

"'Well,' I says kindly, 'there's always the naval battle, George.'

"'Don't talk so,' he says, twistin' his fingers into his hair. 'How can you, Shorty? You know there's nothin' more'll take over this * * * is there now?'

"We came to Nangasawki presently an' it fell that George had liberty on pay day. I saw him through the gun-deck ports, leavin' the side in the launch. By the glassy eyes on him an' the way he fidgeted, I knew. I says to Patrick subsequently, in the for'd turret: 'Ol' George the Woik-of-Art is gone ashore to do it again.'

"'Shorty, enough is plenty. I can't believe you ain't a liar,' says Patrick, wit' his customary delicacy.

"Well, that night I didn't wait for George to hunt me. I found him on the gun-deck, sittin' on the sill o' the office. He was quite peaked out. He says in a vury subdued voice, on seein' me:

"'I've had a heart-breakin' day, Shorty.'

"'What doin'?' I ast him, in a jolly way.

"'Can't you guess?' he says, lookin' like he wanted to cry.

"'Not been to no more tatooers!' I shouts, steppin' back in extreme su'prise.

"'Yes, Shorty, I have,' he says. 'I didn't want to but somehow I couldn't keep away. It was dreadful tryin' not to do it; but no use. I couldn't stand that incriminatin' Jap figger a minute longer. I've had meself done over. At least, I'm not suggestif any more.'

"'Let's see,' I says, an' motions Patrick, wit' me hand behind me back, to get wise. He came over wit' Harah an' Quin an' Licks"——

"Not forgettin' Willie Spratt, the moril censor," interrupted Patrick.

"'An' Spratt, yet, to give it tone. George balked at the crowd, but I joshed him into bein' nice. He pulls his overshoit carefully up over his head. It wasn't vury light there.

"'Well,' I says, 'ye dude, since when have ye been wearin' that blue underwear?'

"'That ain't underwear,' he answered wit' his voice tremblin', 'that's tatooin'.'

"'Gawd save us!' roars the bunch like one man, baggin' at the knees.

"George was tattooed solid, like he had on a sleeveless shoit, wit' enough dragons an' snakes an' reptyles tied into half-hitches an' makin' faces out o' bowknots to fit out a delirium tremens. An' this effeck was shaded off on the arms, most artistic'lly, wit' little snakes, taperin' down to caterpillar size an' finally just a bug here an' there to carry off the decoration. I never saw anything like it, anywhere, not even on a Jap fireman's back, an' none o' the rest ever did either.

"'It took all six o' them tattooers all day to do it,' quavers George, from the sill where he'd sat down again in a heap. 'I got scared when they began to exceed my orders an' tried to stop 'em. But they'd got that int'rested an' woiked up over it they wouldn't take no for an answer. They kep' swearin' there'd be nothin' else like it'——

"'There ain't,' I says. Says Patrick:

"'I seen Red-eyed Coggins yonder under surveillance, just back off the beach. Better not let him see those monsters, George; he'll go into spasms. He's seein' things now in a quiet way. He thought me hair was afire just now.'

"'It gives me the creeps,' says Harah. 'You look like a temp'rance lecturer's pitcher of a drop o' beer, magnified a thousand times. Excuse me if I go, George? I like a swallow now an' then; I don't want me appetite scared away.'

"He went away, an' the rest wit' him, unable to find woids. I went, too, for I was hoit to think how he'd choose snakes, when I'd been all for naval battles. So we left George all alone, on the office sill, among his reptyles."

He stopped, with an air of finality. Shorty has, I know well, his own infrangible ideas about a climax.

"An' he never knew," said Patrick, who disregarded climaxes.

"Till long after," corrected Shorty. "But 'twasn't him found it out then, I don't guess. I think it was the goil put him next to himself."

"Ah, yes, that girl?"

"HOW can you tell what they're goin' to do?" said Shorty, enigmatically, examining his old cigarette. "He was makin' good money, enough for a family, when I saw him after. In Barnum's. On a platform. Photos, twenty-fi' cents, in a line along the front. You're on?"

"Not"——

"'The next exhibit, leddies an' gents," chanted Patrick with the manner of a showman. "So, after all, 'twas Shorty set him up in his perfession."

"An' how ungrateful, how, how—Psst! There lookin' in at the door, in blue, wit' the little mask on!"

"From the ball upstairs, ye coquette," drawled Patrick, lying back and feeling for a fresh cigar. "The pritty ones don't wear 'em, do they, sor?"

"No? Suppose," cried Shorty, beaming as though with sudden inspiration, "suppose we patronize an' see?"

Rashly forgetting the early evening, I agreed. Directed by that kind, blond sentinel of ours, we found around the corner a small, nocturnal shop-of-all-goods, where we procured three amazing noses. Behind these we went demurely to the ball. And Shorty there, without previous introduction, won a Queen of Hearts out of a hedge of frowning young men, all collars and cowlicks. And Patrick, from a whirling, spangled waltz, emerged escorting a bewildered Cleopatra, or some such siren, a queue of disgruntled rivals muttering at his heels. But these things must be irrelevant, touching on extraneous love and war (for war followed inevitably, in which two, blue clad, raged in the cloakroom against heavy odds, like Ulysses and Telemachus among the Suitors). But afterward I noticed something more relevant. For, into the street, while Shorty, the frequently ejected, was taking stock of casualties there, the Queen of Hearts emerged with her escort from the ball. Defying convention, she paused to say good-night to Shorty. And because she properly admired valor exhibited on her account, she rewarded it. In the face of a chagrined cavalier, she tidied Shorty's neckerchief and brushed off his cheeks and rolled down his sleeves for him. But rolling down his sleeves, she stopped and looked close at his arms.

"Well," she exclaimed emphatically, dropping his hands as though they were red-hot. "If I'd kn you were a flirt an' a jollier, an' all marked other girl's names, you wouldn't 'a' kissed behind no scenery. Here; take it back!" back dexterously at him and fled, drag fist-brandishing escort.

Shorty turned up a dazed countenan light.

"Take me oat', all over the woild th of 'em alike," said he, as though he coverer of that. .ing.

Theodore Roosevelt's Story of His Life:

His Nomination for Governor of New York Forced on Bosses by Business Men's Fear of Bryan.

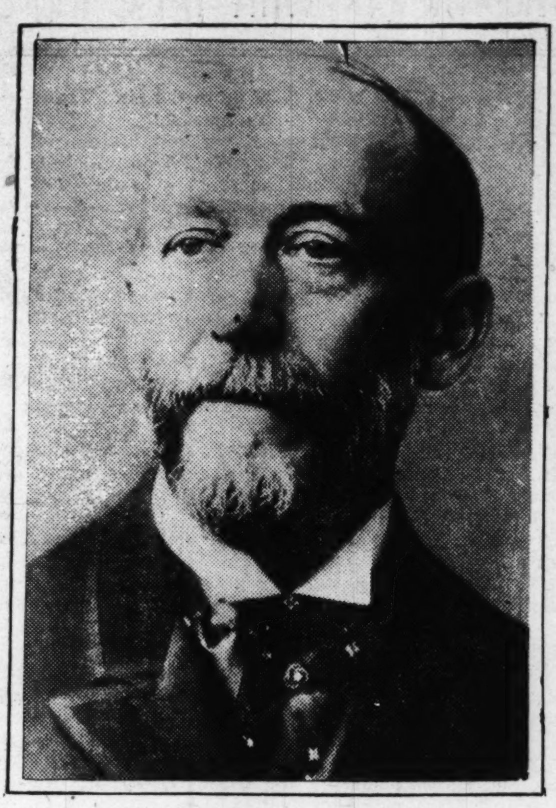
TWENTY-NINTH INSTALLMENT.

IN September, 1898, the First Volunteer Cavalry, in company with most of the rest of the Fifth Army Corps, was disembarked at Montauk Point. Shortly after, it was disbanded; and a few days later I was nominated for Governor of New York by the Republican party. Timothy L. Woodruff was nominated for Lieutenant-Governor. He was my stanch friend throughout the term of our joint service.

The previous year, the machine or standpat Republicans, who were under the domination of Senator Platt, had come to a complete break with the anti-machine element over the New York mayoralty. This had brought the Republican party to a smash, not only in New York City, but in the State, where the Democratic candidate for Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, Alton B. Parker, was elected by 60,000 or 80,000 majority. Mr. Parker was an able man, a lieutenant of Mr. Hill's, standing close to the conservative Democrats of the Wall street type. These conservative Democrats were planning how to wrest the Democratic party from the control of Mr. Bryan. They hailed Judge Parker's victory as a godsend. The Judge at once loomed up as a presidential possibility, and was carefully groomed for the position by the New York Democratic machine and its financial allies in the New York business world.



"Senator Platt picked me for the nomination. He made no pretense that he liked me, but he deferred to the judgment of those who insisted that I was the only man who could be elected."

The Republicans realized that the chances were very much against them. Accordingly the leaders were in a chastened mood and ready to nominate any candidate with whom they thought there was a chance of winning. I was the only possibility, and accordingly, under pressure from certain of the leaders who recognized this fact, and who responded to popular pressure, Senator Platt picked me for the nomination. He was entirely frank in the matter. He made no pretense that he liked me personally; but he deferred to the judgment of those who insisted that I was the only man who could be elected, and that therefore I had to be nominated.

> "I was the only possibility, and accordingly, under pressure from certain of the leaders who recognized this fact, and who responded to popular pressure, Senator Platt picked me for the nomination. He was entirely frank in the matter. He made no pretense that he liked me personally; but he deferred to the judgment of those who insisted that I was the only man who could be elected, and that therefore I had to be nominated."

Foremost among the leaders who pressed me on Mr. Platt (who "pestered" him about me, to use his own words) were Mr. Quigg, Mr. Odell—then State chairman of the Republican organization, and afterwards Governor—and Mr. Hazel, now United States Judge. Judge Hazel did not know me personally, but felt that the sentiment in his city, Buffalo, demanded my nomination, and that the then Republican Governor, Mr. Black, could not be re-elected. Mr. Odell, who hardly knew me personally, felt the same way about Mr. Black's chances, and, as he had just taken the State Chairmanship, he was very anxious to win a victory. Mr. Quigg knew me quite well personally; he had been in touch with me for years, while he was a reporter on the Tribune, and also when he edited a paper in Montana; he had been on good terms with me while he was in Congress and I was Civil Service Commissioner, meeting me often in company with my especial cronies in Congress—men like Lodge, Speaker Tom Reed, Greenhalge, Butterworth and Dolliver—and he had urged my appointment as Police Commissioner on Mayor Strong.

It was Mr. Quigg who called on me at Montauk Point to sound me about the Governorship; Mr. Platt being by no means enthusiastic over Mr. Quigg's mission, largely because he disapproved of the Spanish war and of my part in bringing it about. Mr. Quigg saw me in my tent, in which he spent a couple of hours with me, my brother-in-law, Douglas Robinson, being also present. Quigg spoke very frankly to me, stating that he earnestly desired to see me nominated and believed that the great body of Republican voters in the State so desired, but that the organization and the State Convention would finally do what Senator Platt desired. He said that county leaders were already coming to Senator Platt, hinting at a close election, expressing doubt of Governor Black's availability for re-election, and asking why it would not be a good thing to nominate me; that now that I had returned to the United States this would go on more and more all the time, and that he (Quigg) did not wish that these men should be discouraged and be sent back to their localities to suppress a rising sentiment in my favor. For this reason he said that he wanted from me a plain statement as to whether or not I wanted the nomination, and as to what would be my attitude toward the organization in the event of my nomination and election, whether or not I would "make war" on Mr. Platt and his friends, or whether I would confer with them and with the organization leaders [illegible]rally, and give fair consideration to their point of [illegible] to party policy and public interest. He said he [illegible]e to make me any offer of the nomination [illegible]uthority to do so, nor to get any pledges [illegible]e simply wanted a frank definition of [illegible]rds existing party conditions.

[illegible]ed that I should like to be nominated, [illegible] would promise to throw myself into [illegible] all possible energy. I said that I [illegible]ar on Mr. Platt or anybody else if [illegible]ded; that what I wanted was to be [illegible] faction leader; that I certainly [illegible] organization men, as with everybody else who seemed to me to have knowledge of and interest in public affairs, and that as to Mr. Platt and the organization leaders, I should do so in the sincere hope that there might always result harmony of opinion and purpose; but that while I would try to get on well with the organization, the organization must with equal sincerity strive to do what I regarded as essential for the public good; and that in every case, after full consideration of what everybody had to say who might possess real knowledge of the matter, I should have to act finally as my own judgment and conscience dictated and administer the State government as I thought it ought to be administered. Quigg said that this was precisely what he supposed I would say, that it was all anybody could expect, and that he would state it to Senator Platt precisely as I had put it to him, which he accordingly did; and, throughout my term as Governor, Quigg lived loyally up to our understanding.

In a letter to me Mr. Quigg states, what I had forgotten, that I told him to tell the Senator that while I would talk freely with him, and had no intention of becoming a factional leader, with a personal organization, yet that I must have direct personal relations with everybody, and get their views at first hand whenever I so desired, because I could not have one man speaking for all.

After being nominated, I made a hard and aggressive campaign through the State. My opponent was a respectable man, a Judge, behind whom stood Mr. Croker, the boss of Tammany Hall. My object was to make the people understand that it was Croker and not the nominal candidate who was my real opponent; that the choice lay between Crokerism and myself. Croker was a powerful and truculent man, the autocrat of his organization, and of a domineering nature. For his own reasons he insisted upon Tammany's turning down an excellent Democratic Judge who was a candidate for re-election. This gave me my chance. Under my attack, Croker, who was a stalwart fighting man and who would not take an attack tamely, himself came to the front. I was able to fix the contest in the public mind as being one between himself and myself; and, against all probabilities, I won by the rather narrow margin of 18,000 plurality.

As I have already said, there is a lunatic fringe to every reform movement. At least nine-tenths of all the sincere reformers supported me but the ultra-pacificists, the so-called anti-imperialists, or anti-militarists, or peace-at-any-price men, preferred Croker to me; and another knot of extremists, who had at first ardently insisted that I must be "forced" on Platt, as soon as Platt supported me themselves opposed me because he supported me. After election John Hay wrote me as follows: "While you are Governor, I believe the party can be made solid as never before. You have already shown that a man may be absolutely honest and yet practical; a reformer by instinct and a wise politician; brave, bold and uncompromising, and yet not a wild ass of the desert. The exhibition made by the professional independents in voting against you for no reason on earth except that somebody else was voting for you, is a lesson that is worth its cost."

> "I said that I should not make war on Mr. Platt or anybody else if war could be avoided; that what I wanted was to be Governor and not a faction leader; that I certainly would confer with the organization men, as with everybody else who seemed to me to have knowledge and interest in public affairs, and that as to Mr. Platt and the organization leaders, I should do so in the sincere hope that there might always result harmony of opinion and purpose; but that while I would try to get on well with the organization, the organization must with equal sincerity strive to do what I regarded as essential for the public good; and that in every case, after full consideration of what everybody had to say who might possess real knowledge of the matter, I would have to act finally as my own judgment and conscience dictated and administer the State government as I thought it ought to be administered."

At that time boss rule was at its very zenith. Mr. Bryan's candidacy in 1896 on a free silver platform had threatened such frightful business disaster as to make the business men, the wageworkers and the professional classes generally, turn eagerly to the Republican party. East of the Mississippi the Republican vote for Mr. McKinley was larger by far than it had been for Abraham Lincoln in the days when the life of the nation was at stake. Mr. Bryan championed many sorely needed reforms in the interest of the plain people; but many of his platform proposals, economic and otherwise, were of such a character that to have put them into practice would have meant to plunge all our people into conditions far worse than any of those for which he sought a remedy. The free silver advocates included sincere and upright men who were able to make a strong case for their position; but with them and dominating them were all the believers in the complete or partial repudiation of national, state and private debts; and not only the business men but the workingmen grew to feel that under these circumstances too heavy a price could not be paid to avert the Democratic triumph. The fear of Mr. Bryan threw almost all the leading men of all classes into the arms of whoever opposed him.

The Republican bosses, who were already very powerful, and who were already in fairly close alliance with the privileged interests, now found everything working to their advantage. Good and high-minded men of conservative temperament in their panic played into the hands of the ultra-reactionaries of business and politics. The alliance between the two kinds of privilege, political and financial, was closely cemented; and wherever there was any attempt to break it up, the cry was at once raised that this merely represented another phase of the assault on national honesty and individual and mercantile integrity. As so often happens, the excesses and threats of an unwise and extreme radicalism had resulted in immensely strengthening the position of the beneficiaries of reaction. This was the era when the Standard Oil Co. achieved a mastery of Pennsylvania politics so far-reaching and so corrupt that it is difficult to describe it without seeming to exaggerate.

In New York state United States Senator Platt was the absolute boss of the Republican party. "Big business" was back of him; yet at the time this, the most important element in his strength, was only imperfectly understood. It was not until I was elected Governor that I myself came to understand it. We were still accustomed to talking of the "machine" as if it were something merely political, with which business had nothing to do. Senator Platt did not use his political position to advance his private fortunes—therein differing absolutely from many other political bosses. He lived in hotels and had few extravagant tastes. Indeed, I could not find that he had any tastes at all except for politics, and on rare occasions for a very dry theology wholly divorced from moral implications. But big business men contributed to him large sums of money, which enabled him to keep his grip on the machine and secured for them the help of the machine if they were threatened with adverse legislation. The contributions were given in the guise of contributions for campaign purposes, of money for the good of the party; when money was contributed there was rarely talk of specific favors in return.

Each nation has its own pet sins to which it is merciful, and also sins which it treats as most abhorrent. In America we are peculiarly sensitive about big money contributions for which the donors expect any reward. In England, where in some ways the standard is higher than here, such contributions are accepted as a matter of course, nay, as one of the methods by which wealthy men obtain peerages. It would be well-nigh an impossibility for a man to secure a seat in the United States Senate by mere campaign contributions, in the way that seats in the British House of Lords have often been secured without any scandal being caused thereby.

The money was simply put into Mr. Platt's hands and treated by him as in the campaign chest. Then he distributed it in the districts where it was most needed by the candidates and organization leaders. Ordinarily no pledge was required from the latter to the bosses, any more than was required by the business men from Mr. Platt or his lieutenants. No pledge was needed. It was all a "gentlemen's understanding." As the Senator once said to me, if a man's character was such that it was necessary to get a promise from him, it was clear proof that his character was such that the promise would not be worth anything after it was made.

It must not be forgotten that some of the worst practices of the machine in dealings of this kind represented merely virtues in the wrong place, virtues wrenched out of proper relation to their surroundings. A man in a doubtful district might win only because of the help Mr. Platt gave him; he might be a decent young fellow without money enough to finance his own campaign, who was able to finance it only because Platt of his own accord found out or was apprised of his need and advanced the money. Such a man felt grateful, and, because of his good qualities, joined with the purely sordid and corrupt heelers and crooked politicians to become part of the Platt machine.

In his turn Mr. Platt was recognized by the business men, the big contributors, as an honorable man, not only a man who, whenever he received a favor, could be trusted to do his best to repay it on any occasion that arose. I believe that usually the contributors, and the recipient, sincerely felt that the transaction was proper and subserved the cause of good politics and good business; and, indeed, as regards the major part of the contributions it is probable that this was the fact, and that the only criticism that could properly be made about the contributions was that they were not made with publicity—and at that time neither the parties nor the public had any realization that publicity was necessary, or any adequate understanding of the dangers of the "invisible empire" which throve by what was done in secrecy.

Many, probably m[illegible] the contributors of this type never wished anyth[illegible]personal in exchange for thei[illegible] contributions and made them with sincere patriotism, desiring in return only that the Government should be conducted on a proper basis. Unfortunately, it was, in practice, exceedingly difficult to distinguish these men from the others who contributed big sums to the various party bosses with the expectation of gaining concrete and personal advantages (in which the bosses shared) at the expense of the general public. It was very hard to draw the line between these two types of contributions.

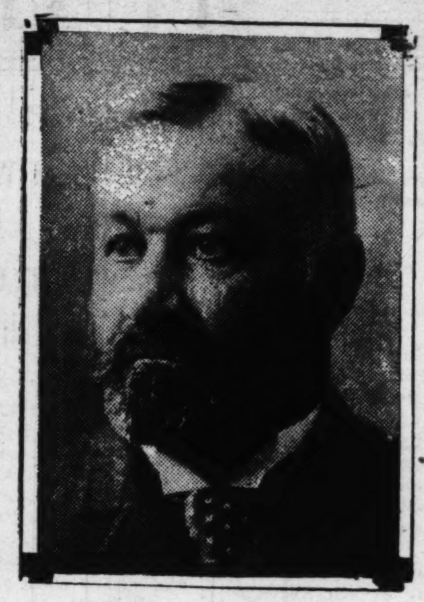
There was but one kind of money contribution as to which it seemed to me absolutely impossible for either the contributor or the recipient to disguise to themselves the evil meaning of the contribution. This was where a big corporation contributed to both political parties.

I knew of one such case where in a state campaign a big corporation which had many dealings with public officials frankly contributed in the neighborhood of $100,000 to one campaign fund and $50,000 to the campaign fund of the other side—and, I believe, made some further substantial contributions in the same ratio of two dollars to one side for every one dollar given to the other. The contributors were Democrats, and the big contributions went to the Democratic managers. The Republican was elected, and after his election, when a matter came up affecting the company, in which its interests were hostile to those of the general public, the sucessful candidate, then holding a high state office, was approached by his campaign managers and the situation put frankly before him. He was less disturbed than astonished, and remarked, 'Why, I thought So-and-so and his associates were Democrats and subscribed to the Democratic campaign fund." "So they did," was the answer; "they subscribed to them twice as much as they subscribed to us, but if they had had any idea that you intended doing what you now say you will do, they would have subscribed it all to the other side, and more too." The state official in his turn answered that he was very sorry if anyone had subscribed under a misapprehension, that it was no fault of his, for he had stated definitely and clearly his position, that he of course had no money wherewith himself to return what without his knowledge had been contributed, and that all he could say was that any man who had subscribed to his campaign fund under the impression that the receipt of the subscription would be a bar to the performance of public duty was sadly mistaken.

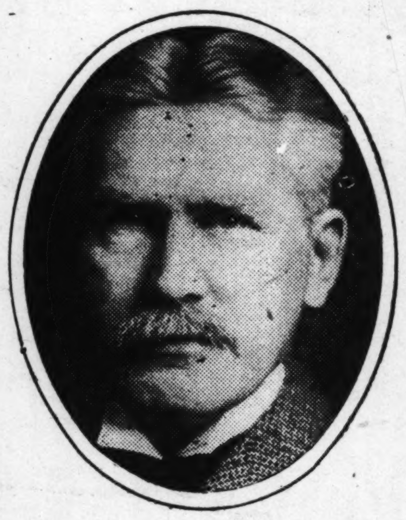
The control by Mr. Platt and his lieutenants over the organization was well-nigh complete. There were splits among the bosses, and insurgent movements now and then, but the ordinary citizens had no control over the political machinery except in a very few districts. There were, however, plenty of good men in politics, men who either came from districts where there was popular control, or who represented a genuine aspiration towards good citizenship on the part of some boss or group of bosses, or else who had been nominated frankly for reasons of expediency by bosses whose attitude toward good citizenship was at best one of Galio-like indifference.

At the time when I was nominated for Governor, as later when Mr. Hughes was nominated and renominated, there was no possibility of securing the nomination unless the bosses permitted it. In each case the bosses, the machine leaders, took a man for whom they did not care because he was the only man with whom they could win. In the case of Mr. Hughes there was of course also the fact of pressure from the national administration. But the bosses were never overcome in a fair fight, when they had made up their minds to fight, until the Saratoga convention in 1910, when Mr. Stimson was nominated.

Senator Platt had the same inborn capacity for the kind of politics which he liked that many big Wall street men have shown for not wholly dissimilar types of finance. It was his chief interest, and he applied himself to it unremittingly. He handled his private business successfully; but it was politics in which he was absorbed, and he concerned himself therewith every day in the year. He had built up an excellent system of organization, and the necessary funds came from corporations and men of wealth who contributed as I have described before. The majority of the men with a natural capacity for organization leadership of the type which has generally been prevalent in New York politics turned to Senator Platt as their natural chief and helped build up the organization, until under his leadership it became more powerful and in a position of greater control than any other Republican machine in the country, excepting Pennsylvania. The Democratic machines in some of the big cities, as in New York and Boston, and the country Democratic machine of New York under David B. Hill, were probably even more efficient, representing an even more complete mastery by the bosses, and an even greater degree of drilled obedience among the henchmen.



"Mr. Croker was the boss of Tammany Hall. My object was to make the people understand that it was Croker and not the nominal candidate who was my real opponent; that the choice lay between Croker and myself."



"Mr. Quigg spoke very frankly to me, stating that he earnestly desired to see me nominated and believed that the great body of Republican voters in the State so desired.

It would be an entire mistake to suppose that Mr. Platt's lientenants were either all bad men or all influenced by unworthy motives. He was constantly doing favors for men. He had won the gratitude of many good men. In the country districts, especially, there were many places where his machine included the majority of the best citizens, the leading and substantial citizens, among the inhabitants. Some of his strongest and most efficient lieutenants were disinterested men of high character.

There had always been a good deal of opposition to Mr. Platt and the machine, but the leadership of this opposition was apt to be found only among those whom Abraham Lincoln called the "silk stockings," and much of it excited almost as much derision among the plain people as the machine itself excited anger or dislike. Very many of Mr. Platt's opponents really disliked him and his methods for esthetic rather than for moral reasons, and the bulk of the people half-consciously felt this and refused to submit to their leadership. The men who opposed him in this manner were good citizens according to their lights, prominent in the social clubs and in philanthropic circles, men of means and often men of business standing. They disliked coarse and vulgar politicians, and they sincerely reprobated all the shortcomings that were recognized by, and were offensive to, people of their own caste. They had not the slightest understanding of the needs, interests, ways of thought, and convictions of the average small man; and the small man felt this, although he could not express it, and sensed that they were really not concerned with his welfare, and that they did not offer him anything materially better from his point of view than the machine.

When reformers of this type attempted to oppose Mr. Platt, they usually put up either some rather inefficient, well-meaning person, who bathed every day, and didn't steal, but whose only good point was "respectability," and who knew nothing of the great fundamental questions looming before us; or else they put up some big business man or corporation lawyer who was wedded to the gross wrong and injustice of our economic system, and who neither by personality nor by programme gave the ordinary plain people any belief that there was promise of vital good to them in the change. The correctness of their view was proved by the fact that as soon as fundamental economic and social reforms were at stake the esthetic, as distinguished from the genuinely moral, reformers for the most part sided with the bosses against the people.

"The money was simply put into Mr. Platt's hands and treated by him as in the campaign chest. Then he distributed it in the districts where it was most needed by the candidates and organization leaders. Ordinarily no pledge was required from the latter to the bosses, any more than it was required by the business men from Mr. Platt or his lieutenants. No pledge was needed. It was all a 'gentleman's understanding.' As the Senator once said to me, if a man's character was such that it was necessary to get a promise from him, it was clear proof that his character was such that the promise would not be worth anything after it was made."

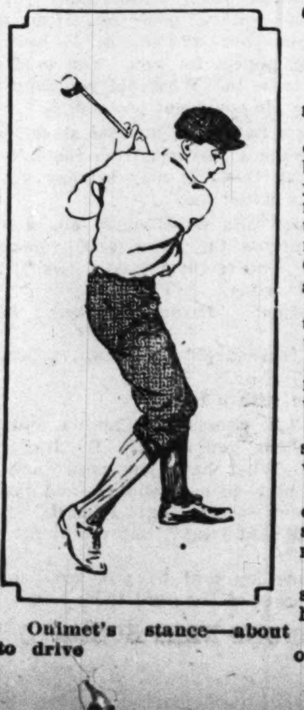
NEXT WEEK

"When I became Governor," Theodore Roosevelt relates in next Sunday's chapter of his autobiography, "the people accepted and practiced in a matter-of-course way, things which they would not now tolerate."

The author confesses his inability to have matched Senator Platt and his machine men on their own ground, or to have built up a personal machine rivaling theirs. The determination came to him then to go over the heads of the bosses to the voters themselves, "to the men who, if waked up, would be able to impose their will on their representatives."

"Mother's Cooking" and Freak "Grip" Won Golf Championship

Young Ouimet Shows How He Holds His Driver and Addresses the Ball When Playing Matches.



Ouimet's stance—about to drive

"A FREAK grip and my mother's cooking won the open golf championship."

This is the unexpected explanation given by Francis Ouimet, 20-year-old golf champion, for his recent victory at the international tournament over the Country Club course at Brookline, Mass.

"Talk about training tables!" he says enthusiastically. "There isn't an athlete in the country who has better fare than I. My mother is the best cook in the world.

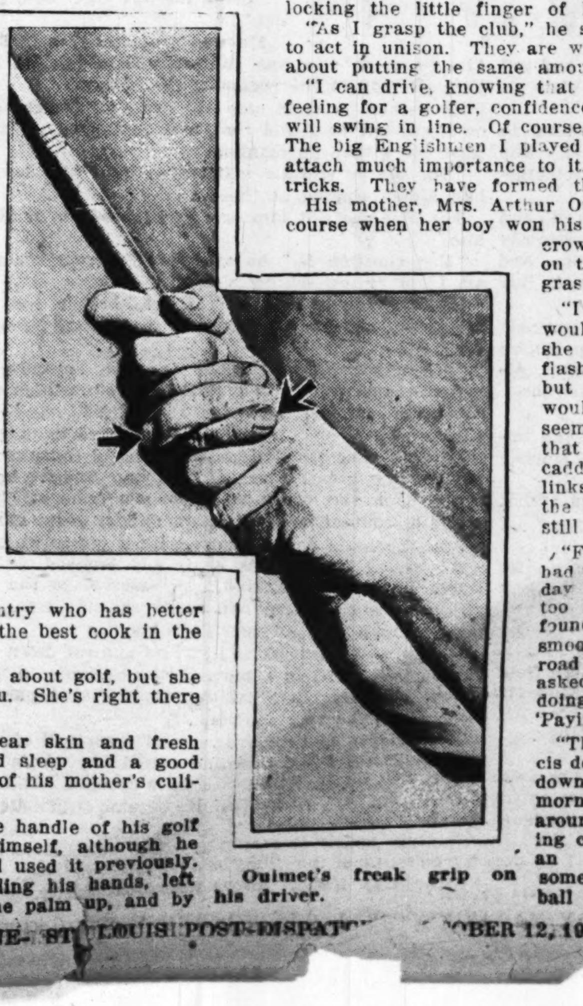
"She may not know much about golf, but she shines in managing my menu. She's right there with the 'eats.'"

The young champion's clear skin and fresh complexion, telling of sound sleep and a good stomach, are eloquent proof of his mother's culinary skill.

Ouimet's freak grip on the handle of his golf sticks was discovered by himself, although he has since learned others had used it previously. He illustrates it by extending his hands, left one palm down and right one palm up, and by locking the little finger of his right hand under the first finger of his left.

"As I grasp the club," he says, "my hands are interlocked and are forced to act in unison. They are working together. There is no need to worry about putting the same amount of energy into each hand.

"I can drive, knowing that I can use every bit of energy. That is a great feeling for a golfer, confidence that no matter how hard he swings, his club will swing in line. Of course, the interlocked stroke is difficult to acquire. The big Englishmen I played with did not use it, and I do not think they attach much importance to it. That is because they are too old to learn new tricks. They have formed their golf character, so to speak."



Ouimet's freak grip on his driver.

His mother, Mrs. Arthur Ouimet, a simple, gray-haired woman, was on the course when her boy won his world-famous victory, and pressing through the crowd which bore him on their shoulders grasped his hand.

"I knew Francis would win some day," she says, her eyes flashing with pride, "but I did not think it would be so soon. It seems only yesterday that he was a little boy, caddying over the same links on which he beat the Englishmen. He is still only a boy to me.

"Francis has always had the golf fever. One day when he was still too young to caddy I found him tapping a smooth stone along the road with a stick. I asked him what he was doing, and he said 'Paying goff.'

"The first thing Francis does when he comes down to breakfast in the morning is to stand around while I'm making coffee, chopping at an imaginary, and sometimes a real, golf ball with a putter."

Camilla Payne tells Hugo of a mysterious plot in which Louis Ravengar and Francis Tudor Seem to be involved . . .

me, Hugo, to have 'limited' put after my name? Me, limited!"

"Then," said the lawyer slowly, "I am to understand you are not willing"——

"My friend," Hugo replied, dropping into his chair, "I would sooner see the whole blessed place fall like the Bastile than see it 'limited.'"

Polycarp rose in his turn.

"My clients," he remarked in a peculiar tone, "had set their minds on this affair."

"For once, in a way, your clients will be disappointed," said Hugo.

"What do you mean—'for once, in a way'?"

"Who are your clients, Mr. Polycarp?"

"Since the offer is rejected, it would be useless to divulge their names."

"I will tell you, then," said Hugo. "Your client—for there is only one—is Louis Ravengar. I saw it stated in a paper the other day that Louis Ravengar had successfully floated 39 companies with a total capitalization of thirty millions. But my scalp will not be added to his collection."

"I shall not disclose the identity of my clients," Mr. Polycarp minced. "But, speaking of Mr. Ravengar, I have noticed that what he wants he gets. The manner in which the United Coal Co., Limited, was brought to flotation by him in the teeth of the opposition of the proprietors, was really most interesting."

"You mean to warn me that there are ways of compelling a private concern to become public and joint stock?"

"Not at all, Mr. Hugo. I am incapable of such a hint. I am sure nothing and nobody could force you against your will. I was only mentioning the case of the coal company. I could mention others."

"Don't trouble, my dear sir. Convey my decision to Louis Ravengar, and give him my compliments. We are old acquaintances."

"You are?" The solicitor seemed astonished in his imperturbable way.

"We are."

"I will convey your decision to my clients."

Accepting a cigar, Mr. Polycarp departed.

Without giving himself time to think, Hugo went straight to Department 42, and direct to the artist in hats. She stood pale and deferential to receive him. The heat was worse than ever.

"Your name is Payne, I think?" he began. (He well knew her name was Payne.)

"Yes, sir.

Other employes in the trying-on room looked furtively around.

"About half past eleven an old gentleman, with white mustache, came into this room, Miss Payne. You remember?"

"Yes, sir."

"What did he want?"

"He was inquiring about a hat, sir," she hurriedly answered.

"For a lady?"

"Yes, sir."

"Thank you."

And he hastened back to his central office, and breathed a sigh. "I have actually spoken to her," he murmured. "How charming her voice is!"

But Miss Payne's physical condition desolated him. If she was so obviously exhausted at 12:30, what would she be like at the day's end?

"I've got it!" he cried.

He seized a pen and wrote: "Notice—The public is respectfully informed that this establishment will close today at 2 o'clock."

He rang a bell and a messenger appeared.

"Take this to the printing office instantly and tell Mr. Waugh it must be posted throughout the place in half an hour.

Shortly after 2 o'clock Sloane street was amazed to witness the exodus of the three thousand odd. The closure was attributed to a whim of Hugo's for celebrating some obscure anniversary in his life.

Many hundreds of persons were inconvenienced, and the internal economy of scores of polite homes seriously deranged. The evening papers found a paragraph. And Hugo lost perhaps a hundred and fifty pounds net. But Hugo was happy and he was expectant.

At 10 o'clock that night a youngish man, extremely like Simon Shawn, was brought by Simon into Hugo's presence under the dome. This was Simon's brother, Albert Shawn, a member of Hugo's private detective force.

"Sit down," said Hugo. "Well?"

"I reckon you've heard, sir," Albert Shawn began impassively, "the yarn that's going all round the stores."

"I have not."

"Everyone's whispering," said Albert Shawn, "that Mr. Hugo has taken a kind of fancy to Miss Payne."

Hugo restrained himself.

"Heavens!" he exclaimed, with a clever affectation of lightness, "what next? I've only spoken to the chit once."

"Don't I know it, sir!"

"Enough of that! What have you to report?"

"Miss Payne left at 2:15, whipped round to the flats' entrance, took the lift to the top floor, went into Mr. Francis Tudor's flat?"

"What's that you say? Whose flat?" cried Hugo.

"Mr. Francis Tudor's, sir."

Mr. Tudor was famous as the tenant of the suite rented at two thousand a year; he had a reputation for being artistic, sybaritic, and something of importance in the inner ring of the city.

"Ah!" said Hugo. "Perhaps she is a friend of one of Mr. Tudor's"——

"Servants," he was about to say, but the idea of Miss Payne being on terms of equality with a menial was not pleasant to him, and he stopped.

"No, sir," said Albert Shawn, unmoved. "She is not, because Mr. Tudor shunted out all his servants soon afterward. Miss Payne was shown into his study. She had her tea there and her dinner. The Hugo half-guinea dinner was ordered late by telephone for two persons and rushed up at 8 o'clock."

"I wonder Mr. Tudor didn't order an orchestra with the dinner," said Hugo grimly. It was a sublime effort on his part to be his natural self.

"I waited for Miss Payne to leave," continued Albert Shawn. "That's why I'm so late."

"And what time did she leave?"

"She hasn't left," said Albert Shawn.

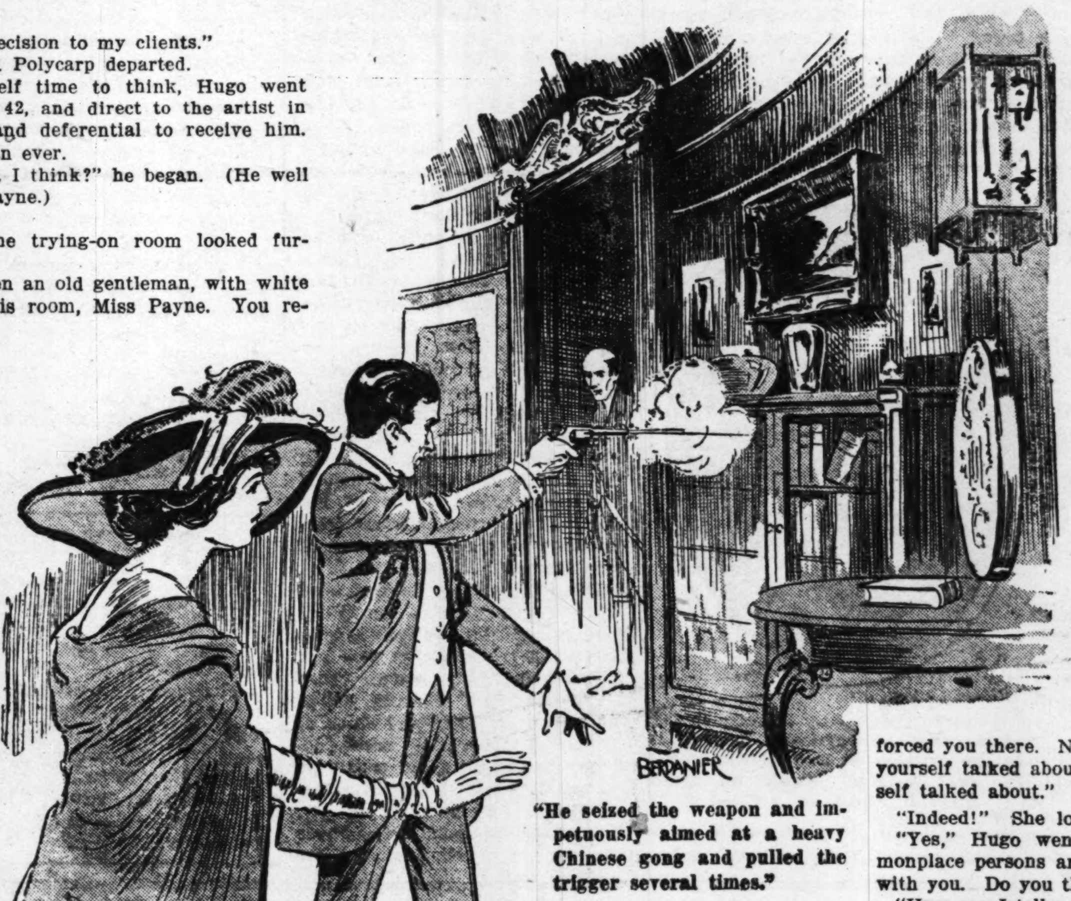
CHAPTER IV.

Camilla.

HUGO dismissed Albert, with orders to continue his vigil, and then he rang for Simon.

"Do you think I might have some tea?" he asked.

"I am disposed to think you might, sir," said Simon the cellarer. "It is eight days since you indulged after dinner."



"He seized the weapon and impetuously aimed at a heavy Chinese gong and pulled the trigger several times."

"Bring me one cup, then, poured out."

He was profoundly disturbed by Albert's news. He was, in fact, miserable. He had a physical pain in the region of the heart.

He wished he could step off love as one steps off an omnibus, but he found that love resembled an express train more than an omnibus.

"Can she be secretly married to him?" he demanded half aloud, sipping at the tea.

The idea soothed him exactly as much as it alarmed him.

"The question is," he murmured angrily, "am I or am I not an ass—at my age?"

He felt vaguely that he was not, that he was rather a splendid and Byronic figure in the grip of tremendous emotions.

Having regretfully finished the tea, he unlocked a bookcase and picked out at random a volume of Boswell's "Johnson." It was the modern Oxford edition—the only edition worthy of a true amateur—bound by Riviere.

Like all wise and lettered men, Hugo consulted Boswell in the grave crises of life, and tonight he happened upon the venerable Johnson's remark: "Sir, I would be content to spend the remainder of my existence driving about in a post-chaise with a pretty woman."

He leaned back in his chair and laughed. "In the whole history of mankind," he asserted to the dome, "there have only been two really sensible men. Solomon was one, and Johnson the other."

He restored the book to its place and sat down to the piano player, and in a moment the overture to "Tannhauser," that sublime failure to prove that passion is folly, filled the vast apartment.

The rushing violin passages, and every call of Aphrodite, intoxicated his soul and raised his spirits till he knew with the certainty of a fully aroused instinct that Camilla Payne must be his. He became optimistic on all points."

"A lady insists on seeing you, sir," said Simon Shawn, intruding upon the "Pilgrim's Chant."

"She may insist," Hugo answered lightly. "But it all depends who she is. I'm"——

He stopped, for the insisting lady had entered.

It was Camilla.

He jumped up. Never before in his career had been so astounded, staggered, charmed, enchanted, d zled and completely silenced.

"Miss Payne?" he gasped, after a prolonged pause.

Simon Shawn effaced himself.

"Yes, Mr. Hugo."

"Won't you sit down?"

The singular prevalence of beautiful women in E gland is only appreciated properly by Englishmen w have lived abroad, and these alone know also that no other country is beauty wasted by women as it wasted in England.

Camilla was beautiful, and supremely beautiful; was tall, well and generously formed, graceful, fair, w fine eyes and fine dark chestnut hair; her absolute regular features had the proud Tennysonian cast.

Hugo felt that he had never seen this woman befo

And he might have been excused for feeling so; instead of the black alpaca, Camilla now wore a simp but effectively charming toilette such as "Hugo's" c ated and sold to women for the rapture of men in su mer twilights, and over the white dress was thrown very rich pearl-tinted opera cloak, which only part concealed the curves of her shoulders, and poised asla on the glistening coiffure was the identical blue h with its wide brim that had visited the dome 17 hou before. The total effect was calculated, perfect, ove whelming.

"I'm sorry to disturb you, Mr. Hugo," said Camill throwing back her cloak on the left side with a fi gesture, "but I am in need of your assistance."

"Yes?" Hugo whispered, seating himself.

She had a low voice, rare in a blonde, and it thrille him. And she was so near him in the great chamber!

"I want you to tell me what plot I am in the mids of. What is the web that has begun to surround me?"

"Plot?" stammered Hug "Web?"

Her eyes flashed scrutinizingl on his face.

"You have a kind heart," sh said; "everybody can see that. B frank. Do you know," she aske in a different tone, "or don't yo that you spoke very gruffly to m this morning?"

"Miss Payne," he began, "I a sure you"——

"I thought perhaps you didn know," she smiled calmly. "But you did speak very gruffly. No I have taken my courage in bot hands in order to come to you t night. I may have lost my situ tion through it—I can't tell Whether I have lost my situatio or not, I appeal to you for candor."

"Miss Payne," said Hugo, "it di tresses me to hear you speak of 'situation.'"

"And why?"

"You know why," he answered "A woman as distinguished as yo are must be perfectly well awar how distinguished she is, and pe fectly capable, let me add, of hiding her distinction from the commo crowd. For what purpose of you own you came into my shop, can't guess. But necessity neve forced you there. No doubt you meant to avoid gettin yourself talked about; nevertheless, you have got your self talked about."

"Indeed!" She looked at him sideways.

"Yes," Hugo went on; "several thousands of com monplace persons are saying that I have fallen in lov with you. Do you think it's true, this rumor?"

"How can I tell you?" said she.

"Well, it is true!" he cried. "It's doubly and treb true! It's the greatest truth in the world at the pres ent moment. It is one of those truths that a believe can't keep to himself."

He paused, expectant.

"Then, why," she demanded firmly, with a desolatin smile—"why do you have me followed by your privat detective?"

"The fact is, Miss Payne," he said boldly, sitting dow as soon as he had invented the solution of the difficulty "you will not deny that this afternoon and this evenin you have been in a position of some slight delicacy What your relations are with Mr. Francis Tudor I hav never sought to inquire, but I have always doubted th bona fides of Mr. Francis Tudor. And today I hav simply—if I may say so—watched over you. If my ma has been clumsy I beg your forgiveness. I beg you to believe in my deep respect for you. You used th word 'plot' when you came in. What did you refer to If Mr. Tudor has"—— He could not proceed.

"As I left Mr. Tudor's flat a few minutes since," sa Camilla quietly, producing a revolver from the folds her cloak, "I picked up this. It may or may not loaded. Perhaps you can tell me."

He seized the weapon and impetuously aimed at heavy Chinese gong across the room, and pulled trigger several times. The revolver spoke noisily, a the gong sounded and swung.

"You see!" he exclaimed. "Pardon the din. I did without thinking."

"Did you call, sir?" asked Simon Shawn, appearing in the doorway.

Hugo extirpated him with a look.

"How cool you are!" he resumed to Camilla, and laid down the revolver. "No, you aren't! By Jove, you aren't! What is it? What have you been through What is this plot? A plot—in my building—and agains you! Tell me everything—everything! I insist."

"Shall you believe all that I say?" she ventured.

"Yes," he said; "all."

He saw with intense joy that he was going to b friendly with her. It seemed too good to be true.

NOW GET A MINARET GOWN!

DO THEY MEAN HOOPSKIRTS AGAIN?

hief Purpose of the New Skirt Is to Stand Out Away From the Figure—Wired Edge of the Garment Is Just a Hint of the Hoop of Our Grandmothers.

ARE we going back, back, back, to the hoop skirt?

Is the wired edge of the "lamp-shade skirt" but the first hoop of that last century atrocity which Fashion is trying to slip over our heads before we are aware of her intentions?

The wired tunic which Paul Poiret introduced ever so utiously a number of seasons ago, is accepted today s THE novelty of the season. In all its variation it is he strongest influence, the distinguishing feature of e new season's styles.

What was at first called the "lamp-shade" skirt has me to be called the "Minaret," after the opera by that me, now the vogue in Paris and Vienna. Minaret, wever, is a term appropriated by Leon Bakst, that her far-famed creator of fashion, to classify a general pe of gowns in which his weird fancy is reveling.

"The character of the minaret is less in its cut than color," says Bakst. "A perfect riot of primary colors, tened with over draperies of tinted chiffons, with the glint and sparkle of beads and jewels—these are the stuffs out of which I evolve the minaret," he adds.

And indeed Paul Poiret willingly attributes his lamp-shade skirt to the Oriental source of Bakst's Arabian Nights' dreams.

"The inspiration came to me from some old Persian prints," the artist has said. Describing his favorite model of the moment, said he:

"I am chiefly interested in the minaret gown, or, as some call it, the lamp shade. My models for the coming season are all on the lines of the minaret, and I hope and believe it will be THE costume. The Oriental feeling which pervades our present modes dominates this costume. The skirt is very, very full and gathered in around the bottom. It has the baggy fullness and effect of harem trousers, whether bifurcated or not. The overskirt, its novel features, must stand quite away from the knees."

And, sure enough, gowns for street, evening and home wear, gowns for dressy occasions or for negligee follow the lines here described by this authority to a marked degree. On this page are sketched an out-of-doors toilette, an evening and a house gown, picturing adaptations of the tunic with stiffened outstanding edge, from celebrated couturiers. If the overskirts of these gowns are not actually wired or stiffened with featherbone they are given a semi-rigid edge with a metallic line of rhinestone beads, crystal fringe or heavy fur. Often, too, when maline, tulle or other crisp fabric is used, it is gathered very full and stands out without need of wiring.

Made of transparent material, fringed and all, the new overskirt is indeed a veritable lamp shade. You may give it an Oriental name, ascribe it to Eastern origin and associate it with Parisian chic, but the fact remains that the chief purpose of the new skirt is to stand out away from the figure. Such likewise was the chief aim of the hoopskirt of other days. No family album dating back far enough will dispute the evidence that some costumes did achieve that ambition.

If Fashion ever followed reason, consequence and other laws of history, one would, with the lamp-shade skirt as a basis, be safe in predicting reversion to hoopskirts very shortly. However, as Paul Poiret, who ought to know, says:

"One cannot tell what the next mode will be, for mode is a feeling, not a theory."

The Hat Without a Feather

A REVOLUTION has taken place in the millinery world—the feather has been banished. And European houses are now working night and day in the effort to cope with the hurried demand from America for creations which are beautiful though featherless.

The designs are extremely chic. One in particular shows a very new and beautiful effect in the raised embroidered flowers which cover the hat, the relief in this case being afforded by the upstanding bow of plain silk. Another exhibits the rich brocaded ribbon which is so popular at present. One great fashion house, even before the issue of the startling decree, had declared in favor of flowers for fall and winter wear. One of these new models displays a double row of large daisies on a long and gracefully curved brim.

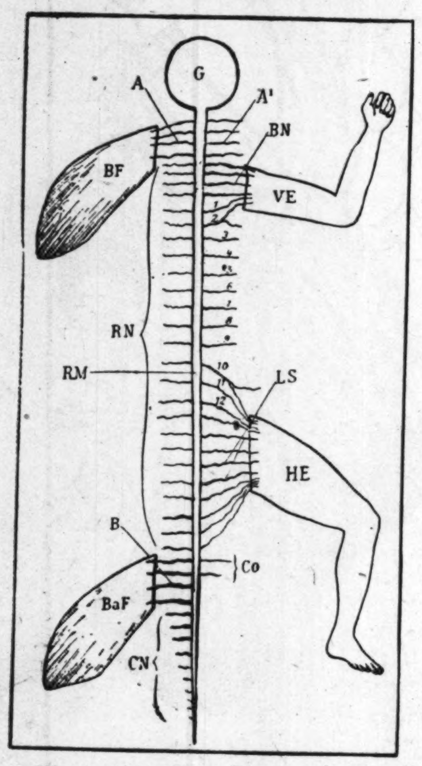
THINGS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

WHERE WE GET OUR ARMS AND LEGS

THE evolutionist sees through and behind all of our limbs and features, tracing them to their origin. He tells us that there is one great model running all through the vertebrates, those animals with a backbone, and he points out precisely when each organ or member first appeared. The brain of which we are so proud is only an expansion of the end of the spinal cord, as may be seen in the earthworm. The ear first comes into real activity in the shark, and there is some individual animal in which the earliest traces of each and every organ may be found.

When we come to the arms and legs as found in man, no one is apt to think of the fins of a fish, but just as surely as you have an arm and a leg as surely are there limbs to be traced back to the fore and hind fins of the fish.

There has been a long process of adjustment and alteration of position, brought about gradually in the ascending scale of animal life, but when passing directly from the fish to the man you can easily see what this process is. In order to give more play to the neck and its muscles and nerves the arm has been moved downward, occupying a position quite different from that of the fore fin in the fish. But nature has done her work well, adapting and changing a each stage of progress until there is room for all the necessary nerves, and the arm is in a relatively better position for use than if it were further up on the trunk.



Illustrating the change of spinal nerves and alteration of position of the limbs from fish to man. On the left, the fish; on the right, man. A nerves of chest in fish becoming A1 nerves of neck in man. B nerves of back in BaF; BN nerves of upper extremity in man; CN tail nerves in fish; CO cocoyx nerves in man; G brain, HE leg in man; LS nerves of human leg; RM spinal cord; RN body-nerves of fish; 1-12 intercostal nerves in man; BF fore fin of fish; VE arm of man.

The process of concentration or drawing towards the center of the body appears also in the legs, which are much nearer the stomach than are the back fins of the fish. With the going on all fours animals needed to have their supporting limbs nearer the center of gravity, and nature made the necessary changes. In the fish the tail is an important factor in locomotion, and requires the aid of the side fins, but as the tail ceases to play any part in the forward movement of the animal, and the legs assume their necessary part in the work, they move forward, lengthen and become real legs.

The nerves and muscles are adapted to all of these changes as they take place, and in this way the fins of the fish have become our legs and arms,

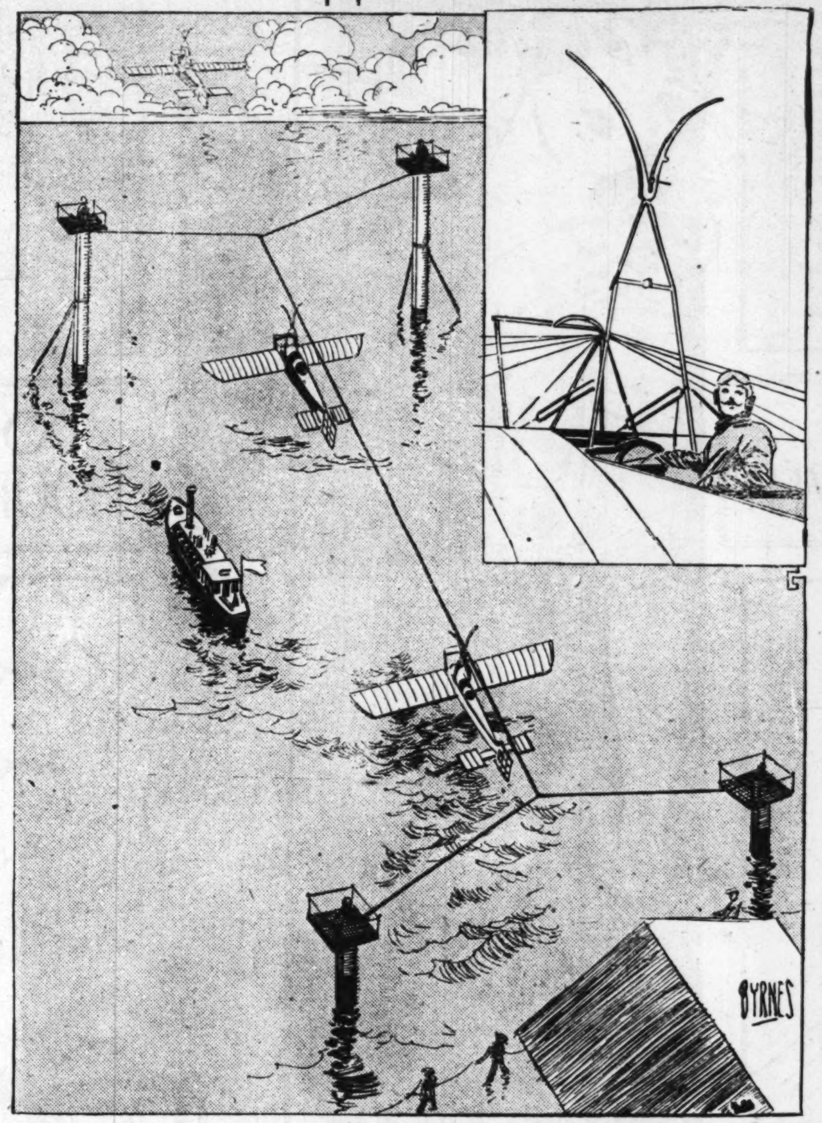
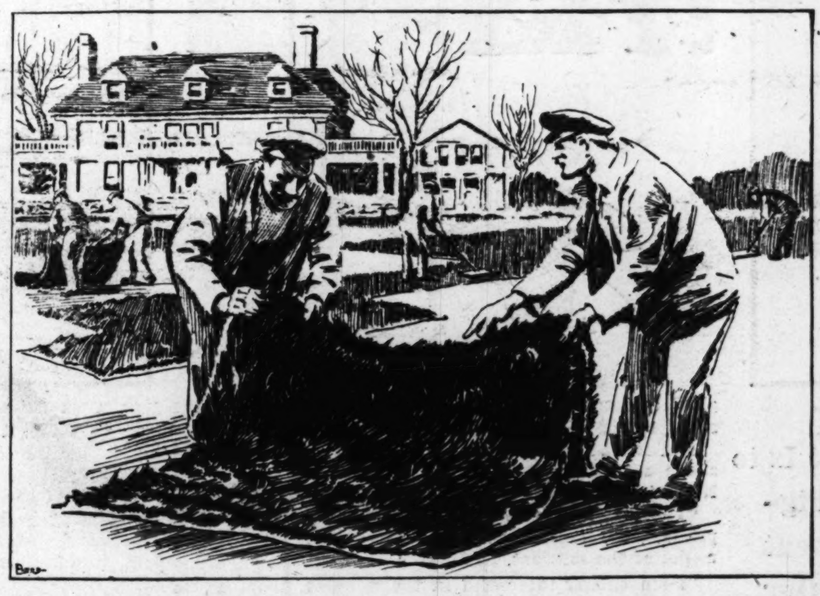
MATCHES have not been used for a hundred years yet. It was in 1833 that Isaac Holden of London found out the secret of putting the sulphur of the igniting mixture directly on the wood, and the match was made. They were called Lucifer matches at first, because the word while applied usually to Satan, really means light bringer, from the Latin lux light and fero to bring.

Bleriot's Aeroplane Launching Apparatus



BLERIOT'S aeroplane launching apparatus has been sucessfully tested on land. The device consists of a main cable suspended between two others attached to posts, the outer ones being considerably taller than the shore posts. The aeroplane is fitted with a light but strong arm with a ratchet catch and a forked top. To launch the aeroplane the propeller is set going, and the machine runs along the cable until sufficient impetus is gained for the pilot to release a catch by means of a small hand lever, and he then soars away. On returning, the pilot steers his machine under the cable, which is guided into the ratchet catch by the forks and forced into the notch, which shuts with a snap, leaving the machine hanging on the center cable. By the aid of stout booms, as depicted, this or a similar device could be fitted up at any coastal station and would make the launching or landing of machines no longer difficult, dangerous and expensive.

Portable Lawn Made of Grass Carpet



LIVING-GRASS carpets that can be used as table covers, coats, or for making temporary or permanent lawns are now manufactured in England, says Popular Mechanics. They are really living carpets, for the grass with which they are covered continues to grow in whatever place or use the carpet is put. To make them, millions of grass seeds are sown on a strip of carpet in a greenhouse and allowed to sprout and grow. When the grass has taken root, the carpet can be handled like a rug. If a temporary lawn is desired, the ground is rolled and the carpet is laid down in strips; afterward it can be taken up and used elsewhere. When it is allowed to remain in one place, it takes root and forms a beautiful lawn. An entire lawn can be laid in a day.

MEDICINE ON THE TOOTHBRUSH

DR. D. W. STEVENSON of Richmond, Ind., has a novel method of administering tuberculin to patients who have tuberculous laryngitis, chronic middle ear disease and other such diseases. He makes them brush their teeth every morning with a dose of tuberculin on their tooth brush; and this dose is one thousand times as strong as that ordinarily given by injection. He uses the same method with a catarrhal vaccine for acute coryza (cold in the head), rhinitis, tonsilitis and mastoid inflammations. He reports to the Indiana State Medical Association Journal that the vaccine is largely absorbed in the mouth and that the results are excellent.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

STARCH for laces should be thicker and used hotter than for linens. After washing your laces well and drying them dip them into the thick, hot starch, so that every part touches. Then wring out and stretch smooth on a piece of linen, roll them up together, and let them stand for about half an hour, when they are dry enough to iron.

INFANTS cannot sleep too long, but may be deprived of needed rest if placed in the light or awakened by noises. Nothing so unnerves the child as lack of rest, and the health may be permanently ruined if it does not sleep the 14 hours or more that it should in fresh air.

THE child that is constantly indulged, who has every wish gratified as soon as expressed, is sure to be a very miserable child and man. It thinks that the world revolves around it, and when at school or in the world it finds that it must both give and take it is made utterly wretched. The spoiled child is not only a terror to all others, but most painful to itself.

ORGANIC disease is so called in cases where the structure of the organ has become so affected as to alter its character. If the liver hardens or the kidneys decay this is organic trouble. The doctors call it a functional disease when the functions or any organ are deranged, that is, do not work normally, when, for instance, the liver pours its secretions into the system too freely, or the kidneys, through a cold, do not remove the impurities from the system.

NEW and ODD THINGS in SCIENCE

THERE ARE ELEVEN KINDS OF MIND IN THESE UNITED STATES

THE normal man is by no means a fixed quantity or quality. The scientists show us that there are many degrees of sanity, and that the abnormal may run above or below what we call the ordinary men and women.

For the purpose of study no less than eleven "Orders of Brain" have been laid down, and every one of us belongs to one of these classes.

The largest class of all is the average man, constituting four-fifths of the population, in round figures some seventy-two million of the ninety-two million population of the United States in 1910, when the last census was taken. In this class are the laborers, the trades, manufacturers, the great middle class, which is the mental, moral and physical backbone of the community, for it is always normal, never loses the sense of perspective, and while conservative is safe. It progresses slowly, but steadily, but it does progress and its voice is always right, or as we have it "The voice of the people is the voice of God." Especially in the United States do we believe investigators of Europe have arrived at the same conclusion.

The next order of men are those showing marked talent in every direction, and there are probably eight million of these in the United States. They "have more brains" we say, and they show it by greater initiative and keener insight. To this class belong the social and political leaders, the professors, the heads of large concerns, great executive heads.

Then comes the lesser genius, probably 200,000 in the United States, who is full of originality and ideas, often impractical, but really supplying those of the second order with the ideas out of which they make fortunes. He scorns these "practical" men and they return the compliment, but help themselves to his ideas.

The real genius comes next, and there is possibly one out of a million—the Edisons, Bells, Westinghouses. He is at the top of the scale of mentality, and is altogether inexplicable. But he stands supreme.

We now go down the scale and find a class equal in number to the lesser genius, probably 200,000, which includes the crank, the markedly eccentric, even the anarchist. He is just verging upon the irresponsible, for while considered liable by the law, he permits his ideas to run away with him, and often comes under condemnation by the law. This class is unconventional, a trial to its friends and do either good or harm, as conditions permit.

The sixth order of mind is a large one. Here are probably eight million of our citizens, men and women, below the average in intellect and will power. Under the best conditions they may be redeemed and become useful members of society, but left to themselves, as is usually the case, they recruit the ranks of the tramps, the paupers and even drift into the lower criminal class. The men and women of this order actually need human help and suggestion, and with sympathy may be saved.

The next five classes are considered not really sane before the law, and the unsoundness of mind in them is graded, although the law does not always act in accord with science in their treatment. There is brain defect or brain disease in all of them.

Those belonging to the seventh class are men and women who have occasional attacks of mental unsoundness, but, with proper medical care, can be saved and brought into one of the higher classes. They may be clever and capable of doing good work between attacks, and when cured. There are at least 200,000 of these in the United States, many belonging to the poorer classes and, therefore, most liable not to receive proper medical care.

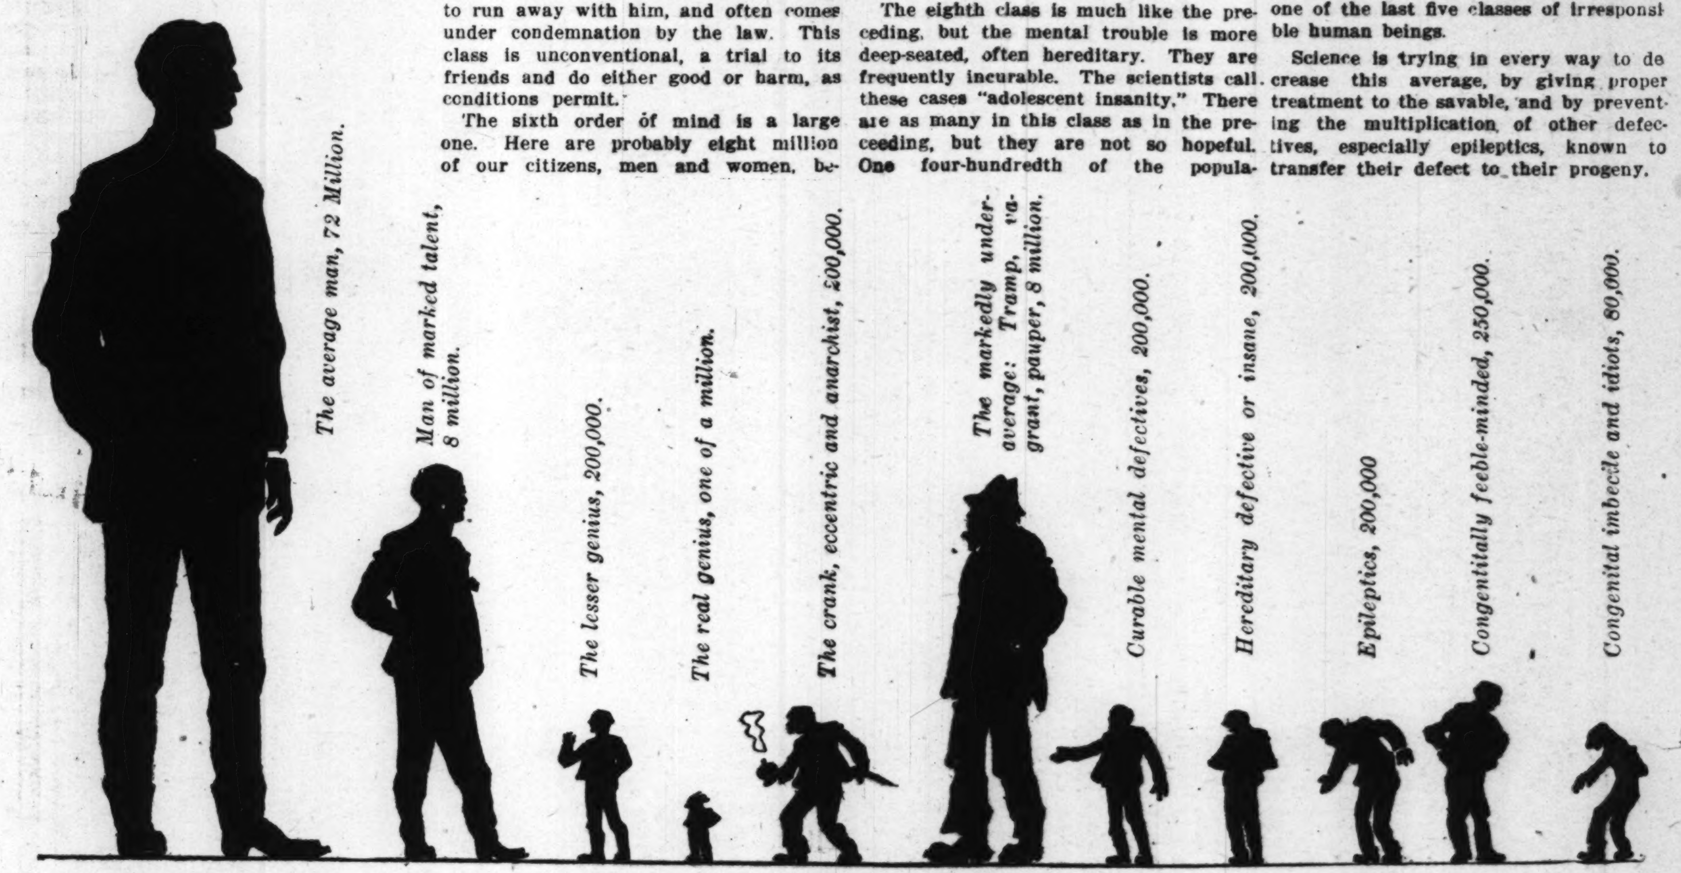
The eighth class is much like the preceding, but the mental trouble is more deep-seated, often hereditary. They are frequently incurable. The scientists call these cases "adolescent insanity." There are as many in this class as in the preceding, but they are not so hopeful. One four-hundredth of the population fall in this order of defective brain.

The ninth class is epileptic, made so from a real disease of the brain. Many are able to work more or less well between attacks, but at their worst they are totally irresponsible and dangerous.

The congenitally weak-minded form the next lower order of mind, numbering at least 250,000 in the United States. They may be able to do simple work, but really require special care either in state or private institutions. It seems a pity, but one out of every 350 of the population falls in this class. The lowest class of mental defectives is that of the worst congenital imbeciles and the idiots who are entirely helpless, mindless and usually untrainable. They are a dead loss to society and only a drag upon their unfortunate relatives. Fortunately only about one in every eleven hundred belongs to this class, making the total for the United States about eighty thousand although these figures are only approximate.

The law of averages is remarkably proved in the classification of orders of mind, and if an investigation be made in any community it will be found that one out of every hundred belongs to some one of the last five classes of irresponsible human beings.

Science is trying in every way to decrease this average, by giving proper treatment to the savable, and by preventing the multiplication of other defectives, especially epileptics, known to transfer their defect to their progeny.



The average man, 72 Million.
Man of marked talent, 8 million.
The lesser genius, 200,000.
The real genius, one of a million.
The crank, eccentric and anarchist, 200,000.
The markedly under-average: Tramp, vagrant, pauper, 8 million.
Curable mental defectives, 200,000.
Hereditary defective or insane, 200,000.
Epileptics, 200,000
Congenitally feeble-minded, 250,000.
Congenital imbecile and idiots, 80,000.

The eleven kinds of mind in the United States.

BLOOD PRESSURE TESTS SHOW THE STATE OF YOUR HEALTH

APPENDICITIS is all out of style now. If you wish to be the rage you must have something wrong with the blood pressure, for that is what the physicians are taking up and dwelling upon at great length. Even the insurance companies are examining the blood pressure as the sure indication of good or ill health, and they are wise in their generation.

The really surprising part of the matter is that derangement of the blood pressure was not taken up many years ago, and it is explicable only upon the ground that the doctors themselves did not know too much about it, and that they had no instruments for measuring it with accuracy.

To understand what is meant by the term we must know that the blood pressure depends upon the difference between the amount of blood pumped by the heart into one end of the arterial system and the amount leaving by the capillaries in any given time. Anyone can easily see that unless some means existed by which these two factors could be brought into proper relationship much mischief might be done. If the heart were to continue to pump in blood while the arterioles, or small arteries, were tightly contracted the heart would either become strained or a vessel would burst, as it does in apoplexy. But if the arterioles were dilated and the heart did not beat more actively in order to supply a larger amount of blood, the arteries would become empty and the pressure in them so low that the circulation through the various organs would be insufficient to keep up their activity, and the brain being especially sensitive, one would faint away.

The real balancing of the blood pressure is maintained by the nervous system, the chief regulator being in the medulla oblongata (just at the base of the brain), where the most important part of the vaso-motor center is located. By irritation of the roots of the vagus nerve, or of its trunks, or of its ends in the heart, the movements of the heart become slower and generally weaker. Any excessive tension in the blood vessels, involving as it does the blood supply of the medulla, acts as an irritant to the vagus center, puts the vagus nerve into action and slows the heart, thus preventing the tension from rising too high. Diminished pressure in the arterial system, on the other hand, lessens the normal stimulation of the vagus center, and then the vagus nerve acts less powerfully upon the heart, its beats become quicker and the pressure rises.

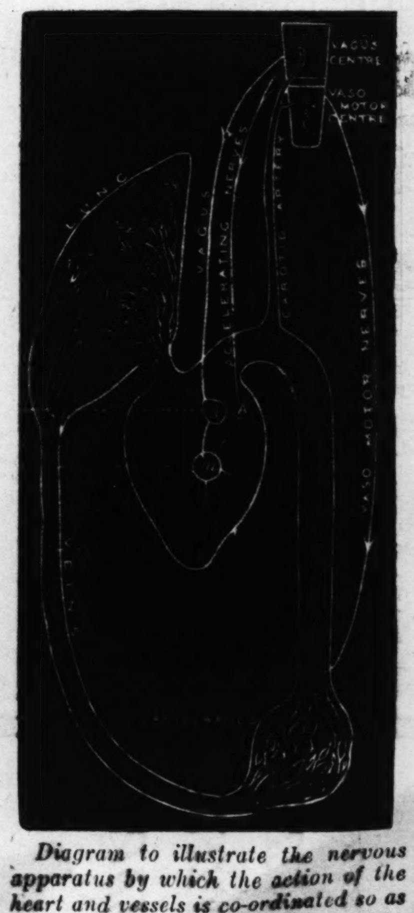


Diagram to illustrate the nervous apparatus by which the action of the heart and vessels is co-ordinated so as to maintain an equal blood pressure.

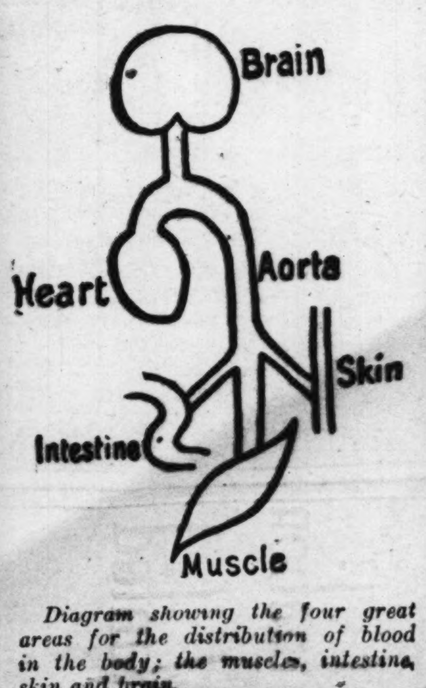

Diagram showing the four great areas for the distribution of blood in the body; the muscles, intestine, skin and brain.

The four largest vascular districts in the body are those of the splanchnic area (intestinal), the muscles, the brain and the skin. The area of the intestines is more specially under the influence of the vaso-motor center. Any disturbance here, as from a stomach ache, greatly modifies the blood pressure. This area acts really as the regulator of blood pressure, and when the portal vein is tied, all of the blood in the body will collect in the vessels of the intestines and in the liver; so that, as a great physician has said, an "animal may be bled into its own veins."

It is easy to see how important a matter it is for the physician to know exactly how the blood pressure is in his patient's body, and so that he may do this with precision many instruments have been invented, but only of late years by which he can measure the pressure to a nicety.

These "sphygmographs" and other instruments for measuring arterial tension are becoming necessities in a physician's office, for a man or woman who comes in and complains of feeling badly, but seems to have nothing organically wrong, may be all wrong when tested as to blood pressure.

It is a great step forward for the real healing of humanity that so much attention is now being given to the troubles of the circulation, for it is the source of life to the organism, and if that is wrong all is wrong.
